Having passed through a winter long and wearisome and trying with long spells of cold, the residents of this part of the country have come to the stage that they are longing for spring.

The unexpected turn of weather conditions gave some hint of the suffering which must have taken place in so many parts of the world this winter both in the North American Continent and in Europe. In the Southern States the weather caused intense suffering as people never used to such conditions had to pass through a virtual winter. In Europe too the weather has been most severe as far south as the Black and Caspian Seas.

THE LITTLE BUT IMPORTANT POSTAGE STAMP

Britain will stage a stamp show at the New York World's Fair for the duration of that fair. Announcement has been made that the famous collection of stamps owned by His Majesty King George Sixth and also that of President Roosevelt are to be on view. Both the King and the President are energetic and enthusiastic stamp collectors.

The stamp is so little a thing and so common that one does not give it the attention it deserves. The first stamp was used in May 1840, one century ago.

The postage stamp was bound to come sooner or later. It came late in history of mankind but it came when most needed. Without it a vast mass of correspondence could not have developed.

The first label or stamp was due to an incident witnessed by Rowland Hill. The story relates how he saw a little child receive a letter for which she was unable to pay the postage, which sum could be paid either by the consignor or the consignee. Rowland Hill paid the sum as otherwise the letter would have to be returned to the post office and destroyed. At that time the postal fees were very heavy but by consideration of the fact that railways were then being first used for carrying Her Majesty's mails and that a cheapening of the rates would probably enormously increase the rate of letters the first adhesive label was put on sale at the price of one penny on May 1, 1840. This was the world famous Penny Black, which bore a profile of Queen Victoria.

The early stamp issues of the U.S.A. were not officially recognized by the government, the stamps being issued by the postmasters of certain cities to facilitate the prepayment of letters. In 1847 the U. S. postal department began to issue stamps. Early stamp-using countries were Brazil 1843, France 1849, New South Wales 1850, Canada 1851.

It is often said that in England prior to the 17th century we hear nothing of a post office and in the modern sense of that term as denoting a government department possessing the monopoly as to the carriage of letters the statement seems true enough, says Everyman's Encyclopedia. But correspondence between subjects as distinct from correspondence between states must have existed from the earliest times, and the only difficulty is to determine the precise mode of transportation before the state couriers both in England and other countries were permitted to carry correspondence along with public correspondence. The Close and Mesae Rolls, the wardrobe accounts of the Kings of England, royal proclamations and other records afford ample evidence of a regular rudimentary postal system for royal correspondence. The expenses of the establishment of nuncii, entrusted with the conveyance of letters, formed a large item in the charges of the royal households as early as the middle of the thirteenth century, and these payments may be traced through an almost unbroken series through the reigns following that of King John. The method of transmission could only have been by relays of men and horses mainly maintained under the superintendence of some government official. King Edward Fourth in 1481 established during the Scottish war a change of riders, twenty miles distant from each other who carried the letters two hundred miles in two days. Herodotus describes the same method as in use among the ancient Persians. Tablets of wax were delivered in some such way, it is believed, in ancient Rome.

By the year 1548 the transmission of the private correspondence of the subject by post horses had become a common practice for a statute that year set the rate at a penny a mile. It is believed the office of postmaster of England existed in the reign of King Henry Eighth. In 1635 a running post was established to run night and day between Edinburgh and London to "go thither and come back" in six days. London tried to set up its own post office in 1649 but the resolution of Commons thwarted this action. In the seventeenth century a Yorkshire attorney, John Hill, thought the Government monopoly was an infringement on farmers' rights and organized a postal service at half the government cost but nearly lost his life for his effort. The post office monopoly meant a revenue to the government and it enabled the government to control political agitators. In 1656 a postmaster - general of England and a comptroller were set up with monopoly of "horsing of all posts and persons riding in posts." In 1638 a metropolitan post was established by William Dockwra who carried and insured letters and parcels.

The coach did not enter largely into English life until the eighteenth century. In 1659 the first stage coach ran between London and Coventry. It was 1784 before the mail-coach system was introduced by John Palmer, M.P. for Bath to replace the post-boys who were employed up to that time. The post office vehemently opposed his suggestion but it was carried out.

Universal acceptance has met the idea of this little bit of paper which carries a letter or parcel as mail. A sticker, that is what the stamp is. It bears an effigy of a monarch, a president, a national figure, sometimes a feature of the national life, such as a scene in agriculture or industry, some symbol of the nation. This little idea has helped to develop universal industry of letter-writing and sending of messages which have been written or typed.

What could do its work better? It is idle to believe that anything more convenient is to be found. True there are stamping machines for offices where large numbers of letters are sent out, but for the generality of mankind the mucilaged stamp is one of the best known developments of civilization.

GIFT OF FURS EVIDENCE OF AFFECTION

Women from all over the Dominion have made possible the presentation to The Lady Tweedsmuir of a mink coat as an evidence of the esteem in which she is held by the women of Canada. The furs, designed and made in Canadian workrooms will be a reminder of the days she spent in the Dominion when she was helping the Canadians to a better understanding of their own problems and linking Canadians more and more closely to the British Empire.

From all over Canada the contributions came. They were asked to be made small so that everyone could contribute.

The coat is a graceful length model of the finest selected mink fur skins .It is very dark and rich in color as only the backs of the skins were used. The lining too is of Canadian manufacture.

Canadian women will ever keep her in memory and it is certain she will ever remember th people of Canada years after she will have returned to England.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The end of the Finnish war fell far short of bringing the kind of peace desired by Norway and Sweden. They are safe from hostilities for a time but still are uneasy.

On the east the Soviet hammer reaches towards them with a menace for the future and on the west they are faced with a stiffening of the British attitude towards the use of their territorial waters for transport of goods to Germany, particularly iron ore from their northern mines.

While Nazi Germany has consistently disregarded the rights of neutrals whenever it suited the convenience of its forces on sea and in the air Great Britain and France so far have observed the provisions of International law.

Neutral protests failed to deter Germany from sinking neutral ships on the high seas without warning. In the Nazi campaign against British supply ships neutral merchant vessels were treated as ruthlessly as belligerent warships.

If British war vessels now draw close to Scandinavian territorial waters in an effort to close off the movement of supplies into Germany the neutral states to the north again will be confronted with the menace of war. Norway now has protested violations of its waters by Great Britain.

In effect Norway is in the difficult position of protesting at violations by one belligerent while the other belligerent continues to profit by similar violations which Norway seems powerless to prevent. And this happens just after Norway and Sweden together did the Germans a real service by refusing to permit British and French troops to pass over their territories to aid the Finns in their struggle against the Russians.

Sports-Flying Ball Teams

(A letter from Judge G. E. Deroche)

Unless one drives several miles and three miles further up a high mountain he does not find snow here at anytime, therefore winter sports are nearly eliminated, although I did see one artificial ice rink but that is not much for 2,000,000 people.

But every form of summer sports obtains here. Dozens of tennis courts in parks here and with strong wire fencing on all four sides and ceiling—all free—just take your racket and ball and go to it.

The first thing I did in Pasadena was to find the Rose Bowl, where the great rugby game is played each New Year's Day to decide the best football team on this continent. I must see that game some time—Perhaps Dr. Bert Howard would let me bring his Albert College team with me. The Bowl is used for no other form of sport. About thirty-five games are played each fall, but all playing ceases for four weeks prior to January 1st to prepare the ground for the great game. I know hundreds of rugby fans listened in on the radio to hear the game last January 1st as I did. The field is surrounded completely with seats towering from the ground up—no covering, hence the bowl shape. The Bowl seats 90,000 but 100,000 attended last year.

After the rugby season much is made here of basketball, particularly in the schools and colleges. Badminton, horseshoe pitching etc have their following, also dozens of lawn bowling clubs. We tried out three lawn bowling clubs, the Arroyo, Secoo, Greens and the greens were absolutely perfect—all bowling on the grass.

We visited the Chess and Checker Club several times and were fortunate enough to be there when the forty-game match was played between Hill, champion of California and Saunders, the champion of Illinois. At half-time Hill had one-two and Saunders one—all others draws. Each man took his full five minutes to move quite often. Hill played in an All-American tournament a year ago and stood fifth.

Golf, Golf, Golf of course is here, there and anywhere. The setting is often delightful due to the mountain scenery.

I like to watch polo—saw a game between Boise City, Idaho, and San Fernando, California. The headwork and physical skill of the horses, speed, sudden stops, quick wheeling this way and that, as well as the skill of the men with the long handled mallet to hit the ball so accurately sending it forward and backward or through or under his horse, is exceedingly thrilling.

Horse racing? Oh yes! The San Anita race track claims to be the finest course in the world. It may well be—went one day to get the setting. The Hialeah Track in Miami, Florida claims to be the finest. It has a lake in the centre of it with a hundred Flamingos running about. Here, however the centre is a mass of variegated flowers. Both are very beautiful, but San Anita has in addition, the Sierra mountain range six to ten thousand feet high running across the face of the grandstand—so we give San Anita first prize.

They have here a very strong Pacific Coast league of baseball from which many men are drafted each year into the Major Leagues. Several Major League teams train here each spring, exhibition games having already started. Yesterday we went to see Connie Mack's Philadelphia Athletics play Chicago Cubs—but wet grounds—no game — so we will try again.

Here is interesting news —They are testing the time and expense involved in having a ball team fly from here to the east. The idea being that one or more teams might be entered in the Major League schedule—flying back and forth for their regular games. I am afraid my sermons are getting longer.

George E. Deroche.

Radio Standards Are too Low

An American educationist has taken a poll of listeners' intelligence, the net result of which from 2,331 persons, compared with the intelligence standard of a number of radio programs, showing that the intelligence average of those listeners was about 26 percent. above the level of radio programs.

The standard of some radio programs is very high but such as the symphony concerts and the celebrated "Information Please" are few and far between. Possibly the latter quiz is at least 75 percent. above normal intelligence, not more than one-fourth of the questions being within the compass of the average listener. Strange to say it has an enormous following, probably because people listen in to marvel at the intelligence of the four who are quizzed and to see how often they are stumped. There are other programs of the quiz type where the questions are so childish that the wonder is anybody who went to school and who reads the newspapers is balked at all.

Undoubtedly, however, the average level of radio programs is too low. This we suggest, is due to the multitude of sponsored programs where the advertisers are anxious to have the largest number of people listen in so as to give them the sales talk. There being nothing else on offer on the radio, the many people who like to keep the radio going all evening have to listen to them or else shut the radio off. — St. Thomas Times-Journal.

Trailer Travel

Briny Breezes (On the Ocean) Delray Beach Florida, March 21 — (By Air Mail)—Temp. high yesterday 78; Ocean 77. Spring at last has arrived in Southern Florida after a cool season of three months' duration. People in trailers had all the best of it this winter down here in the semi-tropics as they always had controlled heat a hand. Visitors in apartment and rooms suffered in the cool mornings and also through the nights for the lack of artificial heat. Places of this sort are not equipped with heating appliances. In fact they were not supplied with sufficient bedding. Tenants were forced to use wearing apparel to supplement the scanty supply of bedding furnished. Many slept in their clothing while many returned north disgusted, saying they would have heat in their homes at least. A visitor from Belleville who has spent the last eight winters in Miami told me he would never return on account of being so miserable through the cool spell. Thousands of trailers jammed the trailer parks full, space was at a premium. Choice locations in many parks have been arranged for, for next winter. We do not wish to convey the idea that cold weather stole the show down in the deep south of the Sunshine State as this would give a wrong impression. The Magic City of Miami had a big season. Visitors are still pouring in. Motor traffic struck an all time high while the total of money that flowed like a golden stream through the Mutuals at the horse tracks and dog tracks also turned up a record. Night clubs and movie houses report capacity audiences. Such new pictures as "Gone with the Wind," "Grapes of Wrath" along with many others just kept people in lines willing to give up their coin of the realm.

Careful, Nervous, Free Driving Required

A traffic count at the famous Thirteenth street circle in 12 daylight hours topped all records. No less than 54,920 autos passed a given point in 12 hours. This Biscayne Circle at thirteenth street where the County Causeway leads off to the east and where Biscayne Blvd. leads in from the north, continuing south, is the main artery in the heart of Miami. A distinct bottle-neck prevails at this point. Woe to the driver who misses his step in this hourly traffic scramble. The hourly high was also a record. It was 5331 from 6 to 7 p.m. Average per minute for the 12 hour count was 76.26. However this heavy traffic became quite simple when a driver got used to it. Many lights and cops kept all cars moving. We noticed all drivers drove with great care. Take out the smart fellows, the light beaters, the speed boys, what have you left? Safety for all.

Trailer travel this winter in this great Natural Nation has been much different from former winters in so far as this space is concerned. Many complicated situations have turned up due to Canada being at War. We find American citizens from all states have one huge fear. Getting into the war. In our opinion a great nation of isolationists in so far as the war is concerned. We have interviewed Americans from Michigan, New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Illinois, Tennessee, Connecticut, Georgia, North and South Carolina, Pennsylvania, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Alabama and others. The answer to my question is always the same. With the exception of a few we are with the Allies BUT keep it "over there." We run against pro Germans at times then the sparks begin to fly. This breed have the chip on their shoulder for Canadians. We find many people standoffish. It appears they think they will become contaminated with war bacteria should they come very close We do not feel resentful for this treatment. Who wants to go to war. The plain truthful answer is NOBODY. This would not apply to the Mad Men of Europe (the ravagers of children and women and peaceful small Christian nations) who are beckoned on by greed and conquest. We find the Jews very friendly of course. Britain has always been a safe refuge for the Jews. We have as neighbors at Briny Breezes, Danes by the name of Svend, Swedes by the name of Strum, Finns by the name of Von Reish. We find these neighbors friendly. They all have their own separate opinions as to the way Britain should conduct the present struggle. Seem to think she should police the world and that she made promises to the Czechs and the Poles that she has not kept. We also had a German neighbor and we are glad he has left. A German emigrant who came to the United States of America with nothing but his trade, painter and decorator. A good mechanic, who by his hard work and thrift now owns seven houses up in Jersey. His thrift attracted my curiosity as I noticed he kept busy making cocoanut shell baskets along with bamboo flower pots. We strolled over. Asked him if the novel articles he was making were for sale. In English with a strong German accent he informed me he had many presents to make when he reached home. These saved him buying, thereby saving him money. Smart and thrifty was this German but a dangerous citizen in case of trouble, in my opinion.

Hot or cool, rain or shine, all the celebrities make some sort of an excuse to get down to Miami, Miami the fastest growing city in the great United States of America it is said, for a visit during the winter months . A regular procession took place this year, the President, then came Mrs. F. D. R. who took up residence at Golden Beach, a highly restricted area in North Miami. We should know as we were put off one day lately by a very polite traffic officer when we attempted to stage a small picnic. Then J. Edgar Hoover, John L. Lewis who took two rooms at an expensive hotel paying $38 per day — Greta Garbo who was obliged to depart owing to the huge crowds that made an attempt to catch a glimpse of her. Many others. In Miami the definition of a gentleman is "A Man With Money."

Bahamas Ponders Convicts' Plight

Nassau, Bahamas, March 26 — (CP)—Bahamas authorities are wondering what to do about six sea-bitten fellows who arrived here this month after surviving the hardships of Devil's Island penal colony, a long sea-voyage in an open boat, and eventual shipwreck.

The men are "liberes" convicts who, after serving their sentences, are given a choice of staying on the fringe of the French Guiana jungle or setting out for the world outside on their own initiative and resources. Their case is now being investigated by the authorities.

Originally numbering 14, the party left Devil's Island last fall, and reached Trinidad in January. After leaving Trinidad they made Santa Cruz, where they spent four days in hospital. Then on to Spanish Dominica, where eight elected to stay. The remaining six set out for Haiti, then reached the island of Inagua in the Bahamas group.

On Feb. 25, they were shipwrecked off Acklin's Island in a gale, but managed to make shore, travelled to Long Caw, and were brought to Nassau by sloop.

It's Funny Side

Some time ago the Nazis made the rest of the world laugh by advertising for jokes to prove that the Germans had a sense of humor. One story, now in wide under-cover circulation in the Fatherland, could not have won the prize, for the judges would have been afraid to find in its favor. Most non-Germans however, would have given it first place had it been submitted. Here it is:

Herr Hitler became exceedingly anxious to discover what the common people really thought of him. He decided to find out for himself. Donning a disguise he went into a cheap beer cellar in the poorer section of Berlin and asked the proprietor what he thought about Hitler. The evidently startled innkeeper beckoned him to follow him to a place where they could not be overheard by any of the patrons who crowded the place. Leading the Fuehrer down to a remote corner among the beer kegs the innkeeper whispered: "I wouldn't dare have anyone here know that I said it, but personally I think he is all right."

Another story which is in wide circulation among the German laboring classes tells of a Storm Troop leader marching down the street at the head of his uniformed squad and seeing a man on the sidewalk give the Communist salute. The leader halted his men, went to the saluter, and said, "It is dangerous to do that. One of the men in my squadron here is a Nazi."

For these 10 years past the following story has been told and retold in at least three dictator-controlled countries. The dictator, it seems, had slipped away from his palace in order to find out how he really stood with the people. and with hat turned down and collar up he took a seat in the shadows of a picture theatre. His own portrait was flashed on the screen. The people stood up mechanically. The dictator, tired and preoccupied, did not. His neighbor leaned over and said, "I agree with you, friend, but all the same you'd better stand."

Countless jokes on this order at the expense of the regime have long been almost the only outlet for the common people in Russia and Italy and Germany. Here is another dictator tale: Three men were sitting in a cafe. One man began to read a paper. A second looked over his shoulder, read an item, and shook his head in grave alarm. The third said: "Well, if you fellows are going to talk politics I'm going to get out!"

The war has produced plenty of good humor in Great Britain and France. Here is an English jibe: The only real trouble with German minorities, you know, is that they are ruling Germany.

A French humorist says. "The Germans make war without declaring it; and the Allies declare war without making it." And this leads to a similar one. "The civilians ask when the war will end; and the soldiers ask when it will begin."

An English story tells of a bachelor husband whose wife, following Air Raid Precaution orders, went to the country with the children. After three weeks of solitary life, the husband found himself with a large household wash on his hands. He was brave, filled the bath, threw everything in, and set to work. Soon he discovered leaning over a bath was the hardest sort of work. Undismayed, he took off his clothes, got into the bath and finished the wash in comfort!—Midland Free Press.

LITTLE PROGRESS MADE TO OPEN P. E. CO. ROADS

Drifting Snow Filled Roads Almost as Soon as They Were Plowed Out

HUGE DRIFTS

Picton, March 26—(Special)—Snow plows and gangs of men are still battling huge snow drifts which block most of Prince Edward County's roads. Little progress was made yesterday as the snow filled in the roads almost as fast as they were opened. Road men say little progress can be made until the wind dies down.

Blocking of roads began Thursday night and grew steadily worse over the week-end. Many rural roads may not be opened until the snow goes. Saturday saw many people who came to town from the country forced to abandon cars and either walk home or seek shelter in the homes of friends. Easter visitors were forced to prolong their visits and many who had planned trips were forced to cancel them.

Mrs. W. Hudgin died at South Bay Saturday morning and a local undertaker managed to reach that place by car but was forced to abandon the car and walk six miles to Milford and there engage a team and sleigh to bring him to Picton. Efforts to get a casket there over the week-end failed. Yesterday the snow plough and a gang of thirty men opened the road from Picton to Cherry Valley and the casket was taken that far. A team and sleigh took it on to its destination and will be used to convey the body to Cherry Valley after the funeral today.

Twenty men assisted a car to get to Picton hospital from East Lake on Saturday, beating the stork in a race.

Another gang of men opened roads to Point Petre so that a doctor could reach a patient.

Due to the fact that few reached town Saturday, stocks of groceries have run short in many homes. Bakers have been unable to make deliveries in rural areas.

Business in town over the week-end was almost at a standstill.

It is expected there will be a light vote in Prince Edward today due to blocked roads. A check-up last night revealed that many voters would be unable to get out either by car or horse. However, in town an unusually heavy vote is seen since streets are in good condition.

"For a number of years I suffered all kinds of distress with my stomach," says Mrs. Moses. "Practically every meal I ate brought on suffering. My food seemed to sour, then attacks of gas would come. Sometimes the pain was almost more than I could stand. The suffering would keep up long after I went to bed at night and I couldn't sleep. I felt worn out constantly.

"I lost interest in everything and was a discouraged person. My husband had taken Mosby's Tonic and it helped him so much that he insisted that I get it and take it. Now I am glad he did, for it was JUST WHAT I HAD ALWAYS NEEDED. It cleared that distressful gas bloating from my stomach and now I never suffer with gas pains. I can go to bed and get a good sound night of sleep. It also had a splendid action on my bowels and has regulated them. I know this medicine is what people need who suffer like I did and I want to endorse it to EVERY ONE."

W. S. Martin, Celebrates 91st Birthday on Election Day

Pioneer of Hastings County Takes Keen Interest in Things Relative to Community

IN GOOD HEALTH

Stirling, March 26—(Special) — Few people display greater interest in the present Federal election campaign than Mr. W. S. Martin, who with eager interest knew that thousands of loyal Canadian citizens went to the poles to cast their ballots for their favorite candidate on the same day that he himself celebrated his ninety-first birthday. One of the oldest citizens of Hastings County, Mr. Martin is at present convalescing at the nursing home of Mrs. George E. Green, Stirling.

Possessing the priceless heritage of pioneer parentage, Mr. Martin was born in the town of Picton, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Martin. He came to Stirling district at an early age and has spent nearly his entire life as a resident of Hastings County, a life, that has been freely devoted to the service of his fellow beings. For fourteen consecutive years he served as reeve of Stirling and in 1896 was County Warden. With community progress and the welfare of all citizens as his theme, his services on these two governing bodies will long be remembered. Keenly interested in church and Sunday school work he recalls starting Sunday school at the age of five years and has attended regularly each Sunday since as long as health permitted his presence. He is a charter member of the Stirling I.O.O.F. No. 239 and has acted as County Treasurer of the Loyal Orange Lodge for over sixty years.

In 1909 Mr. Martin entered the Stirling branch of the Union Bank of Canada which later became a branch of the Royal Bank of Canada serving both organizations faithfully and well as manager until his superannuation in 1927. Since that time he has devoted his time to the handling of his own personal business, with frequent visits to the insurance business office operated by his son, H. C. Martin.

A Great Reader

There are few citizens in the Stirling district possessing greater knowledge of its historic development than this gentleman of the old school, who until only a few months ago was remarkably active taking his daily walk to the post office with an erect military bearing that characterized self reliance, which has carried him through a long and successful life. Suffering a fall recently at his home, his physical activity has since been impaired and much of his time is now spent in keeping abreast of modern trends, politically and economically as he reads the daily press reports on all current events.

Greetings from all parts of the continent from relatives and friends served to brighten the day upon which he marked his 91st birthday and reviewed within his own mind the important Federal and Provincial campaigns he had witnessed in by-gone years. But never before had this very important event in Canadian history fallen upon the same day upon which he was born. With the entire countryside in the throes of its biggest snow storm of several seasons he doubtless is reminded of earlier campaigns, wherein citizens walked miles to the polling divisions to exercise their franchise. Days previous to the motor age when horse-drawn conveyances provided the most rapid means of transportation and voters displayed real loyalty by long journeys on foot to cast their vote. Friends in all parts of the county, particularly in the Stirling district join heartily in wishing this grand old man many more years of happy activity.

Taffeta in the Mode

By VERA WINSTON

TAFFETA is rustling through the sartorial symphony. All ready for spring is a costume of navy blue taffeta printed in a neat, scattered design. The short jacket is very fitted at the waist, with a few gathers from the shoulders yoke to lend softness to the bodice. The slit pocket beneath the yoke are barely perceptible. Seams mold the hipline slightly and release the full, flared gores of the skirt. The forward-jutting collar of white organdy, which is detachable, is one of the season's face-flattering vogues.

"Smutty" Magazines Bad Reading For Young People

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm 16 years old. My girl friend and I like to read and we exchange books and magazines with each other. We prefer romantic fiction.

Here's my problem. For Christmas my girl friend gave me a subscription to a magazine which we both like very much. I was thrilled to receive this gift, but my mother says I can't read it because she thinks it isn't good reading for girls of my age. Do you think my mother is right? I have been reading this magazine for some time and don't see anything wrong with it. I think it's a warning to young girls, and will help them avoid mis-steps. My mother and I both read your column, and would like your advice on this matter, please.

Y. E.

If I'm not mistaken, the magazine you mention with others of the same salatious character have been removed from the market in a recent campaign to sweep such periodicals off the newsstand. During the past decade, sex crimes have more than doubled with one out of every four committed by youths under twenty. Such magazines, according to J. Edgar Hoover, are largely responsible. The Forum has taken up this question in a recent publication, and a condensed version is published in the February 'Reader's Digest'.

I would advise you and your girl friend to read these articles. It's a tragedy that nice girls should read magazines which have no literary merit, but seek only to exploit obscenity.

The Soldier Boy and His Girl Had a Misunderstanding

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am a soldier. When I was in high school I fell in love with a girl who was everything I wanted. We went around together in school, and after I graduated I used to go to go to school just to see her.

We had a misunderstanding over something I said, which she misunderstood, but she refused to accept my explanation, and when she wouldn't give me another chance I joined the service. We correspond and once she closed her letter with "Love". Does she still care for me? I'm so much in love with her that I don't care what happens to me if I can't win her back. Please advise me.

A Desperate Soldier

Where is your courage, my dear boy? You belong to a profession in which every man is supposed to make a crony of death, and you you are afraid to ask this girl how you stand in her affection. Don't lose another day. If she had taken the misunderstanding too seriously, she would not have written you letters.

Visitor Won't Go Home

Dear Miss Fairfax

Until recently my husband and I lived in a single apartment, but as we were expecting a friend to visit us from the East, we rented a double apartment. She has been with us two months now.

Several days ago I received a letter from my sister that she and her husband want to visit us, and as I haven't seen her for years I am anxious to have her. However, I do not have room for all these people. I showed my friend the letter, but it didn't make an impression on her, and she says nothing about leaving. What can I say or do without offending her?

C.C.B.

This friend seems to be making you the sort of visit people used to make decades ago. These days they come for week-ends, or at most a day or two longer. Just tell her, in your most engaging manner, that your sister is coming for a visit and you'll have to prepare the guest room for her. It looks to me as if this girl intended to spend the rest of her life visiting you.

She Sees Him Only Once Every Three Months

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am 17 and my boy friend is 23, and we're very much in love with each other. He lives a considerable distance from my home, so that I am able to see him only once every three months. In the meantime I don't go out with other boys, and my girl friends say I'm very foolish as Im too young to go "steady". However, other boys don't interest me. What do you think I should do in a case like this?

Penny

I'm inclined to agree with your girl friends that it would be more sensible for you to go out with other boys than to go "steady" with this one you see only occasionally.

Seventeen is pretty young to regard yourself as "bespoke", as old-time people used to call girls who reserved their company for one special man.

Preventing Pore Problems

By HELEN FOLLETT

ENLARGED pores worry a lot of beauty wailers. Too bad they have to have them. We start out in life with skins so delicate that pores are scarcely noticeable. If the texture coarsens, it is because health habits are not favorable or because the care of the complexion has been casual.

The skin sends forth salty exudations and chemical elements that should be removed at least twice a day with soap and water. If they remain upon the skin surface, the epidermal coat becomes rough and horrid. After soap is used there should be a creaming, and the cream should be removed with cleansing tissues. Bedtime is best for that detail of the beauty ritual.

In the morning it is necessary to use cold water to contract the pores and then an astringent. Put it on with pledgets of cotton, let it dry. It is not good beauty policy to use a heavy, oily powder when pores have expanded.

An overworked digestive system has a deplorable effect upon the skin. Meals should be simple and light. Fruit juices, tomato juice, and lemonade are good for the girl who suffers from a skin that looks like an old pin cushion.

Improve them by powdering lightly, touching the lobes with faint rose rouge. Don't call attention to them by wearing ear rings which, if at all heavy, will make the lobes even longer.

Outstanding ears can be slapped down by the plastic surgeon. Small children whose sound receivers won't stay close to their heads should wear tape caps at night to bind them where they belong.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Manners of the Public Telephone Booth

At times we've all had to wait for our turn at a public telephone booth, and, of course, we must continue to wait as long as the telephoner's coins held out. No use, usually, to put on an anxious or impatient or bored expression — the apparently interminable chatter goes on and on.

We should not complain when long business talks are necessary, but, certainly, the public telephone is not on appropriate place for extended personal conversation. If we see that someone is anxiously waiting to use the telephone, common decency should urge us to talk as briefly as possible.

It's pretty distressing to hear, as we very often can't help over-hearing, a prolonged game of "Guess who this is", while we are palpitating to make an important call before we catch a train. Sometimes we hear a gossip-fest run endlessly on or a long family argument that will probably be continued at home that evening anyway.

Moderation is an excellent law for the coin-box telephone. And we will be pleasant-mannered people if we make understanding observance of this law.

Also we shouldn't smoke in these airless telephone booths. Maybe if we didn't smoke in the booth, we'd stay there a shorter time! Certainly we'd make it more habitable for the person following us. And it's inexcusable to leave, on the shelf or telephone box or floor, unextinguished (or even extinguished) cigarettes or cigars.

Birth Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1— Will you please suggest some suitable cards to announce the birth of a child? Something simple. Don't you consider the usual type found in the stores a bit flowery?

2—This will be our second child. How soon after the birth should the cards be sent out?

F. J.

1—It's a problem to buy the simple announcement cards that we would like to use for this important announcement. But there are simple ones to be bought, and I'm sure you can find them, especially since you live so near a metropolitan shipping centre. I like the all-white ones best, with spaces only for the Mr. and Mrs. Names, the baby's name, and the date of birth.

If you and your husband have Mr. and Mrs. Cards, they are perfect to use for this announcement. The tiny baby-card is attached to the top of this, with narrow white ribbon. On the baby-card is engraved the baby's name, in the centre of the card, and, in the lower left corner, the date of birth.

2—The birth-announcement cards are sent out as soon as is convenient.

Courting Concentration

By Garry Cleveland Myers Ph.D.

IN ALMOST any group of parents during an open forum, the question comes: "How may I teach my child to concentrate?" Generally it relates to a child from eight to 12.

The question almost gives me a feeling of despair because I feel so helpless in trying to answer it in a few words. The question is so general and so vague; no one can answer it with finality.

In the first place, concentration, or the lack of it, is tied up with a whole lifetime of habits. It is not a specific something we can attack like we do swearing, playing with matches, or failing to say "Thank you". It consists of countless attitudes and habits. We don't teach concentration as we teach the spelling of biscuit, learning by heart "The Psalm of Life" or naming the leading cities of China.

Paying Attention

Your child or mine grows in ability to concentrate as he succeeds in paying strict attention to one specific item of activity, then another, and another and so on. Each victry will help him to win another one.

When we, as parents or teachers, wish to train the child to concentrate, our task is about as follows: Turn him to things to learn or do that he can learn or do well, but which will challenge his efforts. Do all possible to control the situation so he will succeed and get satisfaction from success. In case he is led to spell accurately two words of the spelling lesson, he might find no difficulty in working vigorously on the other four or eight. If he finds he can read the book he borrowed from the library and get meaning and pleasure from it, he has a motive to go on reading. But if it proves too hard for him, he is likely to dream as he reads and soon close the book and abandon it entirely.

Checker Playing

What we teachers and parents are most likely to do is to scold the dreamy child or to exhort him on the virtures of concentration. We might help him more by reciting to him verbatim some of Einstein's writings on relativity, or challenging him to play a game of checkers. By the latter we might, indeed, do a great deal in teaching concentration. If he wants to play well, he will have to cultivate concentration habits.

Therefore, we need to find out what the child can do well at home or school and to lead him to do tasks no harder. He must succeed in order to find satisfaction. As he enjoys success he is stimulated to attend more closely and to work more vigorously to win more success. We cultivate concentration in the child as we help him to win more victories when he tries to learn.

Solving Parents Problems

Q.—Is it wise for young people to marry before they are able to earn their complete support, with the understanding that their parents can and will give them financial aid?

A.—In many instances, yes, especially if the new husband is still in a professional school; sometimes if he is still in college; even sometimes when he is beginning on a job of promise but not of adequate earning. Wise subidy may prevent too great delay in marriage and the beginning of a family. Of course, the serious danger of such subsidizing of the newly-married pair is that they might be robbed of self-reliance and a healthy sense of responsibility.

Q.—Suppose you asked a child of three or 13 to do something for you and he said he wouldn't or would rather not.

A.—Treat him as you would an adult guest asked a similiar question. A request, when honest, implies freedom of choice by the one requested.

Hyperthyroid

When a doctor comes across a child with a definite case of hyperthyroidism, it usually gives him quite a jolt. I know it always does me. The reason is that the treatment of the disease is fraught with dangers.

Two methods have been used to correct this condition. One calls for a very lengthy period of rest in bed in the hope that the over active gland will quiet down of its own accord. The other treatment, and the one most commonly used, calls for an operation and the removal of part of the gland.

The operation is a dangerous one, and please let me advise if any of your family require such an operation see to it that you have a surgeon perform it who is a specialist in thyroid operations.

I remember when I had been out of medical school a couple of years I was away in the north in a mining community and I ran across a couple of cases, two young grils, who obviously needed operations. With the enthusiasm of youth—and lack of experience, too, I decided that I should take out those thyroids. Fortunately, however, I first sat down and wrote a letter to a famous surgeon in Toronto, Dr. F. N. G. Starr, whom I know through my father, and sort of asked him for a few hints on how to take those thyroids out.

Well, he wrote me back a letter warning me that if I was fool enough to undertake such an operation, inexperienced as I was, that the patient would almost surely die. That cured me. I sent the two girls to Toronto for the operation, and never in all years I have been practising has the idea of operating for thyroid ever entered my head.

When an operation is decided upon, it is well to have the child take about a month's rest in bed first. During this period your doctor can give the child medicine to quiet the rampaging gland temporarily. As the condition improves, plans should be carefully laid for the operation. It is best not to let the child know that it faces an operation for in highly nervous state which is one of the symptoms of the trouble, it is likely to be so upset that all the good of the rest in bed will be destroyed.

The actual operation is a serious one, I want to emphasize that again, and it is quite likely to be followed by a crucial period of several days. This is because of the large amounts of thyroid emitted by the gland as it is handled during the operation. However, in the hands of a good surgeon most children survive the operation. But sometimes the thyroid grows again and the operation must be repeated.

The other treatment consists of months, even years in bed with no disturbances, no visitors. Obviously this is often inexpedient.

Most girls who develop this disease become worse as the period of puberty is passed. In such cases where the disease develops before puberty, it is well to keep the girl in bed until this period of stress is passed, and then an operation can be performed.

AT THE BELLE

"SWISS FAMILY ROBINSON"

One of the best loved of all story classics, Johann David Wyss', "Swiss Family Robinson", is now on the Belle Thearte screen and this writer is delighted to report in its favor.

The screen version is infinitely more vivid and realistic and exciting than any possible arrangement of words on paper could be. And its producers, the noted screen-writing team of Gene Towne and Graham Baker, are entitled to plenty of plaudits for their skilful cinematic rendition of Wyss' immortal book.

Opening in London during the Napoleonic period when all Europe was jittery with war alarms, the story tells how William Robinson, Swiss clockmaker, sees his four boys growing up to be useless snobs, his wife interested only in her shallow social pleasures.

Determined to make men of his sons if it can be done, Robinson sells out his business, embarks with his rebellious wife and offsprings on an Australia-bound brig and plans to build a new life. But the brig is wrecked in a storm and the Robinsons, the sole survivors, ferry themselves to a nearby tropic island along with a few barnyard animals.

How the marooned sextet pit themselves successfully against the forces of nature and how the boys become self-reliant and upstanding young men while the wife eventually comes to understand her husband's ideals, along with a brilliant series of adventures and experiences, make up the absorbing drama.

A splendid cast with Thomas Mitchell and Edna Best as the parents and Freddie Bartholomew, Terry Kilburn, Tim Holt and Baby Bobby Quillan as the four youngsters, do grand work throughout. The clever direction of Edward Ludwig, the remarkable marine and island locations and the fidelity of the film to the original, all rate hearty praise. By all means put "Swiss Family Robinson", on your list of pictures that must be seen.

Highlights of the Belle news of the hour include "Fighting Ends of Finland," complete and dramatic film review of 105, Heroic Days culminating in Munich stirring Chapter of an epic resistence against insuperable odds, with eloquent plea by former President Hoover for Finnish relief after crushing peace. Seven other World Events will also be shown. "The Riveter", is the title of one of the funniest Donald Duck cartoons ever seen on a local screen.

15 INDEPENDENTS

Snowless Blizzard Delays Schedules

Toronto, March 26 (CP) — Last night's snowless blizzard caused by high winds which drifted snow over highways, railroad tracks and roads seriously interfered with transportation schedules in this district. Most main roads were open today, but sideroads still were impassable.

Two trains were snowbound for seven hours each within 30 miles of Toronto during the night, their passengers finally arriving here early this morning. Bus schedules were running four hours behind on the average. One bus caught in a drift 13 miles north of Whitby which is 25 miles east of here, was stalled for nine hours.

Normal arrival of milk in Toronto was reduced 22 per cent yesterday and was down about 16 per cent today. The stalled trains were at Uxbridge and at Stouffville, both northeast of Toronto.

BRITISH EXPERT CONFERS IN ROME

Rome, March 26 (AP)—E. W. Playfair, British government commercial expert, conferred today with Italian authorities with a view to reopening trade negotiations suspended more than two months ago. It was understood that one point discussed was the possibility of Britain's buying Italian cauliflower and potatoes in exchange for British shipments of coal and other raw materials to Italy.

Anglo-Italian trade negotiations were suspended before the development of the controversy over the British blockade of German seaborne coal for Italy partly because of Italy's insistence on Britain taking farm products whereas London wanted industrial products, including war supplies.

For what appears might be the last time before a general break-up of the river occurs, city employees are at present busily engaged in re-cutting the ice from the channel cut in the mouth of the Moira River about a month ago. Twice before, since the channel was originally cut, the river has frozen to a depth of six or seven inches at this point and was cleared again by city workmen, while the most recent cold snap has put ten inches of solid ice in the opening cut in the ice below the C.P.R. bridge on the advice of the city engineer as a preventative against flooding conditions during the spring break-up.

Today for the first time in over a week, water is showing above the surface of the ice on the lower Moira with the ice at the upper bridge being almost entirely covered as the slightly swollen water is forced through openings in the ice. Early this afternoon water began showing on the ice between the two lower bridges as the first warm sun in days began to take effect on the snow.

Belgium Firms Forced to Build Tank Cars for Germany

Brussels, March 26 (AP) — Two Belgian firms were reported today to have accepted orders to build 1,000 tank cars for Germany under pressure by the Belgian government anxious to protect its neutrality.

Railway construction circles said the two firms at first refused the orders despite their liberal terms, because of fears that Great Britain and France would strike back by placing the firms on their black lists. British and French orders normally far outnumber those from the Reich.

A foreign office spokesman said that the government had approved the transaction, since under existing trade pacts France and Great Britain have agreed to apply no sanctions if trade with Germany in certain products is maintained at pre-war levels.

It was reported, but not confirmed, that Germany's refusal to ship coke to Belgium this Winter was connected with the Belgian manufacturer's reluctance to fill the German order for tank cars.

France, it was disclosed two weeks ago, has placed an order for 5,000 tank cars with Belgian builders.

GOVT'S DUTY 'TO MAKE WAR' SAYS REYNAUD

"Our Decisions Will be Virile and Our Acts Prompt," Says French Premier

SPEED UP ARMS

Paris, March 26 (CP-Havas) — Premier Paul Reynaud told the French nation in a broadcast tonight that "the government's duty is clear—to make war."

Hitler expected divisions of opinion in France, the new Premier said, and a succession of ministerial crises, but that did not materialize.

"Our decisions will be virile and our acts prompt," he declared.

Reynaud charged that Hitler and Russia had conspired to conquer and enslave Europe and to do away with French liberty.

"The enemy has failed to deliver a telling blow against us at the outset," he said. "This situation may change, but France, which in the past has found herself often invaded by surprise and without warning, this time is neither surprised nor unwarned nor invaded."

He warned that present-day warfare covers all fields of human activity.

"An effort must be made to augment our armaments," the Premier said. "There is need of different types of guns, of planes which become out of date day by day.

"Then, too, the country must continue to live. There is warfare in the agricultural as well as the military terrain.

"The need is for men and, everywhere, for work—men to fight, men to work.

"The government has a role to play, which is to put every man at his post. That will be done."

JAMES CROMWELL BACK IN OTTAWA

Ottawa, March 26 (CP)—James H. R. Cromwell, who returned to Ottawa today from his home in New Jersey, said: "I have no other plans than to continue the duties of my office as American Minister to Canada."

The Minister gave the press a prepared statement concerning the pro-ally speech he made in Toronto recently and rumors that he would be a senatorial candidate in New Jersey.

The statement follows: "All I can say now is that I have no other plans than to continue the duties of my office as American Minister to Canada. As for Toronto, Secretary Hull (United States Secretary Cordell Hull), for whom I have great admiration and respect, has said the last word. There isn't any more and I have no further statement to make."

Addressing a joint meeting of the Canadian and Empire Clubs last Tuesday Mr. Cromwell sympathized strongly with the Allied cause. His remarks caused a great deal of comment among members of the United States Congress, some demanding his recall and others commending him.

After receiving a text of the address Cordell Hull, United States Secretary of State, said the address "contravened standing instructions to American diplomatic officers." In a telegram to Mr. Cromwell he asked the Minister "that in future he observe standing instructions."

HAMBURG BROADCAST SAYS CANADIAN FLIER IS INJURED

London, March 26 (CP Cable) — According to a Hamburg broadcast quoting the German News Agency, Flying Officer P. F. Templeman of St. John's, Nfld., was badly injured when his plane was shot down over a German coastal town Saturday night.

A detailed account said the plane, a Vickers Wellington bomber, came under the fire of anti-aircraft guns and crashed in flames about 100 yards from a farm.

The bomber carried a crew of five. One died in the blazing aircraft, another barachuted safely from 400 feet and the others managed to climb out from the plane.

Gardiner was arrested in Kingston yesterday following his release from a military hospital where he had been confined because of illness.

Rewards had been posted by the Ontario Government and the Toronto Board of Police Commissioners totalling $1,200. Police would not say whether any claimants for the reward had assisted in the case.

BRITISH INVENT NEW LIGHTSHIPS WITHOUT CREWS

Technical Achievement Developed by Experts to Thwart Nazi Air Attacks

SHIPS 30 FEET LONG

Automatic Lights on Lightship Will Require Attention Once in Two Months

London, March 26 (CP)—The Admiralty will counter German air attacks on its lightships by placing automatic lights on crewless vessels too small to be easily bombed, it was learned today.

The newly developed ships will need human attention only once every two months. They are only 30 feet long.

Naval circles said the new craft are a technical wartime achievement surpassed only by the measures developed by the Admiralty to thwart the German magnetic mine.

Both British and neutral merchant ships are dependent on floating lights that mark channels through the North Sea and English Channel.

Many British seamen of the lightship service, previously considered exempt from attack, have been killed or wounded since the Germans began their attacks two months ago on the small, unarmed lightships.

No Extension Given Motorists Says Officer

Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine announced today that motorists who are driving motor vehicles bearing 1939 licence plates will be politely advised to procure their 1940 plates within the next few days, according to a bulletin sent all Provincial Police this week, March 31st., being the last day upon which 1939 Ontario licence plates will be valid.

Motorists are urged to register their vehicles and procure their licences as early as possible to avoid the last minute rush and stampede into the licence issuer's office as there will be no extension of time limit given to motorists in Ontario this year, according to the Highway Department.

Delinquents will face prosecution if they fail to observe the March 31st regulation.

New Facts Divulged In 'Gang Slayings'

New York, March 26 — (AP)—District Attorney William O'Dwyer said today Abe (Kid Twist) Reles, 34, alleged "vice-president" of Murder, Inc., the Brooklyn crime syndicate already linked with 30-odd gang slayings, had divulged new facts interlocking the murder ring with a powerful waterfront gang headed by Joe Adonis.

O'Dwyer said Adonis, an almost mythical underworld figure who purportedly inherited the toga successively handed down by John Torrio and Frankie Yale, had been named by Reles as sometimes calling in the triggermen of Murder, Inc., to "take care of certain cases."

The Brooklyn prosecutor said Reles had given him an "important lead" regardng Peter Panto, 28, a Brooklyn waterfront labor leader who disappeared last July 14.

1600 Refugee Jews Landed At Haifa

Istanbul, Turkey, March 26—(A. P.)—Sixteen hundred Jewish refugees from Central Europe, wanderers for six months, were landed today from the Turkish steamship Sakarya at Haifa, Palestine, according to reports from that port, and immediately interned for seeking illegal entry into Palestine.

The refugees gathered at Bratislava, Slovakia, in October. They reached Sulina, Rumania, at the mouth of the Danube in November and embarked on the Sakarya, but the vessel remained at the dock for more than two months before starting for Palestine.

The Sakarya finally left Sulina in February only to be taken to Haifa by an Allied naval patrol. At Haifa the Turkish master and crew were detained for two weeks before being allowed to disembark the refugees for internment.

Madoc

Madoc—Easter Sunday services were well attended in the Madoc churches. At Trinity United Church the morning service was conducted by the pastor, Rev. A. Poulter who took for his address "The Momentous Victory" choosing his text from 5th chapter Rev., part of the 13th verse. This being the final address of a series given during the Lenten season. Special music by the choir with Mrs. Ashley organist and choir leader was rendered a quartette Mesdames C. Foster, Vowles, W. Hulin and Miss Salisbury sang "Low in the Grave He Lay," and an anthem "Hallelujah Christ is Risen" was rendered by the choir.

At the evening service "The Life of Our Lord" was given in word, song and picture. The pastor reading the story of the Life of Our Lord. The choir and congregation singing hymns appropriate to the story and lantern slides showing the pictures. A solo "Brightest and Best Are the Sons of the Morning." was beautifully rendered by Mrs. C. Foster. A duet by Mrs. Foster and Miss Salisbury and a chorus by members of the choir also added much to the beautiful service. Pots of Easter lilies and spring flowers were much in evidence.

Easter Day at St. Peter's Church

In spite of cold wind and snow-drifted roads many people attended the Easter Day services in St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, Madoc. At ten a.m. the children in the Sunday School witnessed the "Resurrection Story," as shown in beautifully colored lantern slides. Miss Lemoyne West read the story as the pictures were thrown on the screen. The service of worship at 11 o'clock commenced with the singing of the hymn, "Christ the Lord is Risen Today." The whole order of worship emphasized the power and beauty of the Easter message. Mr. Wm. Hawthorne and his three sons as a quartette sang the selection, "Keep Me Near the Cross." At the "offertory" the choir under the leadership of Mrs. Blanche Alexander, the organist, sang the anthem, "Easter Dawn." The duet part was taken by Miss Lemoyne West and Mrs. Ken Nicol.

The text for the sermon was found in John 12:24, "Verily, verily, I say unto you, except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much fruit." The minister said that this text was a statement of the central principle in the teaching of the Christ. A real and fruitful life could only be obtained through death. By parable and precept Jesus taught this truth to His disciples. They were dull pupils and failed to grasp its real significance until it was made vividly clear to them by His death on the cross followed by His coming forth from the tomb in the power of an endless life. If we as individuals in this day would know and experience the real meaning of the Christian faith, then we must accept as the principle of our thought and action, the message of "Good Friday" and the revelation of "Easter Day." For only by the death of the old man of sin and unbelief can the new man come to life in righteousness and truth.

At the evening service the choir sang the beautiful anthem "Easter Melodies." The text found in the prophecy of Isaiah 2:16 "The Day of the Lord upon all pleasant Pictures," provided the theme for the evening sermon. The minister then gave an illustrated talk on the events of the Passion Week which led up to the Resurrection morning.

SMART CONTEST

After many years of absence from the district ice lanes of hockey, the Point Anne "cementmen" returned to the business of chasing the little black rubber disc and completed the Belleville Industrial Hockey League without sustaining a single loss in the league schedule and last night proved their prowess and superiority by defeating the Alemite sextette 4-1 in the league play-off final at the Hume Arena. In winning last night's sudden death league final coach Josh Maracle's Canada Cement boys annexed the S. R. Burrows trophy, emblematic of the Industrial Hockey championship of the Bay of Quinte district. The trophy was presented to Coach Maracle on the ice following the game and later taken to Point Anne by a band of rabid and faithful Ox Point sport supporters.

The Alemite assumed an early game lead as they forged to the fore with an initial period goal as the result of some sensational stick-handling on the part of Johnnie Ronsky, who opened the scoring. Trailing 1-0 the "cementmen" applied the pressure in the middle session to have Whitehead ram home Sero's blue-linep ass and knot the count. Bobby Hull gave a thrilling exhibition of stick-handling to put the ultimate winners 2 to 1 in the lead late in the middle session. Whitehead and Hull scored in that order in the third period also.

Morris, in the loser's nets, was sensational throughout the entire game as he repeatedly thwarted the more speedy Cementmen with continued sensational saves. Ronsky, Doyle and Lupenette looked the best for the losers, as Bundy was a marked man and checked closely.

For Point Anne the defence pair of Murney Green and Bobby Hull were almost enough to stop the ambitious Alemite forwards single-handed, while Sero, Genereaux, Whalen and Luffman carried too much speed for their industrial opponents.

MARLBOROS WIN OVER OSHAWA 6-5

Toronto Junior Club Holds One Game Lead Over the Generals

(By The Canadian Press)

The Northern Ontario Hockey Association has sent another powerful team in search of the Allan Cup it last won in 1937.

Kirkland Lake Blue Devils, with their 3-2 victory over Toronto Goodyears at Kirkland Lake last night, established themselves among leading contenders for the Dominion Senior Hockey title which Sudbury Wolves won for the N.O.H.A. four years ago.

The victory was Kirkland Lake's second in the best-of-five Ontario senior series. They won the first game 4-3 and tied the second 1-1, with both games played at Toronto. The teams will meet at Kirkland Lake again tomorrow, returning to Toronto for further games if needed.

The home team had to fight from behind after Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty gave Goodyears a 2-0 lead in the first two minutes, Manager Lex Cook's third period goal won the game, marked by the powerful offence of the Blue Devils.

Oshawa Generals, Dominion junior champions found the going tough last night and lost 6-5 in overtime to Toronto Marlboros in the Ontario Association Junior "A" final.

Oshawa now trails 2-1 in the best-of-five series, with the next game to be played at Toronto tomorrow.

There are no senior games scheduled in the east tonight but Quebec's junior final will start at Montreal with Verdun Maple Leafs meeting Quebec Aces in the opener of a two-game total goals series.

RANGERS' CROP NOT SO GOOD THIS SEASON

Alf Pike and Kilby MacDonald Two Fine Players That Came Up Last Year

RANGERS ON SPOT

Red Hamill to Replace Mel Hill Out With Broken Ankle Bone

By SYDNEY GRUSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, March 26 —(CP)— The crops haven't prospered on New York Rangers' farms this year, so foreman Lester Patrick probably knows better than anyone that if the present Rangers aren't good enough he can't expect a Stanley Cup harvest until the farms produce again.

The Rangers weren't good enough last season, but the crops at Philadelphia were ripe for reaping and Patrick came up with Alf Pike and Kilby MacDonald, the outstanding first-year man of the National Hockey League. They were just part of the championship production last season.

Edmonton Roamers went to the Canadian junior amateur final; Philadelphia Ramblers took their portion of the International-American League and New York Rovers won the championship of the Eastern United States Amateur League. Only the Roamers have survived this year, the Ramblers finishing out of the Int-Am playoffs and the Rovers third.

Sink or Swim

So it's sink or swim for the Rangers with their present personnel for a while, and the prospects aren't too good for they open tonight's fourth game of the best-of-seven Cup semi-final trailing Boston Bruins one game to two. The Bruins are rolling fast on the momentum of two straight victories at home.

Every ticket for the game was sold yesterday, assuring the teams of a roaring crowd of more than 15,000 who expect to see the Rangers attempt every trick to draw even. If the Blueshirts lose tonight, the series will be as good as over for the Bruins then would have two of the remaining three games at home, where even the Rangers admit the champions have an edge.

Confident the series would end in five games, the Bruins arrived from Boston last night under coach Weiland and were sent to bed early. They were at full strength except for Mel Hill, whose broken ankle bone will keep him out for the rest of the season. Red Hamill probably will replace him with Bill (Flash) Hollett as the utility man.

BUCKO McDONALD REPLACES CHURCH AGAINST DETROIT

HAMBURGER KING

Bouncing Rear Guardsman Practically Ate His Way Out of the Big Time

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, March 26—(CP)—Time has flown since Wilfred (Bucko) McDonald was the toast of Detroit and the champion hamburger consumer of the National Hockey League.

Now the bouncing defenceman, in the uniform of Toronto Maple Leafs, is set to oppose his old Detroit teammates in a Stanley Cup playoff game—but only because of an injury to Jack Church. There is nothing to indicate he will see any more service in the cup series than this one game tonight.

Church, rookie defenceman who starred when Toronto defeated Chicago in the first round of playoffs, will miss the opener of the best-of-three set with the Red Wings because of a hip injury. Coach Dick Irvin called on McDonald, who has seen little active service in recent weeks, to replace Church beside Wally Stanowski.

It's a dramatic opportunity for Bucko, wiser and more serious at 28, to recapture some of the playoff glory that was his when Detroit won the Stanley Cup in 1936 and 1937. Those were the days when he slapped opposition forwards into the stands and ate as many as 10 hamburgers at a sitting, to the vast delight of Detroiters. There were sounder Red Wings but McDonald signed more autographs than his teammates.

Sold to Leafs Last Winter

The Red Wings slipped from the glory heights in 1937-38, and McDonald slipped too. He was sold last winter to the Maple Leafs, who had owned him originally and let him go from their old Buffalo farm club to a Detroit farm.

At training camp last fall, McDonald held his own and appeared ready for a successful season as a rushing blue-liner. He didn't maintain the pace, though, and when the stretch was reached Stanowski and Church were working together regularly, while Captain Red Horner and Bingo Kampman formed the other defence pair. McDonald sat out with Reg Hamilton, who was hampered by a groin injury.

It's almost certain the Leafs won't carry six defencemen next winter. With Church ready to return for the second contest of the Detroit round, McDonald has to produce tonight or become a highly probable candidate for relegation to the minor leagues.

The Red Wings, rivalled only by Montreal Canadiens for the frequency of their lineup changes this winter, finally have hit on a clicking combination that was hot enough to score nine goals in the three games of the preliminary round with New York Americans. The framework is composed of such dependable veterans as Tiny Thompson, Ebbie Goodfellow and Syd Howe.

Training for Derby Held Up by Cold Weather

Louisville, Ky., March 26 (AP)—Continuance of cold weather has brought uneasiness to the "hard-boots" hopeful of seeing a Kentucky-wintered horse win the Kentucky Derby May 4.

Col. E. R. Bradley's Bimelech, 5-2 winterbook choice to romp home first in the $75,000 added Churchill Downs classic, wintered at Bradley's Idle Hour Farm near Lexington.

A prolonged spell of inclement weather that has interfered with training schedules of "Bimey" and numerous other derby candidates both here and in the bluegrass, prompted one track scout to remark:

"If we don't get a break in the weather, and that right soon, you can count the 'boots,' including Bradley and Bimelech, out of the derby picture and start casting your peepers around for some horse which wintered in the South."

Derby nominees which have been favored this year by warmer climes include Andy K., Potranco, Dough Pass, Roman Flag, Dit, Prompt Pay, Red Dock, Gramps, Mioland, Blue Suit and Royal Crusader.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

Laredo, Tex., March 26 (AP)—There's a hard job in store for Fred Haney when the time comes to reduce St. Louis Browns' pitching staff. And until he can test them against Major League opposition he won't name even a limited list of players certain to be with the club when the season opens.

"The pitchers are so much alike and they are all so good against this Minor League competition that it's going to be tough to decide which ones to keep," Haney explains.

Winter Haven, Fla.—Paul Dean, who was planning to retire a few weeks ago, now has hopes of sticking with New York Giants. He tried his arm pitching to batters yesterday then remarked, "so far, so good. My arm feels great and the ball was alive."

Still Manager Bill Terry was seen conferring with Branch Rickey of the Cardinals and its reported he'd like to get Fiddler McGee or Mort Cooper.

Bradenton, Fla.—Off the records, Brooklyn's Dodgers are the leading long distance clouters of the "Grapefruit League." Six homers against Detroit yesterday—two each by Joe Vosmik and Peewee Reese—brought their total to 22 this Spring. But the teams they have played have hit 21. It's all explained by the right field fence at their Clearwater field—290 feet from the plate and now, and the wind usually blows in that direction.

Winter Haven, Fla.—Starting a roundabout journey back to New York with today's game against the Giants, the world-champion Yankees discovered they have not yet put their regular team on the field for an exhibition game. Joe DiMaggio, Red Rolfe and Bill Dickey haven't played much and Joe Gordon has been out five days with a cold and a bruised thigh.

Haines City, Fla.—The presence of Dick Bartell in the Detroit infield certainly makes it sound alive. Dick is a holler guy of the Frank Crosetti variety and the Tigers haven't had a noise-maker since Hank Greenberg turned silent.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Brietz, Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, March 26 — (AP)— Clydell Castleman's poor showing is the biggest disappointment of the Spring to Bill Terry. . . Young Al Davis, who is not in very good repute with polite fistic society because of his candy store smackings, etc., will be given a terrific build-up by the fight mob . . . First step was to appoint the suave Lew Burston as his manager.

Attention, scouts: Here is the announcement you have been waiting for! . . . Down in Dixie there's an ambitious 18-year-older who can hurl a rock 397 feet with his left arm and 227 with his right. . . His control is so good he's been barred from all the ball throwing games at the county fairs. . . . He doesn't chew, but goes for a root beer or two on Saturday nights. . . He has his own uniform and a home made bat with which he socked a 400-foot homer plumb over the school house last summer. He'll work for $2 a week and his board and if he doesn't win four of his first five games, he'll pay his own board. . . . All he asks is a chance. P. S.: Larry Williams, Manager of the Lawrenceville, Va., Club has the inside track.

Sam Boston, one of the better Broadway handicappers, is the first out with figures on the major baseball league races. . . . In the American League the Yanks are 1-3, the Red Sox 5-1, the Indians, 8-1, Detroit, 10-1, White Sox 12-1, Washington, 30-1, Philadelphia 50-1 and St. Louis, 200-1. . . . KIRKLAND LAKE BEATS GOODIES

Score is 3-2 With Fourth Game to be Played in North on Wednesday

Kirkland Lake, Ont., March 26 (CP)—Kirkland Lake Blue Devils stood on the threshold today, confident that the way was open for them to win the Ontario Senior Amateur Hockey Championship.

The fleet champions of Northern Ontario bowled over Toronto Goodyears, 3-2, here last night in the third game of their best-of-five series in Allan Cup playdowns, needing only a win here tomorrow night in the fourth game to eliminate the Toronto team. Kirkland Lake won the first game 4-3 in Toronto and the second was a 1-1 tie.

Playing Manager Lex Cook himself delivered the final touch to the Blue Devils' victory, scoring the winning goal early in the third period after Herbie Mortimer had turned aside shots by Alex Duff and Johnny McCreedy.

Only for two minutes of the first period did Kirkland Lake have trouble. Johnny (Peanuts) O'Flaherty sifted through the Blue Devils' defence twice in the first two minutes, scoring both times on plays by Johnny Imlach.

Beating the defence time and again, the home team was baffled by Mortimer until Dick Kowcinak finally rammed the disc home in the second. It was in the same period that Ray Milton tied the score, offsetting the second of O'Flaherty's goals.

Harringay Greyhounds Win "Blackout" Title

London, March 26—(CP-Cable) — Harringay Greyhounds emerged as winners of the "blackout" title in the English National Hockey League. Repeating their success of last season, the Greyhounds took the championship with a final 2-2 draw against Harringay racers Saturday night.

In the final league match last night, the racers beat Wembley Lions 4-3 and became runners-up.

This season's schedule was curtailed by the war, but Canadian players who remained in London played in the series in which Earl's Court Rangers and Streatham Tigers were the remaining teams. Teams were limited to 10 men and at least four were English players.

FIRST WORKOUT

Within an hour after he had told newspapermen that he would go back to his home in Dallas, Texas, Dizzy Dean, eccentric Chicago Cub pitcher, accepted the original offer tendered him of $10,000 per season, or one-half of the salary he received last year, and signed his 1940 contract which does not contain a bonus clause. Diz is pictured warming up prior to a practice game at Wrigley Field, Los Angeles, where the Chicago Cubs are playing a series of practice games as part of their spring training campaign.

CALLING 'EM

Between the Lines

with Ken J. Colling

In the old days of elections they used to say—"vote early and often." However, today it is a different world we're living in, but just the same it is the duty of every Canadian to exercise their franchise and VOTE. If we were to be deprived of our rights, as free citizens and not permitted the oportunity to cast our individual vote, perhaps we would appreciate what it means to be free Canadian citizens.

While commenting on the annual meeting of the O.A.S.A. yesterday we neglected to bring out one or two minor details, which might be of interest to the 'mushball' fans. For instance the suspension placed upon Earl "Sonny" Green last fall was lifted. Green was suspended for striking Umpire Dick Payne of Peterboro', an act which he did not commit. Green threatened Payne, after the latter allegedly called Green inexcusable names. Three of Oshawa's junior softball players received suspensions for giving false ages, so no wonder the Belleville kids experienced trouble beating the Motor City juniors in past years.

The sympathy of the Canadian sporting public can be extended to Sammy Luftspring, whose mother died in Toronto yesterday. Luftspring is the Canadian welterweight boxing champion. While speaking of boxers, Lou Ambers was deprived of his world lightweight crown by the N.B.A. yesterday. Ambers had not defended his title for over a period of six months, which constitutes a serious (?) crime in the eyes of the U.S.A. fight moguls.

Do you remember when:—Kaye Don, British motor boat racer, drove Miss England 11, the boat which brought death to Sir Henry Segrave, to a new world's record of 103.49 miles an hour nine years ago today. The former record was 102.56 miles an hour, set by Gar Wood off Miami.

The Peterboro's scribe say the Petes' ball club will re-organize in the near future and commence spring training as soon as the snow leaves (if that day ever arrives.) The Liftlock City baseball interests seem comparatively sure that Oshawa will return to senior baseball this summer along with senior clubs from Toronto and perhaps Hamilton. Last season the Petes elected a number of players into official executive positions, thus placing the responsibilities of office into the hands of the players themselves. The Liftlock City scribe says it is amazing the difference in expenses incurred by a team of athletes when the athletes themselves stand to suffer financial loss of the season—instead of the older officers. "They are not so eager to spend the club's money when the players hold office," points out Scribe Perdue, which might prove a splendid practice to try out in Belleville sports another year. All this baseball chatter makes us wonder—what is to be done about baseball in Belleville this season? The annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte League is coming up soon, but no action has been heard locally.

Richard Cantillon, Los Angeles lawyer, says he is representing a group of wealthy sportsmen interested in buying a major league baseball franchise for southern California.

He said he had a capital of "upwards of $5,000,000" for the proposed project. Cantillon is a nephew of Joe Cantillon, who managed the Washington Senators 30-odd years ago.

"We are prepared," said Cantillon, "to make outstanding offers to the St. Louis Browns, the Philadelphia Phillies and the Boston Bees. The offers will be sent to the owners of these clubs within the next few days."

Cantillon said the advance in airplane travel had nullified the chief objections to establishment of big league baseball in California—the great distances involved.

Away back in the "dim days" before the Hume Arena, the Point Anne "cementmen" flashed across the district hockey horizon in a most convincing manner. Even before the last war the C. C. C. always were serious contenders in district hockey circles. After some years' absence from local hockey circles, the "cementmen" returned to the City Industrial puck wars this season and went through a complete season without sustaining a single loss. Last night the Maracle-Green-Hull aggregation won the S. R. Burrows trophy and the City Industrial puck championship for 1940 by beating the second-place Alemite squad 4 to 1. The winners packed too much speed for the "radiomen", but the presence of veterans like Murney Green and Bobby Hull alone answers the picture, as this pair proved a formidable defence all through the schedule.

- SPORT SPICE — Tony Lazzeri says he has the best pitching staff in the International League with his Toronto Maple Leafs this year ......Yesterday the Leafs beat Indianapolis 9-6......Rumours still persist that the New York Yankees are very much for sale, which adds to Joe Cronin's story......"The Yanks are done as champions"....Bill Kay of Peterborough has been nominated to the executive of the Ontario Baseball Association......Looks like Lake Shroe "Blue Devils" will cop the all-Ontario senior puck honors this year they beat the Goodyears 3-2 the hard way last night......The series now stands two games to nil in favour of the Blue Devils, although the 'Goodies' manage dto play a 1-1 draw with the Northerners.......Which will be the more interesting tonight—the election results or the Toronto-Detroit N.H.L. resulst?

George Washington Case, the Senators' speed merchant, is getting ready to put a horse linament on the market......Byron Clark, Jr., the Yankees' lawyer, is back from the south and says the only offer he received down there was a $2,000,000 bite from an unidentified spendthrift......when Tommy Adair reports to the Americus (Ga.) club today, he'll have it all over the other pitching candidates ......Tommy has been throwing the ball several weeks with his wife doing the catching.

MAURETANIA PASSES THRU PANAMA CANAL

Cristobal, C.Z., Mar. 26 (AP)—The liner Mauretania, bent on a secret war mission, went through the Panama Canal to the Pacific Ocean today, beginning passage through the waterway at 9:45 a.m. EST.

Last Thursday the 81,235-ton Queen Mary followed the Mauretania out of New York, also on a secret mission. Both ships were believed to be heading for Australia to serve as troop ships. The Queen Mary because of her size would be unable to pass through the canal.

HOW TO OVERCOME ITCHING PILES

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots. Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

WAR AND FLOOD TAKES HEAVY TOLL

Natural and man-made factors have contributed to the present situation. The war has devastated and partly depopulated large areas. Chinese farmers in eastern provinces have curtailed production, as a gesture of non-co-operation with invaders and as a protest against being paid in the Japanese army's fiat currency.

Crops Destroyed

Hopei Province, in which Peiping and Tientsin are situated is suffering from floods which not only destroyed last summer's wheat but also prevented winter planting. War and flood have so reduced live stock supplies that donkey, camel and even dog meat are sold in Peiping markets.

Crops in neighboring Shantung Province were scorched in the sun of a rainless summer. Shansi, to the west, also suffered from drought and produced only 50 per cent of its normal yield.

The low value of the Chinese dollar and the interruption of normal trade as a result of Japanese restrictions have made food import impossible. Chinese profiteering and Japanese transport taxes have aggravated the shortage.

Rice High in Price

In the rice-eating Yangtse Valley the price of a 133-pound bag of rice rose from five to 60 Chinese dollars (the Chinese dollar is worth about seven cents) on the 240-mile journey from Wuhu, rice centre, past several Japanese tax barriers to Shanghai.

The rice crop in the lower Yangtse area was abundant last year, but the Japanese allowed only small quantities to reach Shanghai. Part of the crop was diverted to Japan.

Living costs in Shanghai today are 325 per cent above 1936 levels, while the Chinese dollar purchasing power has declined 30 per cent.

BEST CHANCE IS ALLIED VICTORY

iously contemplate a war with either Great Britain or France, within the lifetime of any present-day military secret as a possible eventuality?

"If they do, they are founded on absurdity, but if (as is quite evidently the case) they do not, what possible disadvantage can there be in allowing the Allies, since we have already opened our markets to them, to buy the very best and latest types of equipment which these markets have to offer?

"The one question involved is the practical question of what occurs will most redound to the peace and safety of the United States."

By GUY RHOADES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Prospects Bright

Allied prospects of tapping the vast manufacturing resources of the United States in their bid for the best arms available appeared bright today as American naval and military authorities expressed belief it would do no harm to sell the democracies modern aircraft, at least.

Removal of political or strategical objections to sale of the best weapons the United States can produce would help the Allies attain or retain (authorities differ on which term should be used) numerical superiority over the German air force.

Experience in the field has led Allied air experts to believe that technically their aircraft are superior to Germany's, and for that reason alone they would not wish to buy obsolete United States machines which would turn out in the long run to be a liability.

Large supplies of United States aircraft for use in Europe could conceivably go only to one side, for under the cash-and-carry provision of the Roosevelt neutrality policy the Allies are desirable customers—and Germany is not.

Britain and France can pay cash for what they want and they have the ships to carry it away. Germany has not the cash and what ships she has are holed up in her own or neutral ports or are carrying on a restricted trade in the Baltic and North Sea.

No Secret Devices Included

Immediate result of the United States army and navy decision not to oppose Allied acquisition of latest models of American aircraft seemed likely to be the release for European service of 600 machines under construction now for the two United States services.

It was emphasized that no "secret devices" would be included in the planes sold to the Allies and it was suggested the United States had some the Allies so far could not duplicate.

It was urged further that planes be not sold to the Allies until superior types were in the offing, a provision which would prove no handicap to Britain and France, because in modern aircraft manufacture the drawing board is always considerably ahead of the assembly line and efficiency of types can be forecast pretty accurately from the blueprints.

Despite the United States army and navy attitude there was expected to be some objection raised in Congress.

Anticipating this, the New York Herald Tribune declared editorially this morning that the best hope of the United States to stay out of the war "lies in the Allies winning a prompt victory in Europe."

"It is not the simplest of common sense," the newspaper asked, "to sell the Allies everything they may need to win that victory themselves, including any military secrets or anything else we may have?"

FOR GALLANTRY

Viscount Gort, commander-in-chief of the British forces in France, is shown pinning a British decoration on a French sergeant-major for conspicuous gallantry. The French non-com. performed his deed of valor while operating with a British patrol on the western front.

CANADIAN TROOPS IN ENGLAND VOTE "IN ABSENTIA"

Members of the Canadian Active Service Force now on duty in England are also having their chance to vote in the federal election. Ballots are being sent in from each unit to make known the troops' verdict in the general election. Each ballot received is 'clocked' as shown here before being placed in a box of the voter's district for shipment to Canada.

ALLIED MERCHANT

The week ending Sunday midnight was the first without Allied merchant ship losses since the war started, though eight neutral vessels were sunk and two German cargo boats were sent down by the Royal Navy.

Informed sources declared that squadrons of British destroyers and submarines, attempting to choke off Swedish iron ore shipments to Germany, had made passage impossible through the Skagerrak, the arm of the North Sea which leads to the Baltic.

As a result Berlin was reported to have orderd all outbound vessels to return to port. The Skagerrak has been thickly mined by the Germans, but ore batts have been able to reach Germany by hugging the shore.

Must Go Down Coast

In winter Swedish ore must be shipped through Narvik, Norway, down the Atlantic coast. Some ships go through the Skagerrak to Baltic ports and some are reported to be risking mine fields and submarines to sneak down the Swedish coast headed for Hamburg.

In summer the Skagerrak route is not so important to Germany, for as soon as the Gulf of Bothnia is ice-free Swedish ore can be shipped direct from Sweden without leaving the Baltic, which the British Navy has not penetrated.

Eight neutral vessels, including six of Danish registry, were sunk in the week which ended Sunday at midnight the Admiralty reported, observing that Germany's efforts apparently had been concentrated upon unarmed neutrals.

None of the ships sunk was in convoy, it said.

Sinking of two German merchantmen by British submarines during the week raised German losses by capture and destruction to more than 300,000 tons, or about seven and one-half per cent of her pre-war tonnage, the Admiralty said.

THREE SENATORS SWING SUPPORT

Senators Now in Favor of Extending Reciprocal Trade Pact

Washington, March 26—(AP)—The Roosevelt administration engaged in a close contest over extending its reciprocal trade program, won the support today of senators whom it tried unsuccessfully to defeat in 1938.

Three of them—Senators Guy M. Gillette, (Dem.-Iowa), Walter F. George, (Dem.-Georgia) and Ellison Smith, (Dem.-South Carolina) —told reporters they would vote for the bill.

The fourth, Senator Millard Tydings, (Dem.-Maryland), remained uncommitted, but friends speculated that he probably would be found in the government's camp when voting time came.

Politicians generally agreed that one reason why the Senators found it easy to support the New Deal on this issue was that Secretary of State Cordell Hull, principal advocate of the trade program, took no part in the 1938 primary battles.

Gillette said he favored extension of the trade program as the only way to recapture lost markets for surplus farm products.

"These markets were destroyed," he said, "through a process of raising tariff duties to the point where foreign nations retaliated by imposing quotas and other restrictions. The only way we can recapture them is by negotiation and mutual concessions."

GERMANY CAUGHT IN 'OWN WEB'

Correspondent to Lausanne Says 'White Peace' as Fatal to Nazis as Military Defeat

Lausanne, Switzerland, Mar. 26 (CP-Havas).—Germany is so caught in her own web that a "white peace" would be just as fatal as a military defeat, the economic correspondent of the Gazette de Lausanne wrote today.

"An exchange of signatures would not suffice for re-establishment of a lasting peace," the correspondent said. "Germany today is the prisoner of her own system. She cannot escape except by a total victory over her adversaries or by a revolution which will place the state on a sound basis."

Optimists in the Reich persist in believing that before the war develops into a real Armageddon it will be possible to conclude a negotiated peace, followed by a simple process of disarming and living on good terms with all remaining neighbors, the writer sail.

"But—for technical and practical reasons apare from all ideological considerations—the Third Reich of today is as unable to afford a white peace as it was unable to remain at peace beyond 1939," he said.

"Nothing's wrong with the tires—my wife just likes to change things around the house."

PARDNERS

By WILL RYAN

Sierra Pete stood as if turned to stone, his eyes fixed on a yellow line zigzagging along the side of the gulch. Shutting his eyes tight, Sierra Pete argued with himself.

"Nope!" he growled. "It ain't there. The sun's got me at last. It ain't gold. It's nothin, but a myridge."

But when he opened his eyes the yellow streak was still there. Picking up a loose stone, he chipped off a fragment of the yellow outcropping.

"Gold!" he quavered. "Millions in that vein. Pecos Sam and me is rich. We can ride in our own limmyzine and eat alligator pears every day of our lives. We can—oh, Gosh, what can't we do? And ten minutes ago we was jest a pair of lean old desert rats with nothin' but a jackass and a grubstake between us."

He paused, overcome for the moment. Some thing wet trickled down his wrinkled cheeks. He brushed it away wrathfully.

"Bawlin'!" he ejaculated. "A great time to bawl now, with all that gold in sight. You'd orter be kickin' up your heels like a yearlin' colt."

But his hobnailed boots performed no erratic capers, as he trudged back to camp, where Pecos Sam was frying flapjacks over a mesquite fire. At his elbow, Music, the burro, waited hopefully. When Pecos Sam passed him a spoonful of the dough, he lapped it up like a dog.

Where Sierra Pete was long and lank with vertical wrinkles, Pecos Sam was squat and bowlegged with wrinkles of the horizontal variety, and now, as he saw Pete returning to camp, the wrinkles crumbled in a welcoming grin.

"Go look in that gulch jest below the mesa, and you'll see the same ghost," said Sierra Pete. "I'll 'tend to the flapjacks."

When Pecos Sam returned, he was wiping the perspiration from his forehead with a grimy bandana, and his eyes held a strange dazed look.

"Looks like it was the end of the trail for us, Pete," he observed.

"'Pears that way," replied Sierra Pete, with equal gravity.

"Reckon the street lights will be as bright as them stars and that moon?" Pecos Sam asked.

Sierra Pete scowled. "Ask me suthin' easy," he grumbled. "I ain't stayed overnight in a town for twenty years."

"I can beat that." Pecos Pete was frankly triumphant. "It's twenty-five years since I slept anywhere but under the stars."

"And fifteen of them years we've been together," remarked Sierra Pete. "Fifteen! They ain't been so bad have they, Pard?"

"Thar's some things gold can't buy," mused Sierra Pete.

"A few," agreed Pecos Sam. "Reckon I'd better draw a map of this here place," he added. "That gulch is a terble hard place to find."

Rummaging out the stub of a lead pencil and a piece of paper that had somehow escaped destruction, Pecos Sam drew a map that satisfied himself. Folding it up, he placed it in the inside pocket of his coat.

"Reckon that'll do," he decided.

The next morning the partners staked out their claim. They talked little on their way to town to record it. Pecos Sam was grimly silent and Sierra Pete was snappish. One on either side of Music, they plodded along.

On the third day a sandstorm held them up. There was nothing to do but camp, and when at last the partners awoke to find the sky gloriously blue and the sun shining, their grouchy mood had passed, and they joked and laughed like boys.

Pecos Sam was getting breakfast, when he gave a sudden yell. "Pete!" he roared. "I jest left my coat on the ground a minute and that derned Music nosed out the map. Pete, he's chewed up or gold mine, sure as blazes. It'll mebbe take years to find that gulch ag'in, now the storm has covered our tracks."

Sierra Pete glared at Music. He had his own private opinion as to how Music had found that map.

"The pie-eyed son of a mountain jackass!" he snorted. "You hadn't orter left your coat on the ground that way. You might have knowed the critter couldn't tell a map of a gold mine from a pickle recipe. Now we got to start all over ag'in to look up our gold mine. But if we found it once, we can find it ag'in."

"Anyhow, we got all the rest of our lives to look for it," said Pecos Sam.

Sierra Pete scratched his bristling chin meditatively. "So we're jest a couple of desert rats ag'in," he commented. "And pardners!"

His hand went out and met Pecos Sam's in a close grip. Two pairs of old eyes looked deep into each other, and two old hearts beat in a complete rhythm of understanding.

"And pardners," repeated Pecos Sam.

The Stars Say

For Wednesday, March 27

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

AN EXCITING day, with swift-moving events transpiring in all departments of life, is forecast by the lunar and mutual aspects. It is probable that the adventurous and high-tensioned occurrences may be experienced in the realm of the emotions, romantic attachments or love life, where tempest, jealousy, passion and violence are likely to burst all bonds of restraint and prudence. In business impetuosity, strife and aggressiveness may prove detrimental, whereas calmness, consideration and subdued handling would be profitable.

Those whose birthday it is are on the brink of a year of high-pressure experiences, with all the energies and faculties under tension and stress to a perilous degree. Romance, expressions are subject to distress and disturbance because of impulsive and reckless behavior. Business also suffers from want of restraint, cool judgment and discreet management.

A child born on this day may be active, energetic, aggressive, original and sagacious, with tendencies toward jealousy and vindictiveness, unless given early discipline. It may have a softer side, social, diplomatic and friendly.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was thinking to herself with a absent minded expression, saying to pop, I had luntch today on the Stitz Roof with Maud Hews, today's the day they put on a fashion display as an added attraction at luntcheon. Maud and I both intended to content ourselves with seeing and admiring as we ate our luntch, but really, Willyum, I mean really, one model walked passed our table wearing a fur jacket that took my breath away and turned my knees to water.

I know how you felt, my knees are water right now, pop said, You just bought a fur jacket this season, he said, and ma said, I know, that's just the point, that's why it was miles out of the question to even think of another one in anything but an impersonel way. This was a bran new kind of fur called ruddy linx, and the way it was draped would baffle the discriptive powers of a book. It's simply wonderful what they can do with furs nowadays, she said.

It's not half as wonderful as what the animals themselves can do with them, pop said. I've heard that a really foxy fox can make one coat last a lifetime, he said, and ma said, It seems this ruddy line comes from some practically unknown section of some inaccessible country, and there are only three like it in the whole world. This particuler one is worth 4 thousand dollers, so that will give you some faint idea of how much chance I had of snapping it up for myself, she said.

Yee gods what a relief, my knees are slowly coming back to normal and have already reached the consistency of molasses, pop said. Now I begin to realize why rich men are in a constant state of fear and trembling. My knees now feel like semmy hardened putty and can proberly bare a little strain, how would you like to go to a movie? he said.

Ma saying very much.

SEVERE BLIZZARD HITS QUEBEC

Snowplows Cut Through Banks of Snow on Score of Highways

Montreal, March 25 —(CP) — Snow ploughs cut through drifts on a score of highways today as residents of Quebec's rural districts sought to re-establish transportation service after one of the severest blizzards in a decade.

Blown by a 30-mile-an-hour gale, light snow filled cuts on highways and railway lines to a depth of 15 feet from the Ontario border to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. There were few signs of spring to usher in the Easter season as the biting wind blew steadily from Saturday morning, petered out temporarily last night, and resumed again less fiercely today.

Weary skiers, due in Montreal early last evening, were still trooping off trains at a half dozen stations this morning. Sixteen trains were tied up on two different lines during the night, leaving more than 7,000 skiers stranded on board or at Laurentian Mountain resorts they had expected to quit hours earlier.

Blocked Lines

Canadian National Railways officials said five trains from the Lac Remi district, blocked near Lafreniere when a snow plough was unable to break down a drift, reached here early this morning. eleven Canadian Pacific Railway ski specials unloaded their passengers after being halted north of Ste. Rose by two derailed ploughs.

Similar stories of tied up traffic and snow filled roads came from border districts south of Montreal, towns along the south shore of the St. Lawrence River and Lake St. John, in the north-east.

Automobiles, half buried in snow, were stalled on country roads and highways. Train services, although unaffected on some lines, were delayed as much as nine hours on others.

Fear Voters May Be Snowbound

Fears that some voters would not be able to get to the polls for tomorrow's general election were expressed at Rimouski where the gale swept down from the north across the St. Lawrence River.

The Delaware and Hudson Lines Montreal-New York passenger train, the Laurentian, was halted from yesterday forenoon until last night at St. Edouard, not far from the United States border. A drift blocked its path and eventually the train had to back-track to St. Lambert, across the river from here, for rerouting by way of Rouses Point.

Few accidents were reported despite the condition of the roads.

LABOR PARTY EXPELS LEFT-WING LEADER IN NEW ZEALAND

Wellington, Mar. 25 (CP-Reuters). —The New Zealand Labor party in conference here today expelled John A. Lee, left-wing leader.

In December Finance Minister Walter Nash revoked Mr. Lee's appointment as Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Finance, explaining his writings "conveyed impressions incompatible with the mutual trust and loyalty essential between those working in close cooperation."

20 PLANES FLY EAST, LUXEMBOURG REPORT

Later, they said, they heard fire from German anti-aircraft batteries.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Mar. 26 (CP). — Gold shares on Toronto Exchange today registered a minor advance in the early session and prices were down narrowly at noon for the industrials, base metals and western oils.

Steel and miscellaneous industrials posted more gains than losses. Steel of Canada Perferred added two points and in the textiles, Canadian Celanese Preferred advanced three points to a new high for the year at 129. Food shares were a bit heavy. Hunts A was an exception, showing an advance of 1½ to 10.

Prices were up in the gold group for Malartic Gold Fields, Preston, Little Long Lac and Con'saurum. Nickel and Hudson Bay were the weak spots in the base metal list.

WALL STREET

New York, March 26 (AP) — Stocks see-sawed over a relatively narrow area in today's market. Some recently buoyant air transports backed down under profit-taking and many leaders, near the fourth hour, were fractionally in arrears.

Inclined to give ground to the home front were American Airlines, United Air Lines, Pan American Airways, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Loft, Anaconda, U.S. Rubber and N.Y. Central.

On the Canadian list Dome Mines, Distillers Seagram and Canadian Pacific advanced fractions while Lake Shore Mines and Hiram Walker dipped as much. Canada 4's, in the bond market, were easy.

POUND DROPS ON U. S. MARKET

Spring Drive by Allies to Obtain Dollars Causes Decline in Pound

New York, Mar. 26 (AP). — A spring drive by the Allies to obtain dollars for war needs sent the open-market quotation for the British pound sterling into another wide decline in terms of United States currency today.

The Wall Street rate for the pound as distinguished from the official price by the British war-time exchange control, plunged more than seven cents to below $3.62.

Exchange men said this was the lowest of modern times on basis of gold and was equivalent to about $2.17 in terms of the dollar before it was revalued in 1934 through raising of the United States price for gold to $35 from $20.67 an ounce.

The British control buys sterling at $4.02½ and sells at $4.03½, making a spread of around 40 cents between the official and the so-called "free" rate, the latter determined by supply and demand in the open market.

The French franc, tied into allied economic strategy, skidded with the pound. The Canadian dollar, however, was comparatively stable at a discount of about 19½ cents under the American dollar. The Ottawa Foreign Exchange Control Board rate remained at 9.09-9.91 per cent. discount.

EASTER SERVICES IN DISTRICT CHURCHES

Services during the Easter week-end at St. James Anglican Church, Tweed, originated with the Litany and Ante Communion services held at 9 a.m. Good Friday. A three hour service was held in the afternoon commencing at twelve noon with a large crowd in attendance. The Rev. Mr. Pepper was in charge.

Holy Communion was celebrated in the church at 8 a.m. Sunday morning where Easter contributed to an impressive service.

At St. John's Church, Madoc, communion was celebrated at 11 a.m. in a beautiful service against a background of floral offerings. Seven small boys augmented the choir.

St. James Church, Tweed, congregation heard a sermon by Mr. Herbert Leal, former Tweed resident and a member of the church. He was recently appointed one of Canada's Rhodes scholars. Mr. Harry Thompson read the Psalms with Charles Elliott offering the prayers. The choir sang special Easter music.

Quiet Trading In Produce

Toronto, March 26—Quiet trading and light receipts were evident in all lines during the week's opening session of the Toronto open produce market yesterday. Butter maintained previous prices, graded eggs eased slightly, while cheese prices were nominal, with the trade still confused over the export situation. Blocked roads, as a result of the recent heavy snow falls were blamed for the small volume of produce that arrived here.

Offerings moved slowly at unchanged prices on the butter market. Some out of town demand was reported.

The pace slackened on the egg market, following the Easter buying of last week. Increased production is not being reflected in current receipts as yet because of the poor road conditions impeding shipments. Prices eased to 21c for grade A-large in the graded section, while mediums traded at 20c to 21c and pullets at 19c to 20c.

The measure was taken under a decree for the protection of national symbols and songs.

PRIME MINISTER CLOSES CAMPAIGN

"It must not be a question of how much we will give but how much can we give," Col. Ralston said. For the first fiscal year of the war he estimated the cost in money would be $500,000,000.

Closes Campaign in Ottawa

In the last three general elections Mr. King concluded his campaign in this city where he has lived 40 years. He maintained that tradition last night and pleaded for a strong majority so that there might be no interruption in the war effort.

The Prime Minister said he had "never dreamed it would fall to my lot to lead Canada into a great war." But he was proud that when the moment came his past record had been such that he could lead virtually the entire House of Commons, Liberal and Conservative, into the war effort as a united body.

Those he had asked to form a government when he was returned to power in 1935 had remained at his side except those called away by death or ill-health, Mr. King said.

When the election was called none of his ministers had asked for appointments to oth r posts bearing either their own defeat or the defeat of the party.

Proud of Tribute by Associates

"No finer tribute was ever paid a Prime Minister," Mr. King said. He was confident the government would be given "an emphatic majority" but he pictured the situation if the result were otherwise.

If Conservative leader Manion and enough of his supporters to form a government were elected the task of forming a government would take time. Dr. Manion had not indicated that any of the National Government candidates would be considered for his cabinet.

Replying to criticism of his failure to tour Canada in the election campaign, Mr. King said he would have been equally criticised if he neglected his heavy responsibilities for party purposes.

When Mr. King told the audience that defeat of Dr. Manion was "a possibility," a heckler shouted; "How about yourself?"

Says 15 Leaders in Cabinet

"I will answer that right now," the Prime Minister retorted. "If I am defeated there are 15 men in my cabinet any one of them capable of leading the government and carrying out its policies.

"If Dr. Manion is defeated there is not a single one to carry out the promises he has made all across this country." His own defeat was always a possibility, the Prime Minister said. "I have been defeated before but never at such a critical time as the present.

Mr. King said he had endeavored to seek co-operation of Dr. Manion during the crisis leading to the war but Dr. Manion had ridiculed his fears and suggested he was exaggerating the possibility of conflict.

Says Confidential Information Given

He had shown Dr. Manion and other party leaders confidential information received from abroad indicating the seriousness of the situation, Mr. King said, but in parliament Dr. Manion had said the Prime Minister's expressions of war fears were attempts to divert attention from other issues.

"How could I co-operate with a man like that?" the Prime Minister asked. "Without confidence and mutual trust there can be no co-operation."

Replying to Opposition criticism that he had failed to make a Dominion election campaign tour, the Prime Minister said political meetings are not "vaudeville performances" and a "general election campaign is not a marathon race."

If he had made a coast-to-coast tour he would have been criticized similarly and Dr. Manion would have accused him of neglecting his duties in Ottawa for party reasons.

5,000,000 VOTERS

Of the 669 candidates in the field, 239 are Liberal supporters of the Prime Minister, four times leader of the government at Ottawa and for 20 years party leader. Dr. Manion, leading his party for the first time in an election, has 212 followers.

One contest was suddenly called off last night when Willie Poisson, Liberal candidate, died at Three Rivers, Que. The returning officer in Three Rivers constituency must fix new nomination and polling days. Mr. Poisson was opposing an Independent Liberal and National Government candidate.

Voting follows a warm campaign that started when Prime Minister King dramatically dissolved parliament Jan. 25, a few hours after the opening. On the hustings Liberals defended the government's war record, attacked bitterly by Dr. Manion and his supporters.

Only Two Parties Can Form Gov't

Only the Liberals and National Government group are large enough numerically to form a government in the event of victory today. The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation is contesting 96 constituencies while the New Democracy, formerly the Social Credit group, has candidates in 28. Other candidates of varying political designations total 94.

In Quebec a new designation, born of the war, appears. In Montreal St. Henry, L. G. Gosselin is running as an Anti-Conscription candidate and in Rimouski J. Blanchet is Independent Anti-Conscription. In Saskatchewan, birthplace of new political movements in the past, two Unity candidates and one National Unity candidate are entered.

Mr. King is a candidate in Prince Albert, Sask., the constituency which gave him a seat in 1926 after his defeat in North York. During the campaign the Prime Minister made a hurried trip to Prince Albert to address his constituents.

Dr. Manion runs in Fort William which returned him from 1917 to 1935 when he was defeated. He obtained a seat in London after his election to the party leadership in 1938.

Close to 6,600,000 civilians were entitled to vote, more than in any previous election. In the 1935 balloting there were 5,918,207 registered voters but only 4,452,675 went to the polls.

The number of Canadians exercising their right to vote has grown at each Dominion election. The increase has been due largely to increased population, a better informed public and the granting of the franchise to women who exercised it generally for the first time in the election of 1921.

PICTON

FIRE DESTROYS POULTRY PLANT

Owned by Mrs. R. E. Nourse at Cherry Valley, 700 Hens and 800 Baby Chicks Burned

Picton, March 26 (Special)—During the high gale early Friday morning, about 4 a.m., the modern poultry plant of Mrs. R. E. Nourse at Cherry Valley, was completely destroyed by fire. The building which was 200 feet long, was modern in equipment, 700 hens and 800 baby chicks perished in the fire. The home of the Manager, Mr. Brewster and his wife, is only 25 feet from the poultry plant, but was saved. When the manager was awakened by the glow of the fire, he was unable to save anything at the plant. It is thought possible that the high wind prevailing, blew down pipes of a brooder stove, starting the holocaust. The loss was around $3,000.00 covered by some insurance. Because of huge drifts, piled up by the wind, neighbors were unable to reach the scene of the fire.

Mrs. Jack Shannon and Mrs. F. E. Walden have the sympathy of many friends in the passing of their mother, Mrs. Erastus Root, whose death occurred at her home Mary Street, on Saturday, March 16th. The deceased was in her 73rd year and had been ill for some months. Rev. J. F. Reycraft of the United Church conducted the service at the home on Tuesday afternoon and interment was made in Glenwood cemetery. Besides her daughters, her husband, Mr. E. Root survives.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Le Heup have purchased the home of the late Mrs. Wm. McQuoid on Barker street and will take possession in May, after making some umprovements.

The Junior Board of Trade held its first meeting in Picton on Thursday evening when a slate of officers was drawn up.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the local post of the Canadian Legion held another successful card party in the Legion Hall on Thursday evening.

Mr. Joseph Marcellle of North Bay, is visiting his uncle Mr. Desmond Shannon at Waupoos Island, over Easter. His mother and her family who have been guests of Mr. Shannon since Christmas, will return with him to their home in North Bay.

Secretary of War Harry Woodring is expected to submit a detailed exposition of the new army-navy stand when he appears tomorrow before the House of Representatives military committee which is investigating foreign plane purchases here. The previous policy had been not to release any military craft for sale until a better type had been perfected. Repercussions on Capitol Hill were generally expected.

A stipulation requires a guarantee that the Allies will not manufacture planes of United States design in Europe. This is to safeguard the domestic aviation industry and the employment of aircraft workers.

Latest Bombers Supplied

Among the planes to be released were said to be six of the army's latest bombers and pursuit planes heretofore denied to foreign purchasers.

Officials indicated, however, that the release of planes would not be a blanket one. The war and navy departments, they said, will decide which of the ships now being built may be bought by the Allies, and in every case the manufacturer must have a better type in prospect.

Among the army orders now being filled is one for Curtis 9-40 pursuit ships, a type generally released by the war department. Another large order is for A-38's—a heavily armed, two motor Lockheed pursuit ship credited with a speed of 420 miles an hour. The P-38 was released last week, but without the secret device—reported to be a supercharger—which makes its top speed possible.

BRIGHT AND CLEAR WEATHER GREETS CANADA'S VOTERS

Light Rural Vote is Expected in Some Parts of Ontario and Quebec

SNOW BLOCKADE

By the Canadian Press

Dominion election day shone bright and clear throughout most of Canada today but one of the lightest rural votes in years was expected in parts of Ontario and Quebec where huge snow drifts barred residents from polling booths.

Expected to wipe out the franchise of hundreds, just as it obliterated roads, the snow problem was deepest in the Laurentian area of Quebec and the southern part of Ontario. Hugh ploughs made progress in some districts but in many cases county and sideroads were blocked completely in drifts as high as 10 feet.

In Western Canada, Northern Alberta roads were deep in snow but other districts enjoyed open roads and clear weather. Flowers bloomed under Spring-like conditions in British Columbia.

Blockade of Roads

Many highways and secondary roads remained blocked in the Laurentian area following a severe weekend storm. Except for main highways motor traffic was at a standstill and even horses and cutters could not negotiate the drifts in some districts.

Only a few rural roads in eastern Ontario allowed traffic of any kind and county officials said clearing the roads was an impossibility. Officials of the Stormont riding National Conservative Association used dog team yesterday to carry credentials to scrutineers at rural polls.

Instead of automobiles, horse and sleighs were offered by the two major parties to get voters in rural areas to polls in the Perth County district. In many sections, however, traffic of any kind was impossible.

Western Ontario

Oxford and Brant Counties also reported a certain part-cancellation of the rural vote through huge snowdrifts and blocked arteries. More than 100 automobiles were stranded in the Maple Grove district near Brantford, and radial service in the district was discontinued. A high wind during the night in the Galt district choked chances of opening many sideroads.

Some back roads in the Niagara Peninsula were reported "in bad shape" and officials announced that for the first time since the Welland Ship Canal was placed into operation in 1931 harbors at both Port Weller and Port Colborne were blocked by an ice jam.

Northern Ontario

Northern Ontario roads were open to traffic and under a clear sky voting was expected to be heavy. In the Dufferin County district of Ontario the worst storm in two years left scores of cars marooned yesterday and the same conditions prevailed in the Lake Simcoe area where voting was expected to be "very light."

On the other hand, the first sign of Spring weather showed in the Montreal district. A light breeze added to the Springlike temperatures.

The Maritime Provinces were not affected so badly by the weather as other parts of the east, although many roads were blocked. Annapolis Valley roads were blocked in Nova Scotia, while in Prince Edward Island the weather was fair and cold.

DONAT DEBLOIS REMANDED

Quebec, March 26—(CP)—Donat Deblois, 26, pleaded guilty today and was remanded for sentence April 3 on a charge of posting hand bills urging voters to "write 'peace' on your ballots."

Police said the handbills, written in French and bearing the name of the Communist party, read "vote against conscription. Write 'peace' on your ballots."

Deblois was arrested under a municipal by-law prohibiting posting of handbills without permission from city authorities.

TWO INJURED AS MOTOR CAR HITS C. N. PLOW

CAR A WRECK

Stirling, Ont., March 26 (Special) —Hurled clear of their automobile over a twenty-foot embankment after the vehicle had collided with a railway snow-plow on a level crossing here last evening, Richard Terry, Belleville, and a brother Reginald, of Picton, miraculously escaped death, as their car was carried along, a mass of twisted wreckage, by the momentum of the train.

They did not escape altogether. Both were taken to Belleville General Hospital where Richard Terry was found to be suffering with a severe compound fracture of the right leg and bruises, while Reginald, the more fortunate of the brothers, suffered only minor bruises and a shaking up. Dr. G. S. Cronk, attending physician, said today their condition was satisfactory.

The automobile, which rolled and twisted in front of the plough was completely demolished, pieces of twisted wreckage and other debris littering the railway track for a distance of fifty feet west of the highway. One wheel was found to be intact.

The Terry car was northbound when the accident occurred. The T. C. Thompson ambulance enroute to Madoc, forced to go by Marmora on account of snow-filled roads, was behind the ill-fated car when it crashed into the plow. It immediately rushed the injured men to hospital.

Though the crossing is well marked by signs three hundred feet south of the tracks, the view of a westbound train is partially blocked by buildings, to traffic approaching from a southerly direction.

According to Engineer Rainbow in charge of the locomotive, the heavy engine and plow was directly across the tracks when the collision occurred. Constable Sam Eggleson, Stirling, is investigating.

14 CANADIANS TOOK PART IN RAID ON SYLT LAST WEEK

London, March 26 — (CP) — Fourteen Canadian and 15 other Dominion fliers participated in last week's air raid on the German base at Sylt, the admiralty announced today. Seven New Zealanders, seven Australians and one South African were said to have taken part in the raid.

BRITISH SHIP SINKS WITH CARGO OF KRUSCHEN

Canada bound with 50,000 bottles

A grave interruption in Kruschen supplies for Canada occurred recently when a special shipment of 50,000 Kruschen Giant Packages was sent to the bottom. The balance of the supply of Kruschen Packages, sent on other ships, has been landed and distributed thinly across the country. Special concern was felt because this particular shipment was of the Giant (Free Trial) size which contains the regular package plus the free trial package offered at the regular price. Your local druggist still has a supply — but act immediately! We urge regular Kruschen users to get their packages at once to avoid disappointment. If you suffer from rheumatic pains, frequent headaches, lassitude, blotchy complexion and other ailments frequently caused by constipation, just you try Kruschen Salts.

Desperate Efforts Made to Open Up Snow-Filled Roads

Snow-filled roads in the rural districts of Prince Edward County, especially in the northern and southern parts may have an effect on the vote today, a report from Picton revealed this morning.

County plows battled all day yesterday in an effort to clear clogged roads in the district south of Picton in the direction of South Bay where residents have not received mail for four days.

Milford, Waupoos, Green Point and other outlying districts have been isolated for thirty-six hours at least, and all efforts are being made to clear highways and other roads leading to the polling centres.

Township lines north of the Wellington area, Hillier and parts of Ameliasburg are also blocked but some farmers have cleared roads with home-made plows and teams of horses. Main arteries like Picton-Belleville, and Picton-Wellington-Trenton highways are reported clear.

MAN 104, VOTES AT BROCKVILLE

Brockville, Ont., March 26—(CP) — Brockville's oldest resident, James Ingram, who claims to be 104, was dressed and waiting to vote "around noon," today at a polling booth in the West Ward, located a short distance from the residence of his daughter.

Heavy Vote Polled in City During Early Part of Day

Milder Weather Greatly Helps in Getting Electors to Polls

MORE THAN EXPECTED

with breezes that brought just a touch of winter, and which was considered a happy augury by all three political factions contesting the riding of South Hastings ushered in election day this morning.

Long before the polls opened at eight o'clock, stalwarts of the various parties and their supporters were preparing last minute details for the vehicular and pedestrian parade to the polls. Telephones jangled in all three headquarters while a fleet of cars stood waiting for duty.

According to mid-morning reports the early vote was heavier than at first expected. Ideal weather conditions brought out a large number of electors "anxious to get it over with," while a small but consistent stream of voters especially women took advantage of morning shopping to cast their ballots.

The heavy vote, however, did not take place until noon and afternoon. By three and four o'clock it is expected the majority of voters will have marked their ballots, but stragglers and late comers are expected to add a last minute rush to the polls.

City workmen and plows worked strenuously all morning on various parts of College Street, clearing away snowbanks to allow voters to get to the polls.

Party automobiles went into swift action shortly after the polls opened. Staffs of clerical workers in the various headquarters thumbed voters lists in search for potential supporters. Last-minute check-ups of every detail were undergone. Telephone operators in a forerunner of the deluge of calls expected tonight worked steadily as all political factions went "into the home stretch" in the final drive for the election wire.

Snowplows Busy

However, a Winter-weary, snow-choked rural district viewed with askance large snow-drifts and filled roads and speculated on the possibility of a representative vote being polled.

County snowplows worked heroically all night in an effort to clear sideroads and concession lines blocked with the drifting snow that followed in the wake of severe winds yesterday. One plow broke down early today and hopes of repairs before six o'clock tonight were remote, according to the county road superintendent's office.

Along blocked township roads, municipality plows, horse-drawn struggled through drifts that in places were fence high.

Nothing daunted, however, political stalwarts and their henchmen hauled voters by sleigh and cutter to the comparative clearness of the highways where they were whisked to polls by waiting automobiles.

According to a report from Foxboro, thirty-four voters had marked their ballots in that poll at 8.30 this morning.

Reports from other rural districts stated that every effort was being made on the part of party and municipality to facilitate travelling conditions for the electors. One municipal official said today that if strong winds do not materialize before night, a much larger vote than was anticipated yesterday will go to the polls.

Adherents of all three factions voiced confidence this morning that a heavy city vote will be polled. The sluggishness in interest in election that characterized the campaign in its earlier days has been replaced by rising feeling in all sections, it was stated, while this again has been accelerated by the fact that this riding will be the battleground for three factions.

While confidence was apparent today on the part of all three factions here, no definite predictions were voiced, although a number of the "boys" who take "flyers" in such things as elections and horse races, were willing to back up their opinions with everything ranging from the kitchen sink to the family jalopy.

Interest tonight will be centred on the offices of the Ontario Intelligencer where progressive and final election reports will be broadcast over a public address system direct from the editorial rooms. A staff of telephone operators will be on duty to give out last-minute information regarding the election situation, locally, in the district, and in the Dominion.

Special messengers will operate between various political headquarters in the city, while a long-distance telephone will bring returns from the far-flung sections of this riding as well as adjoining ridings. Members of the editorial staff will be on duty early while others will facilitate dispensing of returns over the battery of telephones installed for the purpose.

The service is being given free and is part of the policy of this newspaper in giving to its readers the latest news as soon as possible.

Camp Borden was the scene of a colorful ceremony recently as 33 young airmen received their wings. These young fliers, representing every part of Canada, were the first group to enter training with the R.C.A.F. after the outbreak of war. THE SPIRIT OF 1940

Strongly reminiscent of the famous painting "The Spirit of '76" is this photograph of drummers of Women's Auxiliary Air Force Service of England as they banged away on the sheepskins during a parade at their depot near London. They are members of the organization that fills jobs with the air force that ordinarily would keep men from active service.

REPORTED MISSING

Pilot Officer O. E. "Flash" Fennell, a native of Canora, Sask., was reported missing after the British air raid on the German air base at Sylt Island. He enlisted in the R.A.F. two and a half years ago and would have received his discharge in September, but for the outbreak of war.

THE LAW CLOSES IN

The emergency conference to save Spanish refugees had announced earlier in the day that they would try to picket the consulate in protest against an alleged edict closing Spanish refugee camps in France to all but those willing to fight for the Allies, but when the two-score would-be demonstrators showed up, more than 400 police closed in and the actual action was over in ten minutes. 22 were arrested.

PRE-WAR STUFF "DOWN UNDER"

With a big army of Australians and New Zealanders already in the Near East, more men and guns are being tuned up "down under" to augment the forces "over there." Here is a warlike scene at Camp Seymour, outside Melbourne, as a machine gun company of the 28th Battalion A.I.F. headquarters get hot with their "stutter guns" at target practice.

KEEPING THEIR HANDS IN ON WEST FRONT

Men as well as guns, become rusty through inactivity, so the British Royal Artillery keeps tuned up by regular gunnery practice while awaiting action on the western front. This gun crew is shown at loading exercise in a camouflaged gun pit, somewhere in the forward zone.

"AUSIES" IN THE HOLY CITY

War-Time Liberal Gov't Of Prime Minister King Given Sweeping Mandate

Sweeping Victory From Atlantic to Pacific Leaves Administration in Stronger Position Than Ever

LIBERAL LANDSLIDE

Winning Candidates Hold Majorities That Will Not Likely be Affected by the Soldiers' Vote

(By the Canadian Press)

Whisked back to power by the greatest majority ever accorded in a general election in Canada, the war-time Liberal Government of Prime Minister Mackenzie King prepared today for its task with a fresh mandate, given in spectacular style.

There was nothing the 65-year-old Prime Minister could have asked of the electorate in yesterday's voting that he did not get when the returns were in—sweeping victory from Atlantic to Pacific that left his administration in stronger position than ever.

In the high moment of his triumph, as the far west still was contributing Liberal victors to his total, Mr. Mackenzie King asked in a speech over the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation's National network that Canadians, "forgetting the differences of the past, join their strength together in the fight for victory, peace and freedom."

The Liberal landslide, achieving even greater proportions than that of 1935 when it returned Mr. King and his followers to power over the Bennett Conservative Government, brought stunning defeat to the new Conservative leader, Hon. R. J. Manion, whose proposed National Government was rejected.

Nazi Prison Ship Altmark Nears Home

Copenhagen, March 27—(AP)—The German prison ship Altmark was believed safely in German waters today after having slipped down the coast of Norway and through Danish waters.

The Altmark, from which the British destroyer Cossack rescued 299 British merchant seamen Feb. 16 in Norwegian territorial waters, was reliably reported to have reached Langeland Island, at the southern end of the Great Belt, Sunday. She left there today, apparently without incident.

Toronto, March 27 —(CP)—Light to moderate snowfalls have occurred in the Lower Lakes and Georgian Bay regions, but it has been fair and cold from northern Ontario westward to Saskatchewan. The weather is a little milder in Alberta with scattered snowflurries.

Lake Superior—Moderate winds; partly cloudy and not quite so cold tonight and Thursday; Snowflurries near the Soo.

Western Provinces — Easterly winds; mostly fair and cold. Thursday—East and southeast winds; partly cloudy and not quite so cold; scattered snowflurries or rain in some parts.

OVATION IN TRENTON

"It was a wonderful victory, one made possible through the untiring efforts of a grand group of workers and supporters." George H. Stokes, victorious National Government candidate for Hastings South told a group of cheering supporters in the Conservative clubrooms following the announcement of his victory over McLean Haig and Harry R. Cory, Liberals, last night.

The cheering crowd which packed the clubrooms to capacity hoisted the victorious candidate to their shoulders and hoisted him to a table on the platform where he made a brief address which was freely interspersed with compli-

The entire crew of 37 was saved. The Cometa was enroute from Bergen to Buenos Aires.

The newspaper Bergen Aftenblad criticized Britain for taking the ship into the Contraband Base. It said the British Consul at Bergen gave her "official clearance". She carried a cargo of Norwegian goods.

How This District Stands in New House

True to its former traditional political standing the historic riding of Hastings South, battle ground of many a fiery party campaign, returned to the Conservative fold in the Federal elections yesterday, George H. Stokes, National Government candidate, being returned victorious over McLean Haig, Belleville and over Harry R. Cory, Liberals in the first three-cornered fight in years.

Unofficial figures as reported early today are:

George H. Stokes, Belleville	8,823
McLean Haig, Belleville	6,114
Harry R. Cory, Trenton	3,259
Majority, Stokes	2,709

The tri-party battle originated following the Liberal nomination convention held here some time ago when Cory refused to accept the verdict of the delegates in selecting Mr. Haig as the official convention candidate.

Steadfastly refusing to withdraw from the campaign, Cory waged a bitter battle confining the most of his activities to attacking what he termed was the "Liberal Machine." Messrs. Stokes and Haig conducted their campaign along traditional party lines covering every inch of the riding in an effort to win the fight.

According to semi-official reports today, Hastings South will be the central point of a National Government group of ridings in this district, as George J. Tustin was returned victorious over Howard Weese in Prince Edward-Lennox; George A. White of Madoc, over Rorke Ferguson in Hastings-Peterborough; Gordon Fraser over Rolly Glover in Peterborough West and W. R. Aylesworth over A. E. McAllum in Frontenac-Addington.

Bordering the Conservative bloc are two Liberal ridings in which were fought two of the bitterest battles of the Federal campaign, William A. Fraser, dynamic veteran Liberal retaining his seat in Northumberland over the equally dynamic ex-mayor of Belleville Jamieson Bone by a majority unofficially estimated at fifteen hundred, while the Minister of National Defence, Norman Rogers, sent Col. T. E. Kidd crashing to defeat in Kingston by 2,115 majority.

Ottawa, March 27—(CP)—The view was expressed in Conservative circles here today that no action would be taken to organize the party's parliamentary forces following yesterday's stunning defeat until such time as Hon. U. S. Revised Policy of Co-operation With Allies in Plan Purchases Studied

Washington, March 27—(AP)—The United States Government's revised policy of full-fledged co-operation with the Allies in warplane purchases went under Congressional scrutiny today, as first steps were taken to speed action on an anticipated sharp increase in Franco-British orders.

The House of Representatives military committee called War Secretary Harry Woodring to explain particulars of his Department's decision to make the latest military aircraft models available for export and also to waive delivery on existing air crops orders so that the Allies may obtain them.

Simultaneously, without waiting for the committee's reaction, other army and navy officials met representatives of the aircraft industry to discuss the new policy and its immediate application.

Although the "all-out" co-operation decision was reached after the House inquiry had been arranged, there were no immediate signs of disagreement by individual members of the military committee.

British Fliers Break Up Nazi Formation, Force Enemy to Abandon Reconnaissance

London, Mar. 27 (CP).—The Air Ministry announced today that two German aircraft were shot down in flames yesterday in combat with Royal Air Force craft near Metz on the Western Front.

The official account said one R.A.F. fighter plane was shot down but that the flier escaped by parachute.

The account said a formation of seven German reconnaissance planes escorted by fighters was intercepted by an R.A.F. unit.

"Several combats took place and our fighters, having broken up the enemy formation, forced the enemy to abandon his reconnaissance.

"One of our patrols encountered a formation of nine enemy fighters. In the ensuing fight two enemy aircraft were seen to go down in flames."

Paris, Mar. 27 (CP-Havas).—Sudden and possibly significant German interest in allied troop strength and defence positions along the northern border region of France was reported today by military sources.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

READY FOR SUMMER

The motto "be prepared" was quite forcibly brought to mind this morning when, despite the fact that "Old Man Winter" seems destined to remain for some time to come, at least soft drink manufacturers are very optimistic over the prospects of summer eventually appearing on the horizon and are preparing accordingly. Five large soft drink trucks, fresh from the factory and bearing their owners insignia, were seen parked on Front Street, while the drivers partook of breakfast at a local cafe before continuing on to their destination at Montreal.

88-YEAR-OLD LADY INSISTS ON VOTING

Governments may come and governments may go but Mrs. Prosper Frechette, eighty-eight-year-old resident of Church Street continues to vote no matter the weather or the party in power.

Yesterday the fine old lady walked from her home to the polling booth marked her ballot and returned home and judging from the smile on her face following the returns, the effort was well worth while.

VOLLEYBALL

Only one game was played in the city volleyball league last evening owing to the players of some of the teams being away on holidays. Bata: Valchar, Talbaur, Myslivec, Kotck and Becke.

Rawdon Farmer Unable to Reach Home for 3 Days

March winds and drifting snow combined to keep at least one Rawdon farmer away from the polls yesterday, but it wasn't the fact that he missed his vote, that had him worried. Rather it was because snow-filled roads had kept him away from home since Saturday last, when he came to Belleville to attend the Easter market.

Leaving his home on the second concession of Rawdon early Saturday morning, Mr. Merle Spencer motored to Belleville and after transacting his business battled his way back to Stirling through the drifts only to find that the Campbellford road was impassable. Returning to Belleville he stayed the night with a cousin and tried again on Sunday to get through to his home, but snowplows had not yet made an appearance on his particular street. Again on Monday it was the same story. At five o'clock Tuesday evening he was still in Belleville with the Campbellford-Stirling road still piled high with drifts. "I understand that the plow will be through tonight," said Mr. Spencer, "but I'm not trying it again till I find that the road is clear. In the meantime however, I'm not worrying. They're all right at home and we're all right here, so everything is okay."

STEVENS DEFEATED

Russian Ambassador To Paris Being Recalled At Request French Gov't

Moscow, March 27—(AP)— Soviet Russia announced today her Ambassador to Paris is being recalled at the request of the French Government, a request which Tass, official Russian news agency, said was based on an attempt by Jakob Surits, the Envoy, to telegraph felicitations to Joseph Stalin on the conclusion of the war with Finland as a success against "British-French warmongers."

The telegraph was stopped by the French censor.

Statement Given

"On March 19 the French Charge D'Affaires at Moscow, (Jean) Payart, informed the People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs (Vyacheslaff Molotoff) that the French Government regarded a telegram signed by the Soviet Ambassador to Paris, Surits, and delivered to the telegraph for transmission to Stalin at Moscow on the occasion of the conclusion of a peace treaty between the U.S.S.R. and Finland as intervention by the Ambassador in the internal political life of France.

"According to Payart's statement, the French Government deems incorrect with regard to the French Government certain expressions in the telegram signed by the Ambassador, underlined in excerpts from the telegram given below, namely:—

"Thanks to the wisdom of the Soviet Government and to our valiant Red Army, the plans of the British-French warmongers who attempted to fan the flames of war in Northeastern Europe again failed."

"Also:—

"The Soviet Union remains an impregnable fortress against which the sinister schemes of the enemies of Socialism and of the working people of the whole world will crash."

"Also the word:—

"Sinister schemes, enemies of Socia'ism."

"Although this telegram was stopped by the censor, the French Government declared that Surits would no longer be regarded by the French Government as 'persona grata', and expressed the desire that Surits be recalled by the Soviet Government.

Reply is Given

"In this connection, on March 26 the Assistant People's Commissar for Foreign Affairs (S.A.) Lozoffsky handed Payart the following reply of the Soviet government:

" '1. The government of the U.S.S.R. finds substantial ground for the French government not to regard Soviet Ambassador Surits any longer as 'persona grata' on the strength of the contents of the telegram signed by Surits for transmission to Moscow, in which no mention was even made of the French government.

" '2. However, inasmuch as the French government formally raises the question of confidence with regard to Surits, the government of the U.S.S.R. informs it that Surits is being released from his duties as Ambassador of the U.S.S.R. to France'."

Speculation Rife

Paris, March 27 (CP)—Russia today lacked an Ambassador in this Allied capital and speculation rose as to just how strained Franco-Russian relations were.

The Ambassador, Jakob Surits, was recalled at the request of the French government which accused him of seeking to unsuccessfully to send a telegram to Moscow, saying the end of the Russo-Finnish war had blocked aims of "British-French warmongers," and of making unfriendly remarks about the Allies.

Surits' recall underlined the facts that Paul Emile Naggiar, French Ambassador to Moscow, has been home on "sick leave" for more than a month and that Britain's Ambassador to the Soviet, Sir William Seeds, has been home on leave since last August.

Informed quarters considered it unlikely that the new French government of Premier Paul Reynaud, pledged to make war on Germany "in every field," would approve any replacement for Surits. French relations there are in the hands of a Charge D'Affaires, Jean Payart, whose representations to the Kremlin brought about Surits' recall.

Message Not Sent in Code

Suritos did not make use of his diplomatic immunity by sending the message in code, but instead handed it into the regular channels of the French post office. The government considered the telegram, written in precise French, an undiplomatic act and an attempt by the envoy to use regular communications for Communist propaganda.

Ordinary telegrams are subject to censorship. Suritis' message therefore was stopped and later sent to the French Charge D'Affaires in Moscow, who handed it to Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff with France's request that Suritos be recalled.

Premier Reynaud's inner war cabinet held its second meeting this morning but whether the Russian and Balkan situations were discussed was not known.

The French demand that Russia recall Suritos was interpreted as a "warning" to Russia from the new "win-the-war" government under Paul Reynaud that it intends to take a stiffer diplomatic course in the conflict with Germany, Russia's new found friend.

Disturbed by Espionage

France, which has been engaged in an extensive battle with underground Communist organizations, also was said to be disturbed by a reported increase in Russian espionage.

An official French spokesman said that normal relations had been maintained with Russia "above all for reasons of practical order."

However, he added, France "does not intend to be duped. France intends to make her rights vigorously respected.

As long ago as Jan. 14 Philippe Henriot filed a resolution in the Chamber of Deputies, demanding severance of diplomatic relations with Moscow, and today a French Press campaign toward the same end appeared to be gaining momentum.

National Billards Proprietors Send 'Smokes' to Soldiers

Ninety Canadian soldiers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, seventy-five of whom are from the Belleville district, now stationed at Aldershot, England, as part of the first Canadian division recently had their shortage of "smokes" relieved considerably with the receipt of some 4,500 cigarettes, the gift of Mr. George Poulos and Mr. James Annis, proprietors of the National Billiards of Belleville.

Many of the soldiers stationed at Aldershot, where "smokes" apparently are at a premium, who were fortunate enough to be included among the ninety that received the packet of fifty cigarettes, have acknowledged the thoughtful gift by writing to the donors of the smokes, thanking them for their generosity.

BRITAIN HOPES TO LURE GERMAN FLEET INTO BATTLE

Tighten Blockade Against German Ore Imports as Air Force Assists

9 DESTROYERS SIGHTED

Aircraft Carrier Ark Royal on Duty Again After "Wash and Brushup" at Home

London, March 27—(CP)—While British warships busied themselves with tightening the blockade against German ore imports in hope of luring the German fleet into open battle, Great Britain counted on the Royal Air Force today for yeoman service against any spread of German submarine raids.

Concentration of British destroyers and submarines in the Skagerrak, off the Danish and Norwegian coast, was aimed primarily at cutting Germany's ore supplies from Sweden, but neutral observers saw a deeper motive.

They said that if Germany could be goaded to send out a cruiser squadron against these comparatively light forces, the British probably would have some heavy units nearby to fall upon the Germans with superior power.

Record is Spoiled

The reported sinking on Sunday from an undisclosed cause of the British tanker Daghestan, 5,742 tons, spoiled an admiralty announcement made yesterday that the week ending last Sunday midnight was the first since the war began in which no British or Allied merchantman had been sunk.

The 6,574-ton British steamship Castlemoor today was reported overdue and was feared lost with her crew of 40.

Thirty-six survivors from the 8,992-ton British steamship Rossington Court, rammed and sunk by an unidentified tanker in mid-Atlantic March 13, were landed in Britain today by a motorship which had rescued them from a single lifeboat.

Neutral merchant shipping casualties reported today included the Italian steamship Italo Balbo, 5,114 tons, damaged in a collision with an unidentified Danish ship off the southeast coast of England; and the Netherlands coasting vessel Saba, 400 tons, reported a week overdue at Amsterdam and feared lost with her crew of seven.

The Norwegian admiralty announced last night that eight or nine British destroyers were sighted in Norwegian waters on at least two occasions last Friday, when German ships were passing the coast, and that a Norwegian torpedo boat fired a warning shot in one instance.

British Foreign Office sources said a Norwegian protest alleging that territorial waters had been violated was being studied and "the entire affair is being investigated."

Especially Important

The Skagerrak, passage linking the north and Baltic Seas, is especially important to Germany in winter, when her ore shipments from Sweden must come down the Norwegian coast.

When the ice is gone, ships can sail from Sweden to Germany inside the landlocked Baltic, where British warships have not yet penetrated and where battle operations would be hampered in any case by lack of room.

Word that the air force would help combat any Spring rush of German submarines came with unofficial reports that British bombers had sunk two submarines this month in the North Sea and that the big aircraft carrier Ark Royal was on duty again after a "wash and brushup" at home.

Since the war began, the Ark Royal has ranged from the North Atlantic to South Africa and South America and it was disclosed that her planes already had been used against submarines.

The British Press today published lengthy accounts of the Ark Royal's recent stay at Portsmouth, taunting the Germans for their intimations early in the war that the $15,000,000 ship had been sunk by a German bomber.

For furthering the propaganda battle, the British Broadcasting Corporation meanwhile engaged Karl Stepanek, Czech movie actor who once played in German films, to make German language broadcasts.

Police Blotter

At least nineteen persons in Canada failed to vote during yesterday's Federal election, which was proven by the fact that 19 transients were given shelter at the police station last night, all giving home addresses which made it impossible for them to have voted elsewhere and arrive in Belleville for a night's lodging. Strangely enough, however, these wandering transients took a marked interest in the progress of the election and repeatedly enquired as to the results from Sergeant Arthur Harman and the night constables on duty.

Detectives Fred Isard surprised two teen-aged boys, who had gained entrance to a boathouse situated off the bay bridge road. The officer apprehended one of the lads inside of the building, while the other temporarily escaped by running into the nearby marsh. Later Detective Isard caught the second lad and escorted them to the police station where Chief Kidd gave the boys a stern lecture and reported the matter to their parents. No other arrests were necessary and a quiet election day was reported by both city and provincial police.

Has Been Intimately Associated With Hastings County in Many Capacities

FORMER SHERIFF

George H. Stokes, M.P.-elect for Hastings South, was still busy today with the aftermath of the great election battle in which he was engaged on Tuesday and from which he has emerged as the choice of the people for member of the Canadian House of Commons. The successful National Conservative candidate was naturally very happy over his success.

He is one of the best-known figures in the life of Hastings County. Born at Wellman's Corners, Rawdon Township, he was taken by his family to Prince Edward County where they resided in Hillier Township for a number of years. The family then moved to Thomasburg, where the future member of Parliament was educated. As a young man of twenty-one years he began farming near Tweed and making a success of agriculture he specialized in the breeding and raising of Ayrshire cattle. For more than fifteen years he carried on a retail dairy business. In 1931 he was appointed sheriff of this county which post he held until October of the year 1934.

His Municipal Service

Mr. Stokes has had experience in a representative capacity. Beginning with the clerkship of Hungerford township in which post he served for fifteen years, he became reeve of the township and served in that capacity for five terms.

Mr. Stokes' father, the late John Stokes was a well-known farmer and contested unsuccessfully the election in East Hastings in 1898 for the legislature, later becoming licence inspector. Mr. Stokes' mother was Sarah Henry and belonged to a wellknown Irish family of this county. His uncle, the late Adam Henry, will be remembered by older residents, as he was in business on upper Front Street, Belleville, for more than forty years in the flour, feed and grocery trade.

Mr. Stokes married Florence Craig, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Craig. His daughter is married to Mr. J. McAllister Wilson. Mr. Stokes has one grandson, John Stokes Wilson.

Tribute to Young Conservatives

Tribute to the efforts of the Young Conservatives organizations throughout the riding of Hastings South, was paid today by Mr. Stokes.

"The young people did a splendid job for me during the campaign and their activities and efforts during the electoral fight, was no small contributing factor in the subsequent victory. I want to thank them personally through the medium of the press, as I find it impossible to see each one individually. To the officials and members of the various organizations I want to express my heartfelt thanks for the splendid support and encouragement which could not help but result in victory." Mr. Stokes, said.

Tweed Rhodes Scholar Speaks in Home Church

Tweed, Mar. 27 (Special). — Mr. Herbert Leal of McMaster University, Hamilton, and a son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Leal, of Tweed, was the guest speaker at the Easter service held in St. James' Anglican Church on Sunday night. Mr. Leal, one of Tweed's most brilliant young men, was recently awarded a Rhodes Scholarship. A capacity congregation, composed of members of all the Protestant churches in Tweed, justifiably proud of the scholastic attainments of one of its most popular sons, listened with a great deal of pleasure and profit to Mr. Leal's very fine address.

Mr. Leal speaking from the text Daniel 6:10, "Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his window being open in his chambr toward Jerusalem he kneeled upon his knees three times a day, and prayed and gave thanks before his God, as he did aforetime," outlined the career of Daniel in the court of Darius. He had been chosen prime minister, but soon fell a victim to the intrigue of the jealous Babylonian nobility, when they influenced the king to sign a decree forbidding prayer for thirty days. Daniel refused to comply and was cast into the lion's den.

It is this man's moral reserves which enabled him to withstand punishment that is of importance to us today. These reserves had been built up over a long period of years. "The triumphs of age had been built up on the victories of youth."

Mr. Leal went on to show how Daniel's temperance in the Babylonian court, his true grasp of the source of inspiration and knowledge, and finally the quiet meditation in his own chamber had strengthened the moral fibre of his manhood.

"Today we find ourselves in another crisis, with grave difficulties ahead of us, difficulties that will not end with the war, since our whole social, economic and political system will have been thrown out of gear." Mr. Leal appealed to the younger members of the congregation to recognize their responsibility and begin preparation now for the trials both physical and mental that they will be called on to face.

Mail Carrier Forced to Walk

Mr. Leo Meraw, local mail-carrier, was forced to make his trip on foot on Monday, a distance of fifteen miles. The recent snow storm whipped up by a high wind had rendered the roads impassable to motor car and horses alike.

Mr. Samuel Bowers, 97-year-old resident of Tweed, cast his vote for his favourite candidate at the Dominion election of March 26th. Mr. Bowers has voted at every election since Confederation in 1867 and still retains a keen interest in the affairs of his native land.

Victoria poll, one of the rural subdivisions of Hungerford Township, although situated less than a quarter of a mile west of Tweed, could not be reached by motor car on election day owing to the blocked roads. Voters had to be transferred to sleighs at W. S. Gordon's corner in order to reach the polling booth. sible votes were polled in the vil- Eighty-three per cent of the pos- lage of Tweed on March 26th, when 683 voters exercised their franchise. Mr. George Stokes, successful candidate, was given a majority of 200 over his nearest opponent, Mr. McLean Haig in Tweed.

Provincial and Local Police Report All Quiet on All Fronts

Peace and serenity reigned supreme in Belleville and environs during yesterday's Federal election, according to Provincial and City Police today. Inspector Frank Gardner, of the O.P.P., and Chief Kidd of Belleville, both reported there had not been a single disturbance reported during the progress of yesterday's voting either in Belleville or the surrounding district.

There were no indications of violence or election controversies, which usually follow in the wake of party politics, police authorities seemed pleased to report today. "In the old days prior to the last war police were always augmented in numbers on election days when fist-fights and general bedlam reigned supreme as the electors went to the polls and party politics were taken much more seriously than they are today. However, it looks as though the general public are more educated today and do not assume pugnacious efforts as the result of personal feelings," added another police official in comment this morning.

The only regretable incident to occur locally during yesterday's voting resulted in Mr. F. G. Brower, Highland Ave., becoming ill and having to be replaced as an election official in Murney Ward. Brower was present to open his poll early yesterday, but became ill later in the day and had to be replaced by another as he was unable to continue hi sduties owing to his sickness.

NEW PARLIAMENT WILL LIKELY MEET EARLY IN MAY

Prime Minister Will Lay Government's Conduct of War Before House for Review

SIT THROUGH SUMMER

Mackenzie King Likely to Take Short Holiday, Before Opening, if Circumstances Permit

Ottawa, March 27—(CP)— Canada's war plans and the accumulated business of a regular session confront the new parliament which Prime Minister Mackenzie King probably will summon to meet early in May.

Armed with the "emphatic majority" he sought in pre-election appeals, the Prime Minister will lay his Government's conduct of the war effort before Parliament elected yesterday for review. The House also will tackle a backlog of civilian problems left over from the one-day session on Jan. 25.

Parliament likely is to meet either May 2 or May 9, which fall on Thursday, the traditional opening day. This belief is based upon a statement by Mr. King last Jan. 27 when he announced the date of the Dominion election and said he did not believe Parliament could be opened until "early in May."

Sit Through Summer

The prospect is that Parliament will be sitting throughout the summer months. Mr. King probably will take a short holiday, if circumstances permit, before the opening.

In some quarters the possibility has been suggested that only a brief session would be held with adjournment until fall but it is understood the Prime Minister would desire to clear up all the tasks of Parliament for this year without interruption.

Meanwhile, Mr. King prepared to carry out the formalities in which he will be sworn in for a fifth time as leader of a Canadian Government. Although Mr. King and his entire cabinet were successful, on the basis of the civilian vote, in yesterday's Dominion election, the Ministers all will have to tender their resignations and be re-sworn.

No particularly new policies are expected to be announced by the Government. The only pre-election promises were to prosecute the war to the full extent of Canada's resources, to prepare for the problems peace would bring, and to maintain unity within the Dominion.

One Vacancy in Cabinet

There is a vacancy in the Dominion Cabinet—that of Secretary of State—and there have been persistent reports that Mr. King proposes to create a new department of Munitions and Supply for which authority was given in a Bill adopted at the war session last September.

It also is reported a department of Public Information may be established. This would require another Act of Parliament and probably would be delayed until the session is underway.

Justice Minister Lapointe who has been a member of the House of Commons more than 35 years, longer than any other member, has been rumored as likely to retire after the election. But Mr. Lapointe himself has given no sign of leaving the political arena. He is 63, two years younger than the Prime Minister, and was one of the most vigorous workers in the campaign.

One vacancy exists in the Senate, created by the death of Hon. George Lynch-Staunton, Hamilton, a Conservative appointee. This and several administrative posts are expected to be filled shortly. The latter include the positions of parliamentary Librarian, King's Printer and Registrar of the Supreme Court of Canada.

Selection of a successor to the late Lord Tweedsmuir as Governor-General of Canada is expected to be made at an early date. Lord Tweedsmuir died February 11, and the duties of his office are being performed by Sir Lyman Duff, Chief Justice of Canada, as administrator.

Expect to Release Report

Among the outstanding domestic issues expected to occupy the government immediately is the report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial relations. It was expected to have been ready early this year but, when the election was called, Mr. King asked the Commission to withhold it until after the vote.

This report is expected to be released after parliament meets and to be submitted during the summer to a Dominion Provincial Conference.

Some form of unemployment insurance probably will provide an important item on the agenda of this conference. It is believed the government aims at establishing some form of Unemployment Insurance to meet the problems of industrial reaction when the need for war materials is ended.

During the campaign negotiations toward agreement on the long-projected St. Lawrence Waterways Development apparently were dropped and well-informed circles here state there is little possibility of the issue becoming a live issue in the near future.

LOST DEPOSITS TOTAL $31,400

157 Contestants Fail to Poll One-Half as Many Votes as the Winning Candidate

By the Canadian Press

The Federal Government will collect probably more than $31,000 in lost deposits of candidates in yesterday's election.

On the basis of incomplete returns, in the civilian vote, compilations by The Canadian Press today showed 157 contestants in the big field of 669 had failed to poll more than one-half the vote of the elected member in scores of constituencies.

In many constituencies more than one candidate lost deposits, and the total of contributors to the national treasury may well exceed 157—at a cost of $31,400 to them—when the complete vote is known.

Heaviest losers appeared to be in Quebec, where indications today were that 48 had lost their deposits. In Ontario 41 were possible losers; in Alberta 20 and in Manitoba 18.

No Losses in P. E. I.

The one province where there appeared no likelihood of a lost deposit was Prince Edward Island, electing four members in three constituencies. There were eight candidates for the four seats. The Yukon was in a similar position. with two candidates contesting the one seat.

The probable losers in other provinces were: Saskatchewan, 12; British Columbia, 10; Nova Scotia, 6; New Brunswick, 2.

Provinces showing the largest number of losers presented a variety of candidates not aligned with any major party, and there were many three and four-cornered fights.

The likelihood of recounts was still clouded in uncertainty today because returns from many constituencies were far from complete and the soldier vote could not yet be counted into the totals. There was nothing definite regarding recounts, if any, in the heavy-vote provinces of Ontario and Quebec, but indications from the western returns were that three recounts may be necessary in Manitoba and three in British Columbia. In the east, Nova Scotia offered the possibility of one recount.

Familiar Figures Will be Missed In New Parliament

Ottawa, March 27—(CP)—Many familiar figures will be missed from the halls of parliament when the new House of Commons assembles in May.

Among the veteran parliamentarians defeated in yesterday's general election were:

R. S. White, Dean of the House, a Conservative, in Montreal St. Antoine-Westmount.

Hon. C. H. Cahan, Secretary of State in the Bennett Government, in Montreal St. Lawrence - St. George.

Hon. Hugh Stewart, Minister of Public Works in the Bennett Government, in Leeds.

T. A. Thompson, Conservative authority on the dairy industry, in Lanark.

Miss Agnes Macphail, first woman to sit in the Parliament of Canada, in Grey-Bruce.

R. L. Baker, veteran Toronto Conservative in Toronto-Eglinton.

A. A. Heaps, veteran labor member, in Winnipeg north.

Malcolm McLean, veteran Saskatchewan Liberal, in Melfort.

Others long prominent in parliament dropped out of their own accord and did not contest seats. These included:

Hon. W. R. Motherwell, former Liberal Minister of Agriculture and pioneer Saskatchewan farmer and public man.

Hon. Earl Lawson of Toronto, former Minister of National Revenue and contender for the Conservative leadership both in the Ontario Provincial and Federal arenas.

Charles Bothwell, of Swift Current, Sask., Liberal authority on election law and chairman of the Special Committee which revised the Election Act.

Dr. Bruce Promises Support of Canada's War Effort

Toronto, March 27—(CP)—Support of the government's war effort was promised today by Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, successful National Government candidate in Toronto-Parkdale and former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario.

Pledged to a program of uniting Canada in a "maximum war effort," Dr. Bruce said after his election was conceded last night that he would give the administration of Prime Minister Mackenzie King "every possible support to enable it to make Canada's contribution as effective as possible."

Dr. Bruce said he had entered the election only when it had been found impossible to obtain the candidate of a Liberal as National Government nominee in Parkdale.

9 Liberal Governments Hold Office in Canada

Ottawa, March 27 (CP) — A question mark still standing at the end of last Thursday's Provincial election in Alberta, Canada today has nine Liberal governments—at Ottawa and in eight of the nine provinces.

Election of Prime Minister Mackenzie King's Liberal party in yesterday's Dominion voting made the party's country-wide control almost unanimous. The Manitoba administration is officially designated as Liberal-Progressive.

The overnight standing in the Alberta Provincial election showed the Social Credit forces of Premier Aberhart had elected 24 members in the 57-seat House; the Independent 15, and 18 undecided.

LARGEST MAJORITY EVER RECORDED FOR LIBERALS

Mr. King Says Highest Possible Service Has Been Rendered

LEADERS' REACTIONS

'It is the Decision of the People,' Says Hon. Dr. Manion

Ottawa, March 27—(CP)—Party leaders and stalwarts had their say after the civilian vote in the Dominion election showed the greatest majority ever recorded for the Liberal Party and the failure of Hon. R. J. Manion's National Government followers in their bid for power.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King thanked the Canadian people for their support in a national broadcast last night and said:

"I believe that all who have given the present administration their support today have rendered the highest possible service to our country at this time. Not to our country alone, but also to Britain and France and to those small nations whose freedom has been destroyed, threatened or imperilled by the most relentless, cruel and brutal of forces."

'Decision of the People', Says Manion

Dr. Manion, in a national broadcast, said he had little to say but declared: "The electors of Canada have decided to continue as they are. That is their right."

Dr. Manion's voice was husky from his long and strenuous campaign and he spoke briefly. "The responsibility continues to be Mr. King's not only to carry on our war effort but to prepare for the after-war. That is the decision of the people. I have no complaint."

J. S. Woodsworth, leader of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation who was returned to Parliament in Winnipeg North Centre pointed to the active service vote yet to come and his own "very narrow margin." "No one can tell yet who is elected," he said.

But the C. C. F. chieftain thought the result in his constituency indicated voters there did not agree with the Liberal position that "nothing else matters but the war."

Hepburn Takes 'Long-Range View'

Premier Hepburn of Ontario squeezed his reaction into these 11 words: "I am still taking a long-range view of the situation."

Justice Minister Lapointe termed the result the "victory of Canadian unity" while Premier Godbout of Quebec was "particularly pleased that Quebec took the path toward this triumph."

Postmaster General Power, returned to Parliament in Quebec South, said: "Now we have a truly national government," and Fisheries Minister Michaud, successful in Restigouche-Madawaska, declared the verdict proved Canada was "more united just now than ever before."

"Very pleased" with the result was Premier Pattullo of British Columbia. He figured it would "work well for Canada."

Leaders Almost Meet

The victorious and defeated leaders almost met face to face as they left the broadcasting station. They were assigned different rooms in the studio but passed within hailing distance of each other in leaving but did not meet.

Mr. King expressed particular satisfaction in the election in Kingston of Defence Minister Rogers, "whose character, ability and integrity," he said, "have risen triumphant over a concentrated sequence of unwarranted attacks."

The vote expressed the people's disapproval "of methods of political campaigning which, if permitted, would soon destroy free institutions of government and the accepted standards of our public life," Mr. King said.

Quoting from the speech of Abraham Lincoln after his victory in the Civil War election in the United States, the Prime Minister said: "It adds nothing to my satisfaction that any other man may be disappointed by the results. I do not impugn the motives of any one opposed to me. It is no pleasure to me to triumph over any one but I give thanks to the Almighty for this evidence of the people's resolution to stand by free government and the rights of humanity."

ADMINISTRATION OF RT. HON. MR. KING IS RETURNED

With the largest majority ever given in a general election in Canada, the Government of the Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King has been returned to office in Tuesday's impressive sweep across the Dominion.

In such a time the people naturally have their thoughts centred on one matter—the war and its prosecution. There is seen a desire to avoid changing from one administration to another in a trying period of history.

The result of the polling will be accepted by the King Government as a fresh mandate and a proof of the will of the people that the Liberal Government carry on its policy in the prosecution of the war in which Canada is now engaged.

Throughout the campaign there was stressed this thought by speakers on the public platform that the war must be prosecuted and the only question at issue was whether the people wished the King Government to continue along the lines of its effort or would prefer to have another and a new administration to prosecute the war effort on behalf of Canada. The people decided in favor of the administration of the Rt. Hon. Mr. King.

MORE TOURISTS EXPECTED IN 1940

An industry which runs up to two hundred and seventy-five million dollars and over is Canada's—the tourists who come to visit the Dominion being the source of that trade. It is more than an industry. It is a sign of international amity and fellowship. How popular Canada is to the United States tourists is shown by the fact that all but thirteen millions of this amount was expended in 1939 by the friends from the great Republic to the south. One hundred and sixty-five millions is brought in and left by motorists.

It pays Canada to have good roads to facilitate the visit of the guest tourists who become the best friends this country can have. It pays Canada to have these tourists carry away the happiest recollections of Canadian hospitality and of moderate charges at stopping places. This year there is the added attraction in Canada. Americans are hereby provided with opportunity for travel in a large country of varied interests, when the opportunities for travel in Europe and Asia are largely curtailed and the Americans will find it advantageous to buy in Canada because of the very favourable premium allowed on American money as compared with Canadian money. It should be generally known in the United States that Canadians will allow this premium on U.S. money. The bringing in to American money will be a great advantage in the purchase of war supplies from the United States.

Altogether there is every promise of one of the greatest years of touring across the border which will prove of mutual benefit to Americans and Canadians.

SHUTTING OFF GERMANY'S SUPPLIES

British submarines have been having success in interfering with the German merchant ships bearing iron ore and supplies from Sweden. True to the British sense of justice due warning is given, and opportunity provided to the crews to get safely away from the vessels.

This sense of justice differs from that demonstrated by the Nazis in preying upon shipping. But British justice is one of the proofs of the victory that is to come. British honor recognizes that lives of crews are sacred and nothing will keep them from observance of that rule of conduct.

In these successes the British submarines have invaded a mined area in or near the approach to the Baltic. This is a new phase of the war which still is largely a war on sea and in the air. The move towards the Baltic has apparently great possibilities in the minds of those in charge of the Admiralty.

Whether the naval war will be carried into the Baltic is yet to be shown but it was carried on in that sea in the first war with Germany.

So effective is the British blockade in closing the entry from the North Sea into the Baltic that German freighters have been ordered home.

ALLIES' GOOD RECORD

Not a British nor French merchant ship has been lost in the past week, so said a despatch on Tuesday

This is encouraging and significant of the effectiveness of the British blockade and sea patrol. The losses in this war have been very much smaller on sea than in the war of 1914-18. And the losses through German attack have been diminishing.

The quiet resolve of the British people and their steady determination must have a very demoralizing effect upon the enemy chiefs, who know what happened in the last war through the efficiency of the British navy and the blockade.

'HEALTH AXIOMS'

"Health Axioms," one of the booklets issued by the Department of Pensions and National Health is a collection of facts relating to everything concerning health. Some of the subjects are nature's laws, sunlight, worry, relaxation, posture, work, baths, home, noise, clothing and so on.

Here for instance is a comment on nature's laws—"When you have offended someone and feel sorry, you hasten to apologize, don't you? Well, that is what you should do when you don't feel well. You have offended nature in some way. The proper course is to seek professional advice on how to propitiate Mother Nature and get back into her 'good books.' You cannot be well so long as you are at 'outs' with nature."

On worry it says—"Technically any emotional upset such as anger, fear, remorse, worry, releases powerfully - disturbing substances from our glands. The stomach is upset when you worry, just as when you are terribly disturbed over something. And the body has to summon all its forces to fight the destructive action you thus set in motion. It is, then, actually possible to worry yourself to death."

On work the comment is—"Things not used become useless as witness the wings of some feathered creatures. If a man does not use his body, either in labor or in exercise, it too becomes soft, flabby and eventually of little use when it is really needed."

Bath—"Water is among the oldest tonics known to man, both for internal and external use. The actual physical act of washing or taking a bath is itself a health measure and when we consider how cleansing of the skin refreshes the body, it is easy to understand the profit as well as the pleasure of bathing."

Home—"Even in such a simple matter as interior decorating, there is a health factor. Those interested in making the most of their home surroundings will appreciate the importance of having proper lighting, both day and night, thorough air-conditioning, and properly balanced decorations, both as to arrangement and color. After all, you owe it to yourself to get the best out of the place you have to live in."

Copies of this booklet along with others on typhoid fever, smoking, sleep, holiday health and hay fever and asthma may be had free on request to the Department of Pensions and National Health, Ottawa.

Fat Foods For Overweights and Underweights

Practically all reducing diets emphasize the importance of cutting down on starch foods—bread, potatoes, sugar, pastry—if satisfactory reduction is to be obtained. Now starch foods give energy, help to make the fat foods burn more completely, and should be eaten in certain amounts even by those who are overweight. However, one of the reasons why starch foods are cut down in reducing diets is because they are more attractive to the eye than fat foods and are thus more likely to be eaten in large quantities. And, if starch is not used or burned up in the body, what is not used gets stored away as fat.

What about fat in the daily diet? For the overweights who wish to lose weight, the tremendous food or fuel value of fat should never be forgotten; any quantity of fat food has twice the food value of the same quantity of either of the other main classes of foods, that is, starches and proteins (meat, eggs, fish, cereals). Thus we find that in prescribing the day's menu for overweights, the regular fat foods are greatly reduced and more of the foods low in fat are in the menu.

For the same reason—fat foods being rich in fuel value—underweights are advised to eat fat foods up to the point where the amount of food does not cause indigestion and spoil the appetite.

A table which should help overweights to pick out foods they like that are low in fats, and underweights to select foods they like and (which agree with them) that are rich in fats, is given by Dr. R. G. Sinclair, Department of Biochemistry, Queens' University, Kingston, Canada, in a booklet 'Nutrition in Every Day practice,' issued by the Canadian Medical Association. There are three divisions, (a) foods low in fat, (b) foods containing a medium amount of fat, (c) foods rich in fat.

Foods low in fat: Less than 2 per cent of fat: vegetables, most fruits, cereals, bread, egg whites, and buttermilk.

Foods with medium amount of fat —2 to 10 per cent— cream soups, milk, veal, chicken, turkey, lean beef, crab meat.

Foods rich in fats—above 10 per cent—butter, and other fats and oils, salmon, tuna, lamb, pork, duck, goose, egg yolk.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MARCH 27th., 1920.

At the annual meeting of the Belleville Retail Merchants' Association which was held at the Y. M. C. A., the President, Mr. D. V. Sinclair, presided, and Mr. B. F. Jennings acted as secretary. It was decided to postpone the election of officers to a later date. Mr. Beal, Provincial Organizer of the Retail Merchants' Association, who was present at the meeting, stated that the Association could become a section of the Chamber of Commerce, but must retain its own identity and have its own secretary. On motion of Mr. F. B. Smith seconded by Ald. Charles Hanna it was decided that the Association would associate itself with the Belleville Chamber of Commerce.

30 YEARS AGO

MARCH 27th., 1910.

We are rapidly nearing the end of the finest month of March seen in this country for a good many years. For which let us be thankful.

Something should be done with the footbridge. With a crowd upon it, the venerable structure swings in a way to frighten timorous ladies.

Mr. Ernest Twining, an old Belleville boy, now residing in Toronto, is spending a few days in town.

Mr. H. J. Clarke is attending the teachers' convention in Toronto.

Mr. William Holley was home from Toronto to spend Easter.

Mr. T. McQuaig of Cornwall is visiting his parents here.

Friends in the city have received interesting letters from Glencoe Hulme, Walter Mills and Jack McNair, who are now serving with the Canadian forces in the war in South Africa.

It is a little early yet, but how about a public bath in this city? Don't all speak at once, gentlemen of the city council.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Powell of Watertown, N. Y., are visiting relatives in the city.

Mr. W. J. McCamon is spending a few days in Toronto.

Police Magistrate Flint and Crown Attorney, P. J. M. Anderson attended court in Trenton to-day.

Mr. C. Bull has purchased from Mr. Phil. Harte, the famous St. Bernard dog, St. Plenlimmon the Third.

Messrs. J. E. Walmsley and T. J. Spafford, grocers, have dissolved partnership. Mr. Walmsley will continue the business.

Mr. Seath, Inspector of High Schools, is in the city on inspection duty.

Mr. W. Flint Jones of this city will preach in the Methodist Church at Colborne, next Sunday.

A farewell social will be tendered this evening to the Rev. T. W. Bowen, pastor of the Congregational Church, Hotel Street, who is leaving for a new field of labor.

The beautiful grove the property of Mr. James Murphy, Tweed, was last week donated to the Rev. Father Fleming, upon which to erect the Roman Catholic School. It is situated a half mile from the village on the bank of the river and is considered to be the most attractive site in the township. The property is worth $400.

Find Horsesteak French Delicacy

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD

Paris (CP)—"Beefsteak de Cheval" is a featured dish on the menu of a little restaurant in the Latin Quarter frequented by Canadians. The specialties, desserts and cider are Breton—and the waitresses have an accent exactly like some of our French-Canadians.

As in many other Paris restaurants, the menu is neatly chalked up on a small square of blackboard. There among the other entrees is "horsesteak" or as they put it naively, "horse-beefsteak!"

In both London and Paris where the Canadian prejudice against eating his four-footed friend is unknown one often sees horse-butcher shops—because over the doorway always hang three life-sized horse heads, painted gold. But somehow it never really registered that anybody ever went into buy.

We have now, however, for the first time encountered horse at the table. When the round-cheeked, bereted Frenchman facing us ordered his horse steak gravely, it was a shock. When it came it looked uncommonly like beefsteak, and we voiced our interest.

The Frenchman nodded, a twinkle in his eye. "A young and tender horse steak is better than a tough beefsteak, I assure you, mademoiselle," and he swallowed each bite with an air of perfect enjoyment. Recalling a recent decree dealing with the consumption of horse meat which read: "No horse under 12 years old shall be butchered for human consumption," we wondered just how tender his steak really was.

Eating is a serious business in France. Lunch "hour" for everybody including sales-girls and stenographers is from two to two-and-a-half hours. War hasn't changed this in the least although it has made some slight changes in the aspect of the restaurants.

One Parisian peculiarity is its thousands of tiny restaurants, some of them so small that they cannot hold more than 12 or 15 clients at a time. This is not indication of the quality of the kitchen. Indeed a veritable hole in the wall like "Chez Rosalie" which contains only three small tables is one of the famous.

Air Fighting At 50 Below

London, (CP)—An air battle in a temperature of 50 degrees below zero gave Royal Air Force fighter command men something to talk about during one of the frigid spells of a record-breaking British winter.

The planes spotted a Heinkel at a height of 25,000 feet off the northeast coast of Scotland. But the sub-zero conditions didn't affect the fighting efficiency of the British craft for the enemy machine was brought down.

Fighter pilots keep snug even in such temperatures thanks to heat from the engines which circulates through their small enclosed cabin.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Rotation and wind! Not so very long ago it was believed that the earth did not rotate, and it was the sun's revolving around the earth that gave us day and night. If such a condition existed the direction of all winds would be simply determined by the warm and cold areas; that is, in general, surface winds would move from cold to warmer areas and not be deflected except by material obstacles such as mountains. However, due to the rotation of the earth, the winds are deflected to the right in the northern hemisphere and to the left in the southern. Thus a wind starting out as a north wind in Canada or the United States would eventually become a northeast, and finally an east wind.

"Nobody Wants to Sweat Nowadays"

"The trouble with the world today," said a man the other evening in the course of an informal conversation, "is that nobody wants to sweat. Yes, you can talk all you want about unemployment and tell me that people really want to get work and can't, but I just plain don't believe it. Anyone can earn his bread by the sweat of his brow if he is willing, but how many are willing?

"Everyone wants a "white-collar job," but even then there are mighty few who give you an honest day's work for their day's pay. Ask the employers and they'll make the same cynical remark that one boss did when he was asked how many were working for him and he replied 'Darned few, but I have a big payroll.' Ask the man at the top what he wants in his employees and he will tell you 'faithful and intelligent service' but try and get it. Ask someone to do a little extra work, to stay overtime, or ask a question that is outside the regular routine and see the blank stare or the sullen expression that comes over the ordinary face'.

"Do you find craftsmen any more in carpentry, furnishings, papering and painting, iron-work etc.? Do you know a boy who would be willing to work as an apprentice for long hours with small pay so that some day he will really know his job? Darned right you don't. Do you know many girls who are really interested in housework? Sewing? Handwork of any kind? I'll bet you don't. As far as I can see the modern generation is only interested in two things in connection with work, the weekly pay envelope and the hour they can get away from the job. Don't tell me there are not still rewards for those who will get out after them and deserve them. It's all tommyrot to say there are no opportunities. There never were opportunities—you had to make them!"

The Hired Hand

It's a sweeping indictment. I wonder if it is true. In the United States they are seriously concerned over what they call the "nomadic worker," or the "vanishing American." He is the hired man on the nation's farm. A majority of American farms today depend on the laborers "going through the country," instead of the old-fashioned hired man who was considered almost one of the family.

One State service estimates that today more than a million workers move from farm to farm and State to State, "some travelling several hundred miles in a year, following the crops."

The farm security administration points out that in the eastern half of the country "several thousand migratory workers" follow the cryps from Florida and the Gulf States to Michigan and New Jersey.

At present, these nomads of the soil are converging on Florida for the new harvest season, where they will remain until late spring, harvesting beans, celery, lettuce, tomatoes and other truck crops and citrus fruit in the flower State.

By late spring, these groups will start moving northward again. They will follow the harvest up the Atlantic coast, gathering peaches and asparagus in Georgia, asparagus in South Carolina, truck crops, strawberries and potatoes in Virginia, potatoes and truck crops in Maryland and Delaware, and asparagus, white potatoes, strawberries, beans, peas and cranberries in New Jersey and New York.

They will start the southward trek again in the fall, most of them starting all over again early next winter in Florida.

Other groups of wandering farm workers will be found similarly following the harvest seasons on the West Coast, working northward toward Canada, then returning southward once more.

Perhaps the once-prized regular farm hand has joined the new trend but, at any rate, the extension service reports, the modern farm nomad has brought virtual oblivion to the hired worker of the olden days.

This is bad business for both the country and the employer. It does not make for stability. It does not make for home-owners who will settle down to take a real pride in their own places. And home-owners, married people who aim to stay in one place and raise a family are the backbone of any nation.

Girls to Blame

Some people think the girls are to blame. That they're far more interested in living in a trailer and "seeing the world," than they are in having babies and foundling a family. Maybe that's true but I don't think there's anything to choose between the sexes.

The other day I read a true story in an English magazine about the wife of a weaver whose mother and father had been separated in her childhood. She went with her mother and most of the time lived in workhouses and drudged at the most menial labor getting anything from 25 cents to $1.25 a week. When she got $1.25 they had two rooms in a slum for 60 cents a week with 60 cents to spend on food and clothes.

When she was 23, she was getting $4.50 a week. When she married the weaver she and her husband finally opened a "fish and chip" shop and have prospered so that they have two fine sons and a nice house in a good locality which the wife looks after with loving care. She knows what it is to have nothing and to have arrived where she is, literally by the sweat of her brow.

So those were the "good old days", were they, when work was easy to get? If you would ask our forefathers what they did when they first came to Canada and how they made their living, I wonder what you would hear?

Bishop's Epistle Reaches England Via N. W. Passage

LONDON, (CP)—What is believed to be the first letter to reach England from Canada via the Northwest Passage has arrived here for the secretary of the press and publications committee of the Anglican Church Assembly.

The letter, mailed by Rt. Rev. Archibald L. Fleming, Canadian Bishop of the Arctic, completed its 10,000-mile jaunt by motorship, ice-sled, dog team, airplane, transcontinental train and ocean liner, in about 17 months.

Posted at Craig Harbor, Ellesmere Island in the Arctic, on Aug. 26, 1938, the letter bears postmarks and a statement by the postal superintendent at Edmonton, Alberta, that it reached Arctic Bay on Aug. 28, 1938, and Fort Ross, Bellot Strait, Aug. 31, 1938.

The motorship Aklavik was unable to complete its journey to Fort Ross in the fall of 1938 because of ice conditions and the letter remained there until March 15, 1938, when it was carried by dog team to King William Island. Police Relay

After another five-month delay at King William Island the letter finally was picked up by a motorship and reached Perry River in September 1939. From Perry River it was carried to Cambridge Bay by a Royal Canadian Mounted Police patrol dog team, reaching Cambridge Bay Nov. 24, 1939.

On Jan. 8, 1940, another Royal Canadian Mounted Police dog team took the letter to Coppermine, Northwest Territories, and last Jan. 25 a Mackenzie Air Service plane picked it up and brought it to Edmonton, where it arrived on Jan. 27.

From Edmonton the letter was forwarded to England without further exceptional delay.

Spring's Charm Dawns in Paris In War's Gloom

By GLADYS M. ARNOLD
Canadian Press Correspondent

Paris (CP)—The rainy season is in—a sort of soft misty rain which at night turns the streets into strips of black satin.

Though it is distinctly more dangerous to circulate after dark because drivers find it difficult to see pedestrians until they are upon them—still Paris has a charm and beauty it had lost when the glare of electricity turned the streets into perpetual day.

The automobile lights and street traffic signs are spots of color which give it almost a carnival air, for car lamps are in many colors; Red, orange and deep yellow are favorites, but all shades of blue, green and violet bob up among them so that the Place de la Concorde with its swirl of cars in the early night darkness, hundreds turning about the obelisk (Cleopatra's Needle) and the fountains and then out into its many radiating streets is a constant play of interweaving colored pinpoints of light reflecting in the wet pavement.

At each street corner the flash of traffic red, yellow, green, add their bit; and the whirring swish as cars roll along is discreetly intermingled with subdued musical horns whose use until the war began was forbidden in Paris.

At each stop and start the policeman in his new white cape and shining metal helmet steps out from the sidewalk where he usually stands prudently, and where the signal light above his head alternately bathes his helmet and face, now in a glow of faustian red, and then a blur of spectral green. The effect is dramatic.

Hatless in Paris!

The feeble light of the street lamps produce some strange impressions. It catches the gleam of hair for many girls are now going hatless (a custom never practiced in Paris) there is the dry rattle of military raincoats, a flash as the gold on cuff or cap reflects the light.

But the deepest impression of all is made by the relative silence which darkness induces, and at the same time the feeling that this darkness is alive, warm and electric. On rounding a corner, one collides suddenly with a soldier embracing his girl; time is short, leave is rare, and the darkness offers such opportunities.

The wind, whipping around a corner, blows up the shawl and causes the old paper woman to crouch closer into her corner.

"Are you selling many?"

She shakes her head. "People don't want to stop—they want to get home and I guess some of them don't see me in the darkness. Some of my regular clients are gone."

"Do you find you can make enough to live?"

"I manage," she said, philosophically. "One must, it is the war."

Parisians have become accustomed to the obscurity and even those who at first described it as lugubrious have been slowly conquered by this different Paris. They stop suddenly, charmed and surprised by a night scene along the Seine, the romantic allure of a pale street lamp against the walls of an old church. "Why, it's beautiful," they say. "It's almost a pity to bring back the lights."

Labor Slow-Down Found in Germany

The increasing difficulty of maintaining industrial production at a war tempo was one reason behind German anxiety to end the fighting in Finland. This also helps to explain why preparations for a great military offensive go forward simultaneously with a drive for peace.

Every sign in Germany today indicates urgency. The chief impression one carries away is that the great test of strength must be risked soon or not at all, writes Anne O'Hare McCormick from Brussels, Belgium in the New York Times.

With the cessation of hostilities in Finland, the German supply line is safer. Russia is freed to defend the Baku oil fields from possible attacks; supplies from Sweden are in less danger of being cut off, and Soviet deliveries to the Reich are likely to increase, but the acquisition of raw materials is only one factor in the supply problem. The military effort depends on two others almost equally important.

The fabrication of war materials at the required rate implies the utmost cooperation with the government on the part of the manufacturers on the one hand and labor on the other.

Slow Down by Labor

In the Rhineland there are many evidences of a slackening in the rhythm of production, due not to shortage of raw materials, until now sufficient for military purposes, but to a slow-down by labor. It was learned that approximately 30 per cent of the workers do not turn up on Mondays in the great plants in the Ruhr district.

In one factory, normally employing 2,000 men, 3,000 are kept on the payroll in an effort to maintain the ordinary production level, while the average number at work is only 1,500. As far as production is concerned, the effect of the sixty-hour week is virtually nullified.

According to the best information available, the workers' attitude is not the result of subversive activities or a movement to sabotage production. When he is on the job, he works as efficiently as usual. Partly it is a form of passive resistance to the long hours imposed on labor, but mostly it reflects the weariness characteristic of the population in general.

Raising wages would have no effect. Since the necessaries of life are strictly rationed and luxuries are too expensive for the ordinary worker to buy, he has no inducement to earn more money than he can spend. One manufacturer manages to keep a full force at work six days a week by distributing food not on the ration cards and putting a large proportion of real coffee into the mixture served to his employees.

Too Many to Punish

Punishment has no effect either. There are severe penalties for labor truancy and at first the absentees were arrested and fined, but the number of laggards is now too great for these measures. An interesting feature of the situation is that the employers make no attempt to coerce the workers. They leave the problem to the Labor Front, which has full control of labor, with the result that the antagonism of the workers for the management is now transferred to the party representative placed in every factory ostensibly in the interest of labor.

In pre-Hitler days when Communists were numerous in the Ruhr plants a manufacturer could not walk through his factory without being insulted, but now employers and employees are in the same boat, both under government control, and a bond of sympathy has developed between them. The industrialist has no more incentive than the men to increase his earnings.

The great incentive—of straining every nerve to win the war—seems to be as lacking in one group as the other. Although the Rhineland is on the front, the war spirit grows more tepid as time goes on. The threat of invasion of the Netherlands had a chilling effect on people who have close ties with that country.

Complain of Children's Diet

Restrictions are not accepted so readily as in Berlin. Vitamin C pills were given to the school children in Cologne with the admonition to make no publicity about it, but the parents broadcast the news as a proof that their children are undernourished.

In the Rhine cities Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop's visit to the Pope was interpreted as an attempt to win support in this strategic zone, which is almost entirely Catholic. Obviously, support of the regime is very lukewarm, but there is no real rebellion because no group in the Reich knows what kind of government could replace the present regime without a terrible breakdown.

Moreover, the attitude of labor, while it represents a potential weakness in the prosecution of war, does not mean that the Rhineland would not fight and fight hard in defense of the Fatherland.

Everywhere in Germany the causes that led up to the conflict are subordinated to the fear of the terms that will be imposed if the other side wins. The Rhineland especially fears partition and, at a showdown, this fear is perhaps strong enough to overcome all other feelings.

WAR-TIME

nett Government, suffered personal defeat in Fort William while the Prime Minister was conceded election late last night in Prince Albert.

Based on Civilian Vote

Election of candidates was conceded on the basis of the civilian vote but the possibility existed that when the ballots of between 85,000 and 90,000 soldiers, sailors and airmen are counted results in a few constituencies might be changed.

In most constituencies, however, the winning candidates held substantial majorities that could scarcely be overturned when the active service vote, taken in England and Canada before election day, is reported next week.

Mr. Mackenzie King's appeal to the country was made when the party standing in the House of Commons stood as follows: Liberal, 169; Conservative, 38; Social Credit, 15; Co-operative Commonwealth Federation, 7; Independent Liberal, 5; Liberal-Progressive 3; Independent, 2; Independent Conservative, 1; U.F.O.-Labor, 1; United Reform 1; vacant, 4.

Shoots Above Record

Early this morning the Liberal total shot up above the record 169 as it had been apparent it would since before midnight. Mr. King was assured that when he calls parliament, probably in early May, his Opposition would be even smaller than it was on the dramatic day in January when dissolution ended a four-hour session.

Dr. Manion's National Government group was no larger than it was as the Conservative unit in the last House. The new democracy representation from Alberta was half that of the Social Credit band in the last House. Only the C.C.F. made a slight gain.

Entire Cabinet Returned

While the entire Liberal war cabinet was returned without casualty, opposition groups suffered heavily. Among the vanquished were these:

Dr. Manion by Dan McIvor, Liberal, in Fort William.

Hon. C. H. Cahan, former Conservative Secretary of State, in Montreal St. Lawrence-St. George.

Hon. H. A. Stewart, former Conservative Minister of Public Works, in Leeds.

A. A. Heaps, veteran C.C.F. member, in Winnipeg North.

R. S. White, Conservative dean of the House of Commons, in Montreal St. Antoine-Westmount.

Hon. Maurice Dupre, former Conservative Solicitor-General, in Quebec West and South.

Hon. R. D. Morand, former Conservative cabinet minister in Essex East.

Hon. W. D. Herridge, founder of the New Democracy movement and former Canadian Minister to Washington, in Kindersley.

M. A. MacPherson, runner-up to Dr. Manion for the Conservative leadership in 1938, in Regina.

Among the successful National Government candidates were Hon. R. B. Hanson, former Minister of Trade and Commerce, in York-Sunbury, and Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, former Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, in Toronto Parkdale.

Agnes Macphail Defeated

As notable a conquest as any in the country was accomplished by W. E. Harris, Liberal, in Grey-Bruce where Miss Agnes Macphail was defeated for the first time since she became member of parliament in 1921. Miss Macphail, after five election triumphs, ran third in a three-cornered contest.

J. S. Woodsworth, C.C.F., leader, was conceded election in Winnipeg North Centre on the basis of the civilian vote, but he was not so sure about the ultimate result himself. Mr. Woodsworth commented that it was impossible to tell who had won until the active service vote was counted. His lead over A. R. Macdonell, Liberal, was 185 votes.

C.C.F. Leaders Returned

M. J. Coldwell, National chairman of the C.C.F., was returned in Rosetown-Biggar and John Blackmore, Leader of the Social Credit group in the last House, was re-elected in Lethbridge where he ran as New Democracy candidate.

Indications were quick to appear after closing of the polls in the Maritimes that the National Government Party was to have hard sledding against Liberal candidates and early returns favoring the King Government were decisive.

Prince Edward Island returned a solid block of four Liberals; Nova Scotia elected 11 Liberals out of a possible 12 and only New Brunswick, solidly Liberal in 1935 with one exception, shifted away from the government; dividing its 10 seats equally between King and Manion followers.

The first candidate conceded election in the country was Finance Minister J. L. Ralston in the Prince Edward Island constituency of Prince. Revenue Minister J. L. Ilsley quickly joined him from Digby-Annapolis-Kings. New Brunswick's cabinet representative, Hon. J. E. Michaud, was successful a bit later in Restigouche-Madawaska.

No Doubt of Result

An hour or so later there could be no doubt of the election result as Quebec ballots rolled in for the government, returning 61 Liberals and three Independent Liberals. Election in the 65th. Quebec riding, Three Rivers, was deferred owing to the death Monday night of the Liberal candidate, Willie Poisson.

Ontario elected 25 National government men, the same representation the Conservatives had from the province in the last House. Here it was that Liberal defences, if they had weaknesses, were expected to yield—but the Liberals returned 57 followers, including two Liberal-Progressives.

This was a one-seat gain for the government and it was at the expense of Miss Macphail, running as a United Farmers of Ontario-Labor candidate.

Perhaps the most surprising result in Ontario was the switch to the Liberal column of Leeds, which never before deviated from a Conservative course at elections since the constituency was created in 1903. Member since 1921, Hon. H. A. Stewart was defeated there by George T. Fulford.

First member elected in Ontario was Hon. Norman Rogers, Minister of National Defence and the butt of intensive Conservative criticism during the campaign. Mr. Rogers retained Kingston by a sizeable majority over T. A. Kidd, National Government, former Speaker of the Ontario Legislature.

Toronto Elects Three Liberals

Toronto, a noted Tory stronghold, named three Liberals — Sam Factor in Spadina; Fred Hoblitzell, former Ontario amateur golf champion, in Eglinton, and Arthur W. Roebuck, one-time Attorney-General in Ontario's Hepburn government, in Trinity. Mr. Roebuck resigned his Ontario Legislature seat to run for parliament.

Three C.C.F. gains from Liberals marked voting in Saskatchewan. Mackenzie, Melfort and Yorkton swung away from the government whose only gain was from Social Credit in Kindersley.

Social Credit held all but two of Alberta's 17 seats in the last House, but the Liberals made inroads yesterday, capturing six seats. British Columbia also contributed gains to the Liberals.

Ontario was the scene of some of the sharpest political skirmishing of the election campaign and its verdict was awaited with especial interest because of the critical attitude adopted by the Liberal Premier, Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, towards the Federal Liberal Government.

17 Seats Change

Although the party standing in the province underwent no material change individuals met with varying fortunes. No less than 17 of the 82 seats changed their party allegiance. Liberals captured seven seats from National Government supporters and one from Miss Macphail, Conservatives captured seven from the Liberals.

The Liberal gains included such traditional Conservative seats as Hamilton East, Hamilton West, Wentworth, Toronto Eglinton, Leeds and Lanark. Conservatives stormed and won a Liberal stronghold in Kent and won back Frontenac-Addington, Hastings-Peterborough, Hastings South, Huron North, Peterborough West and York West, all of which went to the Liberals in the sweep of 1935.

Just as in 1935 Ontario participated in the nationwide swing to the Liberal Party but gave the Conservative Party which campaigned for National Government a secure foothold in Parliament. Ontario's 25 National Government supporters saved the party headed by Hon. R. J. Manion from virtual extinction.

Manion Defeated

Dr. Manion, himself, however, met defeat in the Northwestern Ontario constituency of Fort William. Rev. Dan McIvor who wrested the seat from him in 1935 when Dr. Manion was Minister of Railways and Canals, retained it against Dr. Manion, the Party leader.

All Ontario Ministers, Hon. Norman Rogers, National Defence, Hon. C. D. Howe, Transport, Hon. W. D. Euler, Trade and Commerce, and Hon. Norman McLarty, Labor, retained their seats.

Mr. Rogers emerged from a strenuous fight in Kingston against Thomas A. Kidd who resigned a seat in the Ontario legislature to oppose him as the first candidate whose election was conceded in Ontario. As holder of the key war portfolio much of the criticism directed at the King Government centred on him.

Sylvanus Apps Defeated

Sylvanus Apps, star with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League and National Government candidate, was defeated in Brant by George E. Wood, Liberal. Wood's margin on the civilian vote was 101.

Arthur Roebuck, another Provincial member who entered the fight, was elected in Toronto-Trinity, the seat held in the last parliament by Hugh Plaxton. Mr. Roebuck resigned as Attorney-General of Ontario a few years ago following a quarrel with Premier Hepburn and since then has followed an independent course in the legislature.

Ontario cities, in other elections unbreakable Conservative strongholds treated Liberal candidates more kindly than ever before. Government supporters made a clean sweep of the Hamilton area with its three seats, held their own in the Toronto area by capturing Toronto-Eglinton and losing York West, and gained London where Dr. Manion found a seat when he became leader of the National Conservative party.

Increased By One

By increasing its representation from Ontario the Liberal party set a new high record. In 1935 for the first time since 1874 Liberals obtained a majority of the Ontario seats. Yesterday the majority was increased by one.

Voters had to combat the effects of a stiff weekend storm in order to get to the polls. A heavy snowfall hampered traffic in the rural areas on Sunday and Monday. Although fine weather prevailed on polling day roads in many areas were blocked and special effort was required to get them opened.

Jubilant Crowd

It was a jubilant South Hastings National Government crowd of supporters that thronged the clubrooms shortly after the first reports began to trickle in. Hilarity increased as the steadily mounting Stokes majority soon reached the four-figure mark. The shadow of defeat of the Manion National Government Party which became apparent shortly after Dominion results were received, failed to diminish the joy of victory of the local Conservatives.

They crowded about the desk in the club where riding reports filed steadily into the computing clerks. Later cheers rang out as the victorious candidate entered the clubrooms. Hands stretched out in congratulation. The back of the new member for the riding resounded to hearty slaps as excited supporters crowded about him in congratulation.

M.P.-Elect Hoisted to Table

Later in the hall of the club, hands grasped Mr. Stokes and hoisted him to a table. Supporters crowded about and yelled for a speech. Cheers rang and rang again as he attempted to address his audience and it was seconds before he could be heard.

He thanked his supporters and expressed personal appreciation of a group of indefatigable workers. "If the Conservative party had received the same wholehearted efforts that I received in Hastings South it might have been a different story."

"Speak up, Georgie," yelled a sweet young thing, amid laughter and cheers.

Supporters thrilled with victory, refused to let the dark shadow of National party defeat mar their hilarity. They shouted remarks as the member-elect spoke and later thronged about him still insisting on shaking hands as he attempted to leave the hall.

Ovation in Trenton

Another vociferous ovation awaited Mr. Stokes in Trenton and other parts of the riding which he visited following the announcement of his victory. Trentonians treated residents of their town to a real old-fashioned election parade, hoisting the newly-elected member to their shoulders and parading through the main thoroughfares of the town. Other ridings forewarned of the visit of Mr. Stokes, turned out en masse to give the victor an ovation. It was a tired but happy George Stokes that returned to his home in the early hours of the morning, jubilant in the fact that he had led his party in a triumphant return to a riding that has always been, with the exception of a few years, traditionally Conservative.

CANADIAN PRESS SETS UP RECORD IN GIVING VOTE

Return of Gov't. Flashed at 8.47 p.m., Nearly an Hour Faster Than in 1935

FINE CO-OPERATION

Toronto, March 27 (CP)— The Canadian Press set up a record for speed and accuracy in reporting the result of the Dominion election last night. Return of the Liberal Government on the basis of the civilian vote was flashed over the news association's coast-to-coast wire network at 8:47 p.m. EST, 13 minutes before voting ended in British Columbia.

The result of the election was almost an hour faster than in 1935 when a Liberal majority over all was flashed at 9:42 p.m. EST, 39 minutes after the defeat of the government had been reported.

Despite the fast coverage, returns were not published in newspapers or broadcast in any province before the close of polls in that province this was due to an amendment to the Election Act in 1938 following representations that the speedy CP coverage of the 1935 election returns from the east had affected voting in the West.

The record showing was due to the work of The Canadian Press staff of 200 in bureaux at Halifax, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Winnipeg, Edmonton and Vancouver, and staff men stationed at Saint John, N.B., Quebec, London, Regina and Victoria. The Canadian Press staff was aided by the staffs of its 89 daily newspaper members who collected returns from their respective areas in Canada's most extensive piece of newspaper co-operation.

Telegraph Companies Assist

The Canadian Pacific and Canadian National Telegraphs contributed teleprinter and telegraph circuits parallelling the 11,000 miles of Canadian Press leased teleprinter wires, over which returns flashed to every CP newspaper. Jules Castonguay, Chief Electoral Officer, assisted by instructing his more than 100,000 election employees in 243 constituencies to give every possible assistance to The Canadian Press.

The movement of returns over the wires started shortly after the close of polls in the Maritime Provinces at 5 p.m. EST, four hours later polls closed in British Columbia and by 1 a.m. EST the bulletins dwindled to a few straggling returns from late-reporting constituencies.

First Flash at 6.36

The first concession was flashed at 6:36 p.m. EST from Prince, in Prince Edward Island. By 8:45 more than 100 concessions and at midnight 198 concessions were tabulated. Communications were almost imperceptibly affected by the sunspot threat which disrupted telegraph and short-wave radio service over the week-end. Some slight delays occurred in Northern Ontario and the West.

An up-to-the-minute service was prepared by The Canadian Press for broadcast over the National network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation at 15-minute intervals.

Final results of the voting will not be known until April 1 when it is expected that the votes of some 98,000 Canadian Active Service voters in Canada and overseas will have been tabulated.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

His Rush Seems to Be Over

Dear Miss Fairfax,

My girl friend, who is 21 years old, met a young man last June and saw him every Sunday and holidays, as it takes him a couple of hours to get to her place. For her birthday he gave her his ring, which he said had never left his finger. He came to their home for Thanksgiving dinner and brought her a box of candy. Although she saw him only once a week, he called her on the phone every other night.

She has not seen him since November, but he continued to call her up until the day before Christmas. He always made excuses for not coming to see her, saying someone was ill in the family.

She has had several invitations from other young men, but she continually refuses them, and now asks my advice. But I feel that you can give much better advice than I can. Do you think she should send back the ring?

G. V. G.

It looks to me decidedly as if this young man's interest in your girl friend is tapering off. Some girls cling to souvenirs of past affairs, especially when their interest in the givers is still lively. As the young man hasn't been to see her since November, and there has been no talk of anything serious in their acquaintance, a high-spirited girl I believe would return the young man's ring. If she's of the ultra-sentimental type, who likes to make herself unhappy over souvenirs of past loves, she'll probably want to hold on to the ring.

Feels Too Shabby For Daughter

Dear Miss Fairfax

My former wife could hardly be held responsible for our divorce. She was a very ambitious girl, and I never really got ahead, though I always had a steady job as a bookkeeper, paid all the bills, and did the best I could. But she wanted more than I could give her.

I consented to let her have the custody of our little daughter, because I knew she could do more for the child than I could do. But I insisted upon paying $5.00 a week maintenance, because I did not wish my wife's second-husband to be responsible for the support of my child.

The law allows me to see the little girl once a week and take her out, but lately I think she does not enjoy these trips to the zoo and the movies and other places. Perhaps I'm morbid, but I think she doesn't care about riding in crowded street cars, going to a cafe with me for a simple lunch, and perhaps I'm not as well dressed as her stepfather. Sometimes I feel so discouraged, I think I shall give up seeing my daughter, though she is all I have left to live for.

Failure

Chin up, take yourself in hand and fight your morbidity to the last ditch. Your little daughter needs you more than she does her stepfather or her overly ambitious mother. She needs you to prevent her from becoming another snob, whose only sense of values have to do with material things.

Please drop this mistaken sense of humility, and realize that in keeping in touch with this child you're doing it as much for her good as for your own happiness.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Banker Says Courtesy is Good Investment

Bankers know the value of good investments. The vice-president of a national bank writes me apropos of a recent article of mine on the value of the words "Thank you" and "Please":

"The use of the words 'Please' and 'Thank you'," he says, "have been a good investment on my part and the 'dividends in the shape of good will have been most satisfactory, indeed." Here's further proof that Courtesy is good business.

Mr. Banker continues: "I have observed often that the younger generation lacks the courteous and polite manners which were taught the youngsters when I was a boy. For that matter, this applies to many of the oldsters as well, right now. 'Please' and 'Thank you' are used so little nowadays that I sometimes am inclined to think that they have become obsolete".

A stimulating letter, this, something for parents to consider deeply.

Although I certainly agree with Mr. Banker that these words are not spent liberaly enough, even though they are free currency, I'm not inclined to think that they have become obsolete. My heart is constantly touched by hearing these radiant words used by pleasant and appreciative-minded people in all walks of life.

But, like Mr. Banker, I cannot understand why so many other people hoard these gracious words, closing their eyes and their ears and their hearts to the dividends that make life rich.

Manners begin at home. And if, at home, a child hears the words that express courtesy and appreciation, the polite habit of using these words himself grows as naturally as flowers in a pleasant garden. But the parents must sow the seed!

Expresses Thanks

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

After a man has been introduced to a lady in the lady's home, should the man, when leaving, say that he is glad to have met her? Or should he disregard the introduction unless the lady speaks first?

S. V.

The man in this circumstance would indeed graciously express his pleasure in the introduction and for the hospitality. He might say, for instance, "It has been a great pleasure to meet you, Mrs. Allen, and you were very kind to let me come to your home with Miss Jones. Thank you very much."

Courtesy Tip

I wonder if the people who write the most important part of their letters in postscripts are the same ones who take fifteen minutes to leave a party after they have declared their intention to "go"?

Fighting Localized Fat

By HELEN FOLLETT

REDUCING establishments specialize in treatment of localized fat which is difficult to combat on the home grounds. They are life-savers for the woman whose hips are haunchy but whose legs are slender, and for the poor dear who develops over-sized upper arms while the mid-section remains normal. Remodeling is accomplished by means of hot compresses, electric baths, cold showers and jiggle machines that pound the life out of fat cells.

Many women of the stage, who must remain slender, do their fat-fighting calisthenics regularly. To keep the calves from expanding, they do high kicking, walk tippy-toe, jump the rope, swing one foot in a wide circle while they stand tip-toe on the other.

To keep the arms in perfect form, Indian clubs are recommended. As muscles are flexed, dimensions will lessen.

Hips, abdomen and thighs often go in for a policy of expansion. To get them rejuvenated, lie on the sides. Lift the right foot, roll to the left, stretching the leg. Six times then with the left foot swung to the right. Muscles are strengthened and adipose issues go off and commit suicide; they just can't stand the traffic and the strain.

If you want to feel rich and as if you were swinging the world by its tail, invest in an array of bath cosmetics. These preparations have become just about perfect; all of them are deliciously perfumed. They keep the skin surface free of goose flesh.

Soften the water with bath salts. Use a heavy brush which helps the skin to function as an eliminating organ. Hop out of the tub or from under the shower, have a brisk rub down, rub in a bath tonic. When the flesh is dry, indulge in a talcum friction.

ANN RUTHERFORD . . . . daily exercises keep her free of extra fat

And, of course, you must use a deterrent in the armpits. Almost all woman need that. It's best to play safe.

GLANDS

The thyroid isn't the only gland in the body that gets out of kilter and upsets our whole system, as I have said before. The study of the work of these glands is comparatively recent and up until a few years ago the knowledge of functions of these very important parts of the body was more superstition than anything else. Each year increases our knowledge of them, and the part they play in our lives. However, we have a lot to learn about them yet.

The glands act on the body by liberating substances into the blood stream. No gladular secretion is complete in itself. It seems that the materials obtained from the various glands work together to produce the desired result.

The best known glands are the thyroid, in the front of the neck, the pituitary gland which is in the brain and which we believe today is the master gland; and the sex glands—the ovaries and the testes. There are other less important ones too, such as the parathyroid glands. These are small organs about the size of a pea and their important function is to control the body's handling of the mineral calcium. If these glands should be removed accidentally, as for example in a thyroid operation, then the body loses its ability to use calcium. This results in a calcium deficiency, the patient develops convulsions and shaking spells. Death comes if the patient isn't given some relief.

Now you can understand better one of the reasons I counselled you yesterday to get an expert thyroid surgeon to do any necessary operating on that gland.

Another gland which we hear most about in children is the thymus. It is a large soft mass of material which lies under the upper part of the breast bone. It is important to the child because it apparently aids in growth. As the child develops and grows older this thymus gland grows smaller and smaller until it almost disappears in adulthood. For many years we were taught that it was dangerous to give anaesthetic to a child with an enlarged thymus. I remember my father, who was a country doctor, too, would often open a child's throat, and then refuse to operate. I recall very well how time and time again he said: "I'm afraid of that thymus" . . . I remember too, that several of these children he refused to operate on died in the hospital as the result of the subsequent operation there.

The adrenal gland is a small body which lies, like a cap, over the top of each kidney. It is an extremely important gland for it controls the ability of the muscles to carry on their work effectively. It is thought to have some part, too, in the digestion of fat. It combines with the other glands to control the sexual qualities of the individual. I have known persons whose adrenal gland was out of order, to have symptoms somewhat similar to those of a person with a bad thyroid.

The pituitary is probably the most complicated of all glands. It is divided into two parts, one controlling growth, particularly that of the bones, and the other governs the muscles. Giants are people whose pituitary gland has gone haywire.

When the study of glands was newer than it is now, enthusiastic investigators foresaw the day when by adding a little of this gland extreat, and removing a little of that we could control growth, abilities and dispositions. This development has never materialized; we cannot make ourselves over to suit the needs of the moment. I think it is fortunate that we can't do anything like that.

BABY NEED NOT GET YOU UP

YOU and your baby both need sleep. There is a sure and easy way to get it. Let Mrs. B—, Jr., of Winona, Ontario, tell you in her own words: "Night after night, as soon as we would get settled in bed, 'Baby' would start crying. . . . Baby's Own Tablets changed all this. What a blessed relief."

In no sense are these "sleeping" tablets. They contain no opiates or stupefying drugs and are absolutely harmless. But they promote healthful sleep by promptly making the ill baby well. The well baby sleeps soundly.

Baby's Own Tablets bring quick relief from most of "baby's" ills.—Teething troubles, constipation, simple fever, diarrhoea, upset stomach, colic, simple croup and colds. Try them. 25 cents. Your money refunded if they are not effective.

Boil tomatoes, onions and spices, then strain and use two cups of the juice. Soften gelatin in one-half cup water or tomato juice, then add it to the heated tomato juice. Add lemon juice and vinegar. Pour into ring mold to harden. Fill centre with cottage cheese, and pass a bowl of mayonnaise with it.

Orange Chiffon Pie—Ingredients: one baked shell, four egg yolks, three-fourths cup sugar, one-fourth teaspoon salt, two tablespoons lemon juice, one-half cup orange juice, one teaspoon grated orange rind, one tablespoon plain unflavored gelatin, one-fourth cup cold water, four egg whites, one-fourth cup sugar. Beat egg yolks in the top part of double boiler with sugar, salt, lemon and orange juice and grated orange rind. Sprinkle gelatin over surface of cold water and let stand. Cook egg yolk mixture over hot, not boiling, water until mixture coats the spoon. Remove from heat, stir in gelatin and place to cool. When mixture starts to thicken, beat until light. Beat egg whites to a stiff frost, add remaining sugar gradually, beating it in. Fold in egg yolk and orange mixture; blend well and turn into baked shell. Coat over with a thin layer of whipped cream just before serving.

Schooling Parents To Child's Views

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph. D.

"DEAR MR. MYERS—I am a girl of 15. Naturally, I am interested in boys and I have a problem which I believe many girls my age have.

"First, I want to tell you about my parents' attitude. To them I haven't the slightest interest in boys. There is never any conversation about the matter except in connection with other people, and then they may drop a hint as to how they feel about young girls.

"I know one girl, about 25, whom my father admires for the following reasons: She left grammer school and went to work. She never gave a party or belonged to any club. She was never a part of what is called the 'crowd'. When not at work she spends most of her time at home. She doesn't like reading and seems to think that a caste system exists here. Now she has her first, and, perhaps, last boy friend. She wouldn't go with one because her parents didn't think they would like him for a son-in-law. What strikes me is that she didn't seem to object.

Type He Likes

"That is the type of a girl my father likes now! But I know he was thinking and doing differently when he was young. At present things are very stiff and cold. Just think of it! There hasn't been a single boy in this house to see me. Another thing, things are so bad in our house that I am ashamed to bring anyone in. My parents can speak only broken English and they know very few modern manners.

"We don't go any place where I could meet some boys and I'm too young to go alone. And being out in the country makes it pretty hard to attend any social affairs because I have to depend on my father for transportation. I don't believe I know a single boy outside school. . . . I also believe in good clean fun, but my father thinks it's dirty business to stay out late even though it's only a dance . . ."

Urges Restraint

Here is how I answered her:

"I think I know how you feel. I also know how your parents feel. You see, they are very eager to protect you and their standards in this respect are a little higher than that of most parents.

"If I were you, I would not argue with them or criticize them. Rather, I would try to get them to relax a little; and to this end you can afford to submit cheerfully to greater restrictions than you think you should.

"Please be tolerant of their manners and speech. Just remember that they did not have the opportunities you have had.

"Try to prove to your father, by all your social relationships, that he can trust you, and when young men do begin coming to your home, induce them to show great deference to your parents and bring you home reasonably early. The more you can win the good will and genuine affection of your parents, the more easily you can change them to your ways and wishes."

Woman's Mind as Well as Her Body, Requires Balanced Ration and Some Variety

In grandmother's, and great-grandmother's day when Godey's Lady Book was the only current literature for ladies and the perimeter of a lady's hoop skirt was the perimeter of her world, she wasn't expected to propose interesting topics of conversation for entertainment of the lordly male. Only when she had the gift of dramatizing homely topics or the native charm to make dull subjects gleam or the tact to start the men talking about themselves did she get into the game of round table talk which went an about her.

But surely the modern woman has not a shadow of excuse for being a beauty shop bore to her own men folks or to her friends' men folks. Granting that she has no quick interest in politics (prime topic of interest to any man at the moment) she can spend fifteen minutes a day reading her daily paper, fifteen minutes listening to the radio and glean enough information to make conversation for several sittings.

Even if she hasn't had a course in economics (a subject on which everything that wears pants considers himself expert) she's handling the housekeeping allowance, and working with her budget and doing arithmetic sums, all of which is practical economics with a vengeance; When she realizes this she can discuss the large subject with the best of the big boys.

Even though she came along before they were teaching business and social psychology (fad of the forties), the study of human nature under her roof, in her neighborhood, in the stores and at the market, will acquaint her with the sum and substance of the whole matter and qualify her to listen intelligently to the learned gents.

If she doesn't know a tennis from a squash racquet, a football from a basketball, a golf club from a caveman's club, or a jockey from a caddy, she can start the ball of sports talk rolling by calling the name of a few "champeens" whose names and faces are thrust at her by every newspaper and magazine she picks up.

What every woman knows (otherwise she might as well be dead) is that a man will entertain himself and give her credit for the entertainment if she gives him the chance to strut his stuff; lecture on his specialties, ladle out his store of information, display his wisdom and talk about himself.

Shame on a woman who lives in the fabulous forties and has nothing on her mind but her hair and her hat!

STARS AND STRIPES are favorite fashion designs this Spring. A bathing suit of sharkskin is striped in wide panels of navy blue and white, with broad navy blue shoulder straps cut in one with the dress itself. Heart-shaped neckline is bound in blue.

Blooming for Spring are the prettiest prints in many a season? A charming daytime frock of white silk crepe has enormous black butterflies on a white ground. The bodice is molded and the drapery on the skirt is drawn to a hip bow. There is a big organdie bow on the opposite shoulder for balance.

CHAPTER XXII

As Toby had driven away from Vicky's cottage the previous night, after leaving Sara there, his thoughts had not been entirely on Bill and Wendy and the hunch he meant to follow in searching for them.

He was thinking, too, of Sara's revelation that she and Curt Carrington had been marooned together for six hours during the storm. He couldn't help suspecting that it had been premeditated on Curt's part. It certainly seemed queer that the fellow would forget the ways of the tide in the vicinity of his own home!

Thought of the two of them shut off for hours on a lonely bit of ocean-locked land stabbed Toby to the quick. Undoubtedly, Carrington had used this perfect opportunity to make love to Sara. Had he asked her to marry him—and had she accepted him?

If she had, was it any wonder, considering what Curt Carrington had to offer her? Round-the-world cruises, palatial homes — all the things that went with wealth. Wouldn't any girl be dazzled by all this?

Toby became gloomier and gloomier. What chance had he? Why go on hoping? Sara had plainly shown that she preferred Carrington to him. He might as well resign himself to the inevitable and try to forget her. Yes, that was the only thing to do.

He sighed deeply, and sadly switched his thoughts to Bill and Wendy.

In considering all the possibilities in their disappearance, he had realised that they might have been blown ashore on some island in the Sound, or might deliberately have sought haven on one. It was just a bare hope, of course, but it would explain the fact that there had been no word from them. On an uninhabited island, they would be cut off from communication with the world.

What he meant to do was to drive to the fishing wharves at the town of Middleport and hire a launch in which he could tour the Sound, searching various islands. He'd have to wait until dawn, but it would be only a couple of hours now until daybreak and, in the meantime, he could park his car near the docks and catch a few winks of sleep.

He soon reached Middleport and, winding through the town, was presently parked beside a warehouse on the dark, deserted waterfront. He climbed into the back of the car, stretched out on the seat, and settled himself to wait.

Several hours later, he roused from slumber to find the day already well begun. He glanced at his watch. Almost nine o'clock! Gosh! He sat up, stiff and aching from the cramped position in which he had lain, and saw that the wharves were now alive with activity.

He climbed out of the car and approached a group of idlers he saw near by.

"Who's got the best launch for hire around here"? he asked.

"Where can I find Norton?"

The man pointed. "Six or seven piers down."

Toby, his raincoat buttoned tight, for the wind was still blowing, made his way toward the pier indicated. His eyes picked out a white launch with the name Bob on her. An overalled figure was bent over the engine.

Toby approached. "Mr. Norton?"

The man in overalls straightened. "That's me."

"Is your boat for hire?"

"Sure. For how long?"

Toby pulled out his billfold. "I dont know. For as long as I need it."

"Where do you want to go?"

"I'm not sure about that, either. I'd like first to have a talk with the man who captains the fleet of oyster boats that put out from here each day."

"Old man Rowley? He ain't around today. You could probably find him at his house, though."

"Well, look," said Toby, "maybe you can tell me what I want to know. Where would one of his boats, caught in an offshore gale, lay to for shelter?"

"Humph! You sound like you was talking about yesterday. Two of Rowley's boats, the Jenny and the Mary W, haven't showed up since they went out yesterday morning."

"Is that so? Have you any idea where they might be?"

"Well, there ain't many places a boat can lay to off shore until you get farther east, but there's Gull Rock, Ketcham's Bay and Tern Island."

"Okay!" Toby let himself down into the launch. "I want you to take me to all those places. I'm looking for a man and a little girl lost yesterday in a catboat. Maybe you read about it in the papers."

Norton stared at him a moment, then leaned over to the rope that tied the Bob.

"Why the heck didn't you say so!" he exclaimed.

The gale of yesterday was blown out but sudden gusts still whipped the water into creamy spray, and the Sound still heaved and billowed. The launch lifted and dropped, with thuds that seemed to shatter the floor boards every time the boat hit the bottom of a trough. Toby, in a canvas chair in the cockpit, kept sharp watch for any bobbing speck that might mean a drifting boat.

Gull Rock, reached in an hour, proved barren of life. The same was true of Ketcham's Bay, ten miles beyond.

"I'm on a fool's chase," Toby told himself rejectedly. "What chance would there be of that eggshell of Bill's standing even this sea!"

Tern Island, well over toward the Connecticut shore, was an insignificant half-moon of sand which had, on its inner curve, a tiny cove.

As the Bob rounded the point of the crescent, Toby suddenly sat up straight. There was at least one boat lying within the small harbor and—yes, that was another one beyond it! Then, with sagging hope, he realised that they might both be the oyster boats that had failed to return with the rest of the fleet.

Norton had shifted his course so that the Bob was entering the cove obliquely. Only the near boat was now visible—and she was not the Cricket. Soon the name Jenny could be distinguished on her side.

On her deck were three men, watching the approaching launch.

CHAPTER XXIII

Suddenly, Toby's heart did something queer. The other boat had come into view. It was the Cricket!

But—but was that or wasn't it Bill among the three men on the deck of the Jenny? Toby wasn't sure....

A few minutes later, as the launch drew nearer, he saw that it was Bill! He stood up and excitedly started waving and shouting. Then, Bill was waving and shouting back.

"Bill!" He grasped his friend's hand.

Then, he saw Wendy, lying on a narrow bunk cushion and looking rather pale. She smiled wanly at him.

"Is—is she hurt?" he asked anxiously.

"Oh, no!" Bill told him. "Just a bit done in. She got pretty seasick during the worst of it yesterday."

One of the Jenny's men spoke up. "They were both pretty done in when we picked 'em up. They'd had a tough time of it."

"But it was fun, Toby," Wendy said valiantly, "until the mast broke."

There followed an account from Bill of how the Cricket, after being disabled, had been blown about helplessly in the storm-tossed Sound for hours after hour until finally sighted and taken in tow by the Jenny, which was heading for the shelter of Tern Island.

"How's Vicky?" he asked worriedly, "Half crazy, I suppose? There was no way to get word to her and, this morning, Wendy was still feeling so shaky we didn't want to start back until the Sound calmed down some. We were just getting ready to leave when we saw you coming."

"Well, the quicker we get home now, the better," said Toby. "I hired the launch at Middleport and have got my car there, but I think it would be better to go directly to that old boathouse about a mile from your place. That will be quickest. Then, I'll go get your car and come back for you and Wendy."

"That sounds okay to me," said Bill. "I'll just have to leave the Cricket beached here for the time being."

It was shortly after this that Toby, hurrying to the cottage found Sara in the front yard just as she was about to go in to tell Vicky what Curt had phoned.

"Safe! Safe! Both of them!" he shouted.

For an instant, Sara couldn't believe her ears. Then she burst into thankful tears.

"Oh, Toby How — how wonderful! Where are they? You don't know how glad I am you came at just this minute! Curt just phoned that a plane had sighted the Cricket cast up on an island, with its mast broken and no one in sight. I was so afraid—"

"That's where I found them," said Toby. "I've just brought them from there in a launch. The plane must have flown over after we left. They're at that old dock down the shore. I've come to get Bill's car. But let's go in and tell Vicky.."

By the time Toby had brought the refugees back, hot-water bags had been filled, warm drinks made ready. Vicky just clung to her husband and child speechlessly, the tears streaming down her face.

Later, the whole story would be told. The awful hours yesterday when Bill had abandoned all hope as the disabled Cricket had been flung this way and that, nearly capsized again and again by sheets of water . . . the rescue, at last, by the Jenny . . . the kindness of the two oyster fishermen . . . the long night at Tern Island . . .

All this and more would be described in detail later. For the present, there were just incoherent words of thankfulness and endearment, joined practically with bowls of hot soup for Bill and Wendy who were put to bed as soon as they had eaten.

Not until after the excitement had died down, did Sara think again of Curt—remember that she ought to let him know that Bill and Wendy were safe. She went next door to phone him, but was told by a servant at Yellow Gables that he had just left and was driving over to see her. Her heart gave a little jump.

As she turned away from the phone, Toby appeared.

"I — I was just trying to get Curt," she said, "to tell him the news. He chartered that plane that sighted the Cricket. It—it was wonderful of him to do it, so I wanted to let him know everything is all right."

"Oh," said Toby, looking queer.

Sara said quickly, "But what you did was much more wonderful, Toby dear!" She laid a hand on his arm. "We can't any of us ever thank you enough."

He said gruffly, "There's no need ot thank me, I was just as worried as any of you." He turned toward the phone. "I came over to phone Sonia —got to call off a date with her for this evening."

Sara waited while he made the call. She knew she shouldn't listen, but she had an irresistible impulse to hear what he would say to this other girl.

He seemed to have some difficulty in getting out of his date, for he didn't go into the details of all that had happened.

"But listen, Sonia," he said, "my car's way over in Middleport, and I'm dead tired — didn't get much sleep last night. I'll tell you all about it tomorrow, but honestly, I just can't get back to town for that party...."

When he finally hung up, Sara slipped her arm through his and walked with him back to Vicky's.

"Of course you can't go to any parties! she said. "You stretch out on the living-room couch and take a good long nap. We'd all better sleep until suppertime...."

They all did retire. Soon, the house was hushed, as its exhausted occupants, scattered about in various quarters, sought recuperation from the long hours of harrowing strain they had been through.

Sara, however, tired as she was found that she could not sleep. She lay on the bed in the guest room, staring up at the ceiling. Now that the agony over Bill and Wendy was past, her thoughts reverted to Curt's disturbing proposal. Forgotten for the past twenty-four hours, it now pounded in her head, demanding a decision.

What should she do? What answer should she give him?

CHAPTER XXIV

Sara's mind seesawed back and forth as she considered the troublous question confronting her. It was really a battle between her mind and her heart.

One moment, her heart told her how glorious it would be to be married to Curt under any circumstances. The next, her mind cautioned that there could be no real happiness in such a marriage as Curt proposed—a furtive marriage.

And her pride backed up her mind. Why should she suffer the humiliation of marrying him secretly because he feared the disapproval of his family?

At that point, Toby crept into her thoughts. If Toby were in Curt's position, would he have made such a proposal to her? She knew he wouldn't Not Toby! He, in similar circumstances, would defy disapproval from any one—would marry her openly and proudly and demand proper recognition for his wife.

An incident out of the past flashed before her. She had been riding on top of a Fifth Avenue bus with Toby, when a sightseeing bus passed them, with its barker addressing the passengers through a megaphone.

Toby had taken her hand and said, "If I should ever ask you to marry me, Sara, and you should say yes, do you know what I'd make you do? I'd make you wear a very large sign on your back, with the words "Toby Martin's Girl' painted on it in big black letters, and I'd make the sightseeing guys say through their megaphones, "That cute little trick you see on the left is the future Mrs. Tony Martin! A very, very lucky man, Mr. Martin!'"

It had been absurd nonsense, of course, but it showed Toby's attitude toward her.

How different from the attitude Curt was taking! She visualised their wedding — clandestine visit to some country parson, after lies to her mother. Then, afterwards, secret meetings.

In the last few hours, she had seen something of what marriage in the highest, truest sense of the word could mean—had seen poignantly what it meant to Vicky and Bill. She had seen it in the way they looked into each other's eyes when they were finally reunited.

It meant a unity of spirit forged through common struggles and sacrifices, common hopes and fears, shared setbacks and triumps. How could she and Curt achieve any such unity in the sort of marriage he was asking her to accept?

But then, her heart spoke akain. If she loved Curt enough, why shouldn't she be willing to do whatever he wished? On the other hand, if he really loved her, would he wish to place her in such a demeaning position as that of an unacknowledged wife?

In the end she reached no conclusion. She rose wearily, deciding to put the problem out of her mind for the time being.

She slipped into her dress, straightened her hair, and went downstairs. She must start getting together some sort of meal, for the others would doubtless awake in a famished state.

First, however, she tiptoed into the living room and paused to gaze down at Toby, sleeping so soundly there on the sofa. The woolly afghan he had thrown over himself had slipped to the floor. She picked it up and gently replaced it.

A wave of tenderness swept over her. How much they all owed to Toby! How unselfishly he had exerted himself in their behalf! What a tower of strength he had been! Toby was fine— fine! If Curt Carrington had never come into her life......

The sound of a slowing car outside interrupted her thoughts. Could that be Curt now?

She hurried to the front door, opened it, then stared out in surprise. It was not Curt's imported maroon roadster in front of the house, but a businesslike dark green coupe, out of which was stepping a black-haired girl dressed in red.

For an instant, Sara was puzzled —then realized who it must be. Sonia!

So the girl wasn't going to let Toby get out of his date—had come all the way out here to get him! How unfeeling and inconsiderate of her, after all he had been through!

Sara saw that Sonia, pausing to cast a critical eye over a tire, had not yet seen her in the doorway. Quickly, impulsively, she closed the door, then hurried back to Toby's side.

She shook his shoulder. "Toby—

His eyes opened and looked at her dazedly. Then, still drugged with sleep, he rolled over, turning his back toward her.

"Go 'way," he muttered. "Not my girl any more. Can't charter planes for you. Can't maroon you on sand dunes, Humph! If you'd only marry the guy and get it over with.."

"Toby!" Sara shook him again. "Stop babbling and wake up—I've something to tell you. Sonia is here!"

He suddenly jerked round. "Sonia? Here?"

"Yes—she just got out of her car and must be at the door by now. She evidently wouldn't believe you and has come to take you to that party. But look, Toby—I'll send her away if you like. You need your rest. I'll tell her—"

"No!" He sat up, ran a hand through his tousled hair. "So she came after me, did she? Good old Sonia! Always there in a pinch! She wouldn't fail a guy!"

Sara winced. "Toby — you know you don't want to go to that party. You ought to stay here and sleep right through until morning. Go tell her so. Don't let her—"

"Sure I want to go to the party!" He stood up. "Why not? It's just what I need!"

Sara hesitated, looked at him a minute, then turned away.

CHAPTER XXV

Half an hour later, Sonia, with Toby at her side, was expertly threading her car through the late Sunday traffic on a Long Island boulevard leading into New York.

"If you'd only explained everything to me over the phone!" she was saying reproachfully. "I thought it was just lack of a car that was keeping you out here. But Miss Sidney has been telling me you've had scarcely any rest for the past twenty-four hours. She made me feel like a brute! I wouldn't have come to drag you to this party if I'd known."

"Tommyrot!" Toby said briefly. "I'm glad you did come. A party is exactly what I need — a good, noisy party!"

"Well, anyway, it wasn't just the party that brought me!" There was a jubilant note in Sonia's voice. "I've exciting news, Toby, and I couldn't wait to see you to tell you!"

"What news?"

"Greenwald is sending me to Honolulu, too!"

"Sonia! You don't mean it? Say that's slick! How come?"

"He broke the news to me yesterday, while you were away from the office. I'm so excited! Isn't it grand Toby? Won't it be fun—being out there together?"

"It sure will! I'm awfully glad you're going, Sonia."

Toby's response, however, was only half-hearted. He didn't know whether or not he was glad she was going. All he knew was that he himself wanted to get as far away as possible, now that he was convinced that he hadn't a chance with Sara.

Until last night, he had stubbornly nursed the hope that she was only temporarily dazzled by Curt Carrington but, somehow, ever since he had heard of those six hours they had spent marooned together yesterday, he had had a despairing conviction that they had probably become engaged. Today, for instance, after Bill and Wendy had been brought safely home, Sara's first thought had been to phone Curt. Yes, it all added up.

Toby gloomily visualised the newspaper pictures that would be published—"Mr. Curtis Carrington and his charming fiancee . . . " "Mr. Curtis Carrington and his lovely bride . . . "Mr. Curtis Carrington and his beautiful young wife . . " Well, he'd be where he wouldn't have to see all this. The width of a continent and a half the Pacific Ocean would separate him from Sara.

"Why so silent, darling?" she pouted. "What are you brooding about? Is that any way to act when I've just told you that you're going to have my charmng company in Hawaii? I don't believe you're glad at all!"

The pressure of her shoulder against his suddenly sent a warm current coursing through Toby. He had an impulse to lay his head on that shoulder and be comforted. Yes, it would be nice to have Sonia to console him in Hawaii. Maybe, in time, he could forget Sara. Maybe he and Sonia . . .

He roused himself to answer her. "I'm sorry—I'm just tired, I guess. Look, Sonia—would you mind awfully if I change my mind about the party? I thought it was what I needed, but I guess I was wrong."

"Well . . ." she said, disappointment in her tone. "I won't insist, I suppose you are simply dead."

"I feel like a heel to beg off, and it's swell of you to understand, but I'm just not in the mood tonight. Aside from weariness, I — well, I'm sort of low in my mind.

"Low? What's the matter, Toby?" Sonia asked solicitously.

He hesitated, then decided to tell her. He had a longing to confide in some one.

"I—I've had rather a jolt. The girl I've been hoping for years to marry is—is going to marry some one else. At least, I'm practically certain she is."

"Oh . . . that's too bad . . ."

There was a long pause. Toby would have been startled if he could have read Sonia's thoughts. His frank confession might have been expected to irritate her and arouse her jealousy but, instead it sent her hopes suddenly soaring.

She had been aware all along, of his devotion to Sara Sidney and, until now, had feared it might be impossible to woo him away from her. But if the Sidney girl was going to marry some one else! Well! It was the best news Sonia had had in a long time.

Sonia, like Juliette Carter, was a person who was determined to get what she wanted, though this trait in her character had been molded by quite different circumstances. Juliette's wilfulness stemmed from the fact that she had always had everything, whereas Sonia's strong will was result of having had nothing to start with. She had had to struggle for everything she had acquired and thus had formed the habit of stopping at nothing to gain her ends.

Born in poverty, she had early developed a consuming desire to better her lot in life—and she had succeeded. Naturally smart, she had gone through her school years near the head of her class and, on graduation from high school, had shrewdly set out to get a job with a future.

Through hard work, perseverance and innate intelligence, she had steadily risen to her present well-paid position with the Zenith Advertising Company. She had come far since the days of meager meals, crowded quarters and family squabbles. She had $5,000 in the bank, lived comfortably, and was able to satisfy her desire for small luxuries.

Now, she had set her heart on marrying Toby Martin. The fact that she was five years older than he did not bother her. She had fallen in love with him and meant to win him if she could.

So Sara Sidney had jilted him! Fine! That made things considerably simpler! It would, of course, take him a little while to recover, but Sonia was ready and eager to aid in that recovery.

She began scheming. If she could just persuade Greenwald to let her leave for Hawaii at the same time as Toby . . . if she could make the trip on the same boat. . . She pictured the two of them side by side at the ship's rail, watching the moon lift from the ocean . . .

She spoke suddenly, her voice gay and confident. "All right, Toby—I'll take you home. There'll be other parties. And after you get over this girl who has been idiot enough to throw you down, you and I—well, we're going places!"

Toronto Leafs Beat Wings 2-1 On Goals by Apps and Schriner In First Game of Playoffs

Aggressiveness of Goodfellow on Detroit's Defence Led to Team's Defeat

SERVED 9 MINUTES

Apps Played His Best Game of the Season in Scoring First Goal of Game

By JACK CALDER

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, March 27—(CP)— All Toronto Maple Leafs' attacking power will be needed to carry them past the pesky Detroit Red Wings into the National Hockey League's Stanley Cup finals.

The Maple Leafs pounded against the Red Wing defences all last evening and managed to squeeze through with a 2-1 victory in the opener of the best-of-three semi-finals because of two brilliant dashes by Sylvanus Apps and Dave (Sweeney) Schriner. They were almost always on the attack but Detroit's quick thrusts from the defensive shell nearly threw the result into reverse.

"We just about did it tonight, on the ice where we hadn't won a game in two years," Manager Jack Adams of the Wings enthused. "We'll swing the second game at Detroit Thursday by the same kind of fighting tactics. The kids on our club were magnificent."

One of Adams' kids, Connie Brown, scored the Detroit goal midway through the third period. Moments later young Byron (Butch) McDonald, who had started the scoring play for Brown, hit a goal-post with a shot that would have tied the game.

Goodfellow Aggressive

The aggressiveness of Captain Ebbie Goodfellow's play on the defence contributed to his team's undoing. He was serving a two-minute penalty—part of the total of nine minutes he served—when Apps opened the scoring after 11:18 of the third. Before Goodfellow returned Gordon Drillon and Nick Metz had missed goals by inches.

Apps, not bothering about the fact he had been beaten yesterday as National Government candidate in the Dominion election in Brant, played one of his best games of the year. To score, he took Metz' pass near the Detroit goal-mouth and batted it home.

Pretty Goal by Schriner

Schriner's goal, scored with only 56 seconds of the third period gone, was even prettier. He sped around the defence from right wing and lifted the puck over Thompson's shoulder as the goalie fell.

An element of luck was attached to Brown's score. He pushed an intended pass through the defence and goalie Turk Broda sat down on the puck when it eluded Regis (Pep) Kelly of the Leafs. Somehow the rubber broke free and McDonald and then Brown whacked at it, the second knock putting it in.

Two of the nine penalties were majors to Bingo Kampman of the Leafs and Goodfellow for fighting. They came together at the Toronto defence and almost every other player on both sides joined in the milling.

SYLVANUS APPS NOT DISCOURAGED

Centre-Ice Star of Leafs Defeated in Election Will Continue Hockey

Toronto, March 27 (CP)—Defeated as National Government candidate in Brant in the Federal election, Sylvanus Apps was philosophical

"I've still got my hockey," he said. "And when I'm through with that I'll turn to politics again. I feel sure I can be useful."

News of Apps' defeat by George E. Wood, Liberal, arrived at Maple Leaf Gardens last night while the hockey star was helping Toronto Maple Leafs to defeat Detroit in National League semi-finals for the Stanley Cup. He scored the first goal in the 2-1 victory that marked the start of the round.

Wood's margin on the civilian vote was 101. Apps said he was "afraid there won't be a heavy enough soldiers' vote to mean a turnover."

Manager Conny Smythe of the Maple Leafs said: "They may not want Syl Apps in Ottawa, but we want him around this club.

"Syl is a credit to professional hockey and a credit to any community, and we're proud to have him around with the Leafs. I'm not hinting that I'm pleased that he is likely to be saved for professional hockey temporarily, but it's a mighty nice feeling when you know he's going to be around popping in those goals for us for a while."

TRAIL BEATEN AGAIN

Calgary, March 27 (CP)—Calgary Stampeders trampled over Trail Smoke Eaters 5-2 here last night to chalk up their second straight win in the best-of-five Alberta-Kootenay Allan Cup hockey play-down. Stampeders won the first game 3-0 in Trail and the third will be played in Calgary Thursday night.

Murray Patrick Fires Goal Past Brimsek Whose Vision Was Blinded

6TH GAME SATURDAY

Experts Agree Bruins Will Win Series and Meet the Winner of Leafs-Detroit

By SYDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, March 27—(CP) — Consult the records and the only conclusion available is that Boston Bruins will win their Stanley Cup semi-final against New York Rangers in seven games—the limit.

The records show that Rangers' 1-0 victory last night, tying the series at two games apiece, was to be expected—for hadn't they gone 10 games on home ice without defeat by the league champions and Cup defenders? And, by the same token, the Bruins should win the fifth game in Boston Thursday night, for the Rangers haven't won a game there in nine starts over two seasons.

Players hardly counted in the pre-series debating. Such as Murray Patrick of the Rangers and Eddie Wiseman of the Bruins, have been breaking up the games. Murray, son of boss Lester, did it last night, punching home a 33-foot shot at 10:54 of the third period as goalie Frank Brimsek's vision was blinded by the players bunched in front of his cage.

The sixth game of the series, to qualify one of the clubs for the final against either Detroit or Toronto, will be played here Saturday night and a seventh, if necessary, in Boston Sunday night.

Patrick's goal, set up after Phil Watson and Dutch Hiller scrambled around the Bruin defence zone to get the puck back to the Ranger defenceman, broke up the toughest and closest game of the series.

Both clubs had all the opportunities possible to break up the game before Patrick's scoring shot, which the Bruins claimed was deflected in off defenceman Dit Clapper's skate. Brimsek, who looked baffled as the long one floated by, had come up with a half-dozen grand saves in the first and second periods; Davie Kerr had turned back Art Jackson, Herb Cain and Bill Hollett when all these three had to do was outguess the all-star goalie.

CAPITALS RALLY TO EVEN SERIES WITH THE REDS

Five-Game Series Tied by 8-2 Win Scored by Indianapolis

HERSHEY BEARS WIN

Pittsburgh Hornets Drop First Contest of Their Three-Game Series

By the Canadian Press

When the list of this season's comeback teams is made up, there ought to be a prominent spot reserved for Indianapolis Capitals in the International-American circuit.

The Caps came through with a smashing 8-2 victory over Providence Reds last night to tie up their playoff series at two games each. Indianapolis dropped the first two games of the series chiefly through the great goal-tending of Mike Karakas, but Karakas held no hoodoo over them last night.

Meanwhile, Hershey Bears were administering a 3-0 trouncing to Pittsburgh Hornets in the first of their three-game semi-final at Pittsburgh, with Wally Kilrea in the hero's role. Kilrea scored two of the Hershey goals and assisted in the other.

Gus Giesbrecht turned the "hat trick" in the Indianapolis game, with a goal in the second period and two more in the third. Just for good measure, he threw in an assist in the third as well.

For one period, the Reds held their opponents in check, and kept the score knotted at one-all. But the Caps broke loose with a three-goal splurge in the second; and added four more to Providence's one in the third.

The Hershey-Pittsburgh game was practically all Kilrea. After a scoreless first period, he banged in one counter and assisted Bruce on another in the second, then tallied a clincher in the third.

TORONTO LEAFS OPEN SPRING TRAINING IN FLORIDA

By the glowing accounts emanating from the Toronto Leafs' training camp down in Florida, the Toronto club may really have a ball team this year—but that fact still remains to be proven. However, Manager Tony Lazzeri is highly optimistic — as all good managers should be in their pre-season predictions. Some of the Leafs hopefuls, who are now banging the ball around Florida, are shown here as they settled down to some serious training. From LEFT to RIGHT, John Tyler, husky outfielder, takes his turn at bat to bang a long one out, Ralph Hammond, the Guelph southpaw, is expected to do mighty things in the pitching box this season. Harley Boss, who will probably hold down first base for the Leafs, displays his form as he reaches for a high one. Eric Tipton, Connie Mack's gift to the Leafs is reported to be whaling the ball high, wide and handsome and may prove to be the answer to Manager Lazzeri's prayer.

Between the Lines

There seems little doubt but that the world champion New York Yankees are on the auction block and will be sold to the highest bidder providing, however, the price reaches sufficient proportions to warrant the sale of a major league club. There have been rumours racing up and down Broadway regarding the sale of the Yankees, but Byron Clark, solicitor for the Colonel Rupert estate says he has not been officially approached as yet. However, current rumours have two factions angling for the ownership of the Yankees, but neither is willing to put over $3,000,000.00 on the line in payment for the whole Yankee system, farms, lock, stock and barrel. One group said to be in the field is headed by U. S. A. Postmaster James A. Farley, while the other faction is headed by Joseph Patterson, publisher of the New York Daily News. All deny concrete knowledge of any movements, but there is little doubt something definite is in the air and the Yankees are practically assured of a new owner soon.

Last summer local softball players engaged in a season-long argument regarding the interpretation of the much-discussed "infield fly" rule. In the 1940 ball rules, the infield fly rule has been clarified to read—"If an infield fly in falling hits a runner, who is standing on a base, ONLY THE BATTER IS TO BE DECLARED OUT. But if the batted ball strikes a runner who is off base, both the batter and the runner are out. This rule has always been a puzzler, but with the present explanatory rule in effect there can be little room for arguments in the future. It stands to reason that a player is safe, in most incidents, while occupying a base. There is the case of a forced play, when the player forced can be tagged out while standing on the wrong base, but in the case of the infield fly rule it is quite evident as to the official ruling, as outlined above. Baseball pitchers should acquaint themselves with the new pitching rules when spring training opens also.

Envy of a high-salaried major league ball player is without reason, in the opinion of Ed Hughes of the Brooklyn Eagle, who maintains the performer in the upper-income brackets is worth what he is paid.

"Some think ball players are underpaid, while others hold they are lucky to be alive, let alone sharing comparatively large salaries," writes Hughes. "The latter contention usually takes a peculiar form of argument.

"It points out in a somewhat conjectural way, that if the diamond star hadn't been recognized by baseball, he'd probably have eked out a living as a farm hand, cotton picker, some drab, ill-paid occupation. In many cases, the argument —if you care to catalogue it as such—is not without truth. But the fact remains these young men did discover they had a talent for something else and made the most of it. I think they should receive some sort of credit for that.

"No manager of a weak major team, if given his choice of all the minor league and sandlot players, could collect sufficient talent to win a first-division rating. So when a ball player like Red Ruffing, for instance, signs for $15,000 a season, please remember he's worth it. Many are called, but few are chosen."

They say a leopard never changes his spots. But what of the Tiger? It is said that if Schoolboy Rowe is unable to regain his pitching form, Detroit might shift him to the outfield to take advantage of his batting power and then the Tigers would have a catcher, Rudy York, on first base, and a first sacker, Hank Greenberg, and a hurler, Rowe, in the garden.

Do you remember when—All overtime records were shattered when Boston Bruins and the Maple Leafs clashed at Toronto five years ago tonight, for the National Hockey League title. Ken Doraty gave Leafs the only goal of the game after 164 minutes, 46 seconds of play. This time was eclipsed at Montreal in 1936, when Maroons and Detroit battled 176 minutes, 30 seconds, before Red Wings won 1-0.

Twenty-two of the 127 horses nominated for the 1940 Kentucky Derby never went to the post as two-year-olds. However, 24 of the horses nominated won one or more stake races as two-year-olds. Although E. R. Bradley has at least a half a dozen fleet 3-year-olds in his stables, he nominated only two starters for the Kentucky classic. He is placing his chief reliance in his unbeaten Bimelech, with Bashful Duck as the other bow in the arrow which Col. Bradley will use in the effort to win his fifth Derby. Incidentally the name of every horse in the Bradley stable begins with the letter "B."

Sport Spice — Toronto Maple Leafs moved a step closer to the Stanley Cup finals by beating the Detroit Red Wings 2-1 last night ....One up and two to go is the position the Leafs enjoy today .... Syl Apps might have made a second-best election stand, but Apps is a No. 1 puckster, getting a goal again last night, Schriner bagging the other Toronto counter....Plans to have the Camp Borden hockey squad meet the Trenton "Flyers" here on Thursday night are in the making today ....It would be interesting to compare the Georgian Bay class of hockey with that played in the Quinte district at that....New York Rangers evened their Stanley Cup series with the Boston Bruins, winning 1-0 last night....They now stand at one game each ....Jo Jo Graboski, flashy centre player with Lake Shore, is suffering from an injured back and will not play against Goodyears tonight.

Verdun Maple Leafs Bow to Quebec Aces

The Leafs bowed 4-2 to a fast, light Quebec Aces squad last night, and so carry a two-goal deficit into the second game of their Aces. The final game is scheduled home-and-home series with the for Quebec tonight.

Eleven penalties were handed out in last night's rough and tumble affair. Aces came from behind to tie up the game twice before they stepped into the lead in the third period.

AT THE CAPITOL

Zane Grey's "Knights of the Range"

A punch-packed, honest-to-goodness outdoor action romance, one which does not belie its title will open next at the Capitol theatre where Zane Grey's "Knights of the Range," featuring, Russell "Lucky" Hayden, Victor Jory, Jean Parker, J. Farrell MacDonald and Britt Wood will be offered for the entertainment of that large host of followers of the western film. For this picture is actually a story of gallantry on the range, one in which an outlaw demonstrates that he is not bad through-and-through, and eventually finds regeneration at the hands of as lovely a lady as was ever silhoueted against the rainbow colors of a western sunset.

Expectancy of western fans, in this case, will find fulfillment on every score, for the picture was produced and directed by Harry Sherman and Lesley Selander, the pair who make the "Hopalong Cassidy" pictures. They will find that the picture has suspense, story, a well-developed theme—the gallantry aforementioned to the fore—a grand cast, great photography of breath-taking scenery, all the ingredients which go into the making of the best in this type of screenfare.

A sample of the story should be enough to whet the appetite of every moviegoer who is hungry for real thrills and romance. Miss Parker, headstrong, spirited, half-Spanish daughter of a wealthy rancher, is set on marrying Victor Jory, gambler and generally sauve no-good. She is only dissuaded when her father is killed by a rustler.

"Society Lawyer"

Hits the high spots in entertainment and thrills. Crackles with excitement and packs the punch you love in Detective thrillers. A mystery thriller you will never forget starring Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce, Leo Carrillo, Edwardo Ciannelli and Frances Mercer.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Blondie on a Budget"

An ideal three unit program of entertainment for every movie lover in Belleville, opens next at the McCarthy theatre, for laughs.."Blondie on a Budget" newest and best of the richly human domestic comedies based upon Chic Young's popular comic strip is feature presentation number one, with Penny Singleton and Arthur Lake again portraying Blondie and Dagwood and Larry Simms as Baby Dumpling, a new member of this delightful combination is lovely Rita Hayworth in a role which brings an old flame of Dagwood's to light and burns up Blondie. Alvin Fuddle, the boy next door, and Daisy the Bumstead family pooch are also in the prominent supporting cast of "Blondie on a Budget."

"The Man From Sundown"

The second feature on the program, for excitement loving fans, presents Charles Starrett in "The Man From Sundown" a Texas ranger story and musical western which is rated to be the best this popular cowboy star has yet made. The Sons of the Pioneers, popular radio singers, Iris Meredith and the ranch boys who have been seen in previous westerns made by Charles Starrett are again in the cast of "The Man From Sundown."

"The Shadow"

"The Shadow" famous radio and magazine hero, comes to life on the screen and will be presented in addition to "Blondie on a Budget" and "The Man From Sundown." This first episode of "The Shadow" is a mystery and thriller combination which is the greatest "Crime Does Not Pay" adventure to ever reach the screen and stars famous Victor Jory in the title role. "The Shadow" will thrill you with many hair-raising exploits and set your heart pounding with excitement, as no other chapter play has ever done before. "The Shadow" is a sensational screen presentation, we urge you to commence following this week-end at the McCarthy theatre.

"My Little Chickadee"

Mae West and W. C. Fields in the comedy classic of the century, "My Little Chickadee" presented at the McCarthy. Do not miss it. In addition, a clever musical cartoon, an excellent "Minstrel Show" musical revue and latest Fox Movietone News Flashes, precede the Mae West, W. C. Fields feature presentation "My Little Chickadee."

AT THE BELLE

"Congo Maisie"

Modern Africa, with an American flavor by way of ships that pass in the night, comes to the screen in "Congo Maisie", featuring Ann Sothern and John Carroll and opening next at the Belle Theatre. The supporting cast includes Rita Johnson, Shepperd Strudwick, J. M. Kerrigan, E. E. Clive and others.

The story tells of a fiery American showgirl who is stranded on the west coast of Africa. There she meets a sardonic doctor who regards her as nothing more than an intruder. But when the girl proves her integrity and her courage, the man is forced to admit her merits. When he is called upon to perform an emergency operation, she alone is capable of standing beside him as assistant. Again, when the natives go wild, she holds them back with her remembered card tricks and a bit of dancing.

An African village was constructed for the production on the huge studio lot, authentic in every detail. Another spectacular set was hundreds of extras appear as natives. "Congo Maisie" will thrill you with its drama. Ann Sothern and John Carroll will bring you colorful romance. It's an adventure for the whole family.

"Granny Get Your Gun"

Rarely has a movie set been the scene of such hilarity as that of "Granny Get Your Gun", the Warner Bros. film which is announced as the companion feature attraction. The responsibile party was the film's venerable star, May Robson, who is always good for a laugh, on the screen or off.

And the particular set-up on "Granny Get Your Gun" offered opportunity a-plenty to whet Miss Robson's whimsy. Her role calls for a hard-bitten old grub-staker whose pet passions are desert rats, shooting pistols at tin cans and mean horseback riding in spite of her seventy-odd years. Miss Robson romped through these experiences as enthralled as a star-struck deb in her first role. And her vixenish sequence when, dolled up in frills and old lace, she tries to impress a jury into thinking her a sweet old lady, caused many a round of chuckles.

Appearing with Miss Robson, the screen newcomer Margot Stevenson, a Broadway import, does a fine piece of acting, as do the other seasoned players, Harry Davenport, Hardie Albright, William Davidson, and Granville Bates.

"Swiss Family Robinson"

Drama, tense and gripping, as beloved by uncounted millions who have read the original novel, is said to lift RKO Radio's picturization of "Swiss Family Robinson", now playing at the Belle, far beyond the uppermost flights of screen entertainment.

The Belle News of the Hour, a funny Donald Duck cartoon and a timely topical complete the program.

HOME DESTROYED IN THURLOW TWP.

Ernest Little's House Used as Polling Booth Earlier in the Day

Fire of an unknown origin, which started in the absence of the owner and his family, completely destroyed the substantial frame dwelling with the entire household effects belonging to Mr. Ernest Little of Thurlow Township last evening.

Although it was impossible to contact Mr. Little this morning, it was learned that the dwelling had been used as a polling booth earlier in the day and that he and his family had left the house shortly after the supper hour last night. When the alarm was turned in at the local fire department, the flames had already gained considerable headway and before firemen arrived at the scene of the fire the house was practically burned to the ground. Firemen were handicapped considerably owing to the fact that the house was outside the city limits with the nearest fire hydrant being fully one half mile away, and only hand pumps could be used to combat the flames, but efforts to save an adjoining dwelling were successful, although a small barn belonging to Mr. Little was destroyed. It was not learned whether the house or contents were covered by insurance.

BUCKLEY'S MIXTURE

WHO INVENTED THE MOUSETRAP?

You've often heard the old adage: "Let a man make a better mousetrap, and the world will make a beaten path to his door."

But have you ever happened upon that path, or even looked for it?

Why SHOULD you, when the people who today have things to sell beat a path to YOUR door to tell you about them?

Every newspaper that comes into your home brings you a new list of WHAT you can get, and WHERE. You can do your shopping in the advertising pages — instead of beating a path from store to store to find what you want.

Make it a habit to look over the advertisements, and you'll find many fine values you might have missed . . . many exciting and useful things you otherwise might never have known about!

AMNESIA ALIBI

By THAYER WALDO

Stiffly Brian rose as she came smiling toward him. Without a word he pulled back the chair and seated her.

"Sorry to be late, dear," she said; "but you know how those studio fittings are. Honestly, I sometimes think a picture career isn't worth going through that for. Three solid hours of just standing around, being pinned in and out of gowns, while the designer and the director and two supervisors looked on. I'm simply worn out."

Glancing around at the group of tables under the broad canopy, she exclaimed:

"But this is delightful! I'm beginning to feel refreshed already. Such a charming continental air about these sidewalk cafes."

He sat staring at her with hard eyes, still silent.

Suddenly she became aware of it, and concern masked her face.

"Why, Brian—what's the matter? You haven't said a thing, and you look so-so strange!"

A waiter attended them.

"Yes. Perhaps I'd better explain right now. It may make our luncheon a less pleasant affair than I'd looked forward to; but I'm afraid that can't be helped."

"We've known each other quite a while, Linda—since a couple of years before we were married. I've always thought you were the one woman in the world I could really trust. That is, until last night. You didn't know it, but I was awake when you came in from—what was it?—oh, yes: from 'visiting Aunt Emily.' I was awake and I heard a decidedly unfeminine voice say, 'Well, toodleoo, old dear'."

There wasn't an instant's hesitation in her response.

"Why, you silly, shameful boy! I wouldn't have believed it of you. To think you'd let such a suspicion destroy your confidence in me—and with no more grounds than an overheard whisper. Brian, I hope it'll make you feel very small to know that the man who said good night to me at the door was Uncle Edgar!"

He didn't reply at once.

Into his expression had crept something which didn't entirely resemble conviction.

Yet at last he smiled apologetically and said:

"Very well; I'm sorry, my dear. Just forget it and forgive me, if you can."

The service came and neither spoke while the waiter was bustling around them.

Brian's glance idly swept the now rapidly filling cluster of tables, to light upon a man just entering.

An impeccably garbed fellow he was, with steel-stripe trousers, spats, and a malacca cane.

As he drew near, Brian saw the face and started.

"I'm a trifle early," Brian heard him say; "I have an appointment here with Mr. Jones—Mr. Alexander Jones. You can serve me now; I'll have coffee and liqueur when he arrives."

Linda noted her husband's absorption and asked:

"What are you watching so intently?"

With an odd look at her, he said carelessly:

"Oh, just a chap who came in a moment ago. The one sitting alone on your right."

Her eyes followed his indication.

The newcomer had seated himself, and for a moment she scrutinized him in silence.

"Why, you know," she remarked finally, "there's something awfully familiar about him, but I can't for the life of me think who he is."

"Really?" A hint of intensity was in Brian's manner, though his tone remained casual.

"That's unusual; you have such an excellent memory for names and faces."

She turned upon him a smile both sweet and frank.

"Only with people we both know, dear, I'm afraid. I've become so wrapped up in you and our life together, I doubt if I should remember anyone I knew before I married you. Queer, isn't it, what love can do to a perfectly normal woman?"

Almost fiercely his hand closed over hers, but the grin he wore was of sheepish delight.

"Honey, I—listen; let's get out of here. I want to go home; I want to be alone with you and try to tell you how ashamed I am of what I said a few minutes ago. Never mind the lunch; we can eat any time."

Regarding him in wide-eyed surprise, Linda reached for her purse and fumbled it uncertainly.

"Why, Brian, what on earth made you say that all of a sudden? I don't—"

"Tell you later. Let's go."

When they reached the street, she halted him to demand:

"Now, out with it. I won't go another step until you tell me what this is all about."

Beaming down at her, Brian replied:

"Gladly, darling. It just happens that that fellow you didn't recognize is the man you were going with and practically engaged to when I met you. What you said about it made me realise what a rotten fool I'd been to doubt you. Come along—we're going where I can just sit and hold you in my arms!"

The gentleman in spats was leisurely finishing a frappe.

The headwaiter approached and made a throat-clearing sound.

"Pardon, sir; did you—ah—say you were expecting someone to join you?"

Consulting his watch, the diner said: "Hmm—yes; but it looks as if he weren't coming. Too bad."

"Then of course you'll take the check, sir?"

"Well, now unfortunately I've come off without my billfold."

Immediately the waiter stiffened.

"I shall have to call the manager. Here, number ten; inform the manager that—"

"Just an instant there, garcon; I hadn't finished. I was about to say that my coming here was arranged as a little favor to a lady. If you'll just look under the nearest plate on that table—the one right over there—I think you'll find she hasn't forgotten me."

Palpably skeptical, the headwaiter stalked across and lifted the half-empty dish of lobster salad that had been Linda's.

There on the white cloth reposed a five-dollar bill.

"Ah, quite as I thought," the man at the table said.

Rising, he flicked a crumb from his lapel, reached for his walking stick, and added:

"Keep the change, but let that be a lesson to you. Only trouble and embarrassment come from hasty suspicions. Toodle-oo, old top."

Bonarlaw

Bonarlaw—On Thursday evening of last week the large farm house of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Hannah on the 15th line of Rawdon, was filled to overflowing when their numerous friends and neighbours gathered and presented Mr. and Mrs. Hannah and family with a beautiful floor lamp and an electric iron.

Mr. J. P. Baker, who acted as chairman, and Mr. W. J. Barlow expressed on behalf of the community the regret felt by all when it was learned they were soon to leave this Township, and wished them all happiness and success in their new home.

The gifts were presented by Mrs. Dave Wellman and Mrs. John B. Brown.

Mrs. Hannah and her daughter Violet, members of the Springbrook Women's Institute, were also presented with a beautiful silver plated casserole and a silver dish by the members of this organization. The presentation was made by Mrs. J. P. Baker and Mrs. W. J. Barlow, the President and Secretary. In making the presentation, Mrs. Baker referred to the splendid co-operation received from Mrs. Hannah and Violet and their willingness at all times to offer their home for meetings and their readiness to assist in every way possible. They will be greatly missed.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Hannah and Violet thanked those present for the gifts and invited all to visit them in their new home. They were given three rousing cheers and all sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

The balance of the evening was spent in social intercourse, games, community singing, a bountiful lunc hand both round and square dancing to the excellent music furnished by Messers. Kouri and Reynolds of Marmora.

At the close of the Sunday School session Easter morning, Mrs. W. G. Swayne, organist and choir leader of St. Mark's choir was presented with a beautiful Easter Lily from the members of the choir. Mrs. Swayne thanked the choir in a few well chosen words.

At the service in St. Mark's Church Good Friday evening the special preacher was Rev. A. S. McConnell of Stirling and his sermon was greatly enjoyed by all.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating buckwheat cakes and sausages for breakfist, being my favorite breakfist, and ma said, Here's another letter from my sister Fanny.

G, does she say any more about what to send me for my birthday? I said, and ma said, As a matter of fact that's precisely what her letter is about. Here's what she writes, she writes, I've given some further thought to the subject of a birthday present for Benny, and I want to give him something caracter bilding and something that will teach him the value of money if possible, and since it is one of my leeding principals that the only way a boy learns the value of money is by spending it himself in person, I have decided to send him five dollers in ready cash to spend any way he pleases.

O boy that means I have to spend it, I'm not suppose to put it away and save it even if I want to, so I just have to spend it because that's part of the rules of the present, I said, and ma said Well in a way, but dont jump at any conclusions that may not be there, because your Aunt Fanny goes on to say more, she goes on to say, So if I receive a nice letter from Benny promising me that he has decided to buy himself some caracter bilding present such as a nice stout pair of shoes or whatever elts his little fancy dictates in the non-frivolous line; I will send on the money.

Aw heck, G willickers, that's a heck of a way to spoil a good idea, I said. Now she's gone and spoilt my favorite breakfist, I said, and pop said, Well there's one bright side to that, you had already cleaned it up, to the last sticky crumb, before you realize it was spoilt

Wich I had, but it still didn't seem like much of a bright side.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Mar. 27 (CP).—Toronto Exchange was more active in the industrials today and minor gains showed. Mining issues firmed slightly. Turnover totalled 210,000 shares.

Foods, utilities, textiles and miscellaneous industrials posted more gains than losses. C.P.R., Brazilian and Massey-Harris ruled higher.

Teck Hughes, Francoeur, Dome and Aunor were gold gainers with the action bulking in Francoeur. Among the senior base metals, Noranda was up a bit and Nickel and Hudson Bay lower.

A gain of 4 cents for Home to 2.47 was the main change in western oils.

WALL STREET

New York, Mar. 27 (AP). — The stock market rallied smartly today under the leadership of steels and gains of 1 to 4 points appeared throughout the list.

The Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks was up half a point at noon. It was one of the staunchest boosts since last fall.

The spark for the action was set off by U.S. Steel Corp. which, late yesterday, announced a $1 a common share dividend. Big steel jumped on the basis of overnight orders and the market generally followed suit.

Dome Mines, on the Canadian list, improved fractionally. Hiram Walker, Distillers Seagram and Lake Shore Mines were unchanged. Others were inactive.

MANION TO TAKE HOLIDAY TO REST

seat made available by which he could again enter parliament. He suffered personal defeat in Port William yesterday so he will not be in the House of Commons next session unless some of his successful followers resign in his favor.

Reports were heard here today that Dr. Manion already had decided to resign the leadership when his followers convene for the opening of parliament but his office stated this was not true.

Hopeful of Few Seats More

Conservative advisers here are still hopeful that the soldiers' votes will add a few seats to the National Government column. It is also suggested that if the soldier vote is fairly solid for National Government candidates, that might be considered some vindication of Dr. Manion's campaign effort and a possible factor in determining the leadership question.

Should Dr. Manion not seek reelection at this time, it is expected the successful National Government candidates will not caucus until shortly before the House opens, likely early in May and will elect a House leader. Hon. R. B. Hanson, comes back to parliament as member for York-Sudbury. He succeeded Hon. H. H. Stevens as Minister of Trade and Commerce in the Bennett Cabinet and will likely be one of the names considered if a temporary leader is chosen. Hon. Grote Stirling who was Defence Minister in the same cabinet has been returned. Hon. Earl Rowe elected in Dufferin Simcoe also served for a short time in Mr. Bennett's government.

Several Toronto Conservatives have had good parliamentary experience and will have strong claims on House leadership.

Despite the defeat, Conservatives here paid tribute to the strong fight Dr. Manion put up against great odds and expressed their readiness to meet his wishes in whatever course he should decide.

EGG PRICES EASE AT TORONTO

Toronto, March 27—Trading continued at a low ebb for all lines throughout Tuesday's session of the Toronto open produce market. Egg prices eased slightly on some grades, while butter held steady.

Although fresh receipts were not heavy, with blocked roads still curtailing deliveries, prevailing slow demand caused a shading down in some prices on the egg market. In the graded section, grade A-large eased to the range of 21 1-2c to 22c, while the three top grades weakened 1c per dozen in the retail division.

The butter market maintained former price levels in quiet dealings. Arrivals of fresh supplies remained small and no selling pressure was evident. The odd lot of Ontario butter was reported sold to out-of-town points.

Montreal Produce

Butter: First grade creamery prints, jobbing price, 29c to 29 1-4c and first grade solids, jobbing price 28 1-2c to 28 3-4c.

Eggs: Graded shipments in used free cases, selling, price, A-large, 24c; A-medium, 22c; A-pullets, 21c; B, 21 1-2c; C, 19 1-2c to 20c; B-large unquoted. Receipts: 888 cases.

LIVESTOCK

Montreal, March 27 — (CP) — Calves were easier in early trade on Montreal Livestock markets today, while other classes remained steady the Dominion Department of Agriculture reported.

Receipts: Cattle, 44; lambs, 4; hogs, 224; calves, 360.

One carload of medium to good steers was just received. The balance of the cattle were mostly canners and cutters, and these sold at $3 to $3.75.

Veal calves ranged from $7.50 for common light kinds to $9 for medium good veals. The bulk of calves were of common to just fair kinds and sold between $7.50 to $8 with better kinds at $8.25 to $8.50.

Hogs made $9.40 for bacons fed and watered. Selects drew $1 premium with regular cuts on off grades and sows were slow at $5.25 to $6.25. Hogs sold on rail grade brought $12.40 hot weight.

Toronto, March 27—(CP)— Cattle trade continued dull up to mid-session on the Toronto livestock market today with prices about steady. Veal calves were firm. Sheep were steady. No price was established on hogs. The holdover from Tuesday was 300 head of cattle.

Weighty steers sold at $6.50-$7.50. Good butcher steers and heifers ranged from $7.25-$7.50 with common selling downward to $6. Butcher cows sold at $4-$5.50 and a few bulls at $5.25-$6. Fed calves sold at $7.50-$8.75.

ARRESTED FOR ROBBERY

Toronto, Mar. 27 (CP).—Captured after police had fired a shot during chase, Charles Amsden, 19, and Louis Booth, 16, were arrested last night and charged with armed robbery and theft of two automobiles. Police believe a shotgun found in one of the stolen cars was used in the robbery of a Toronto gasoline station.

Many Large Majorities Rolled Up by Successful Candidates

By the Canadian Press

Liberal strength in Quebec showed the way to big-majority votes rolled up in yesterday's election.

On the basis of incomplete returns compiled by The Canadian Press at least eight candidates in the traditionally Liberal Province had amassed majorities — in some cases pluralities—of more than 10,000.

Eugene Durocher, Liberal member of the last House for Montreal St. James, held the biggest majority for any candidate in the Dominion—a lead of more than 25,000 over his nearest opponent.

Four Cabinet members appeared to lead majority holders in four provinces. They are Hon. J. L. Ralston, Minister of Finance, with a plus figure of 2,941 in Prince constituency in Prince Edward Island; Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Minister of National Revenue, 5,545 in Digby-Annapolis-Kings, Nova Scotia; Hon. J. E. Michaud, Minister of Fisheries, 6,466 in Restigouche-Madawaska, New Brunswick, and Hon. J. A. MacKinnon, Minister without portfolio, 8,007 in Edmonton West, Alberta.

Quebec Liberals who gathered in impressive majorities, in addition to Durocher, are: H. Deslauriers, Montreal St. Mary, 17,108; Ernest Bertrand, Montreal Laurier, 16,893; Peter Bercovitch, Montreal Cartier, 15,775; S. Fournier, Montreal Maisonneuve-Rosemount, 11,061; Joseph Jean, Montreal Mercier, 14,477; Azellus Denis, Montreal St. Denis, 13,467, and J. T. A. Fontaine, St. Hyacinthe-Bagot, 10,583.

Denton Massey's Majority Large

Though returns from many parts of the Dominion were still incomplete and still lacked the soldier vote, Denton Massey, in Toronto Greenwood, appeared to be among the biggest majority-holders in the National Government ranks. Unofficial returns gave him a majority of 6,836. In Toronto Broadview, Tommy Church, veteran of the House, had a plus figure for the National Government of 6,129.

At the same time, Sam Factor retained the Toronto Spadina seat for the Liberals with a majority of around 6,100.

Ontario's leader for the Liberals, however, appeared to be J. R. Hurtubise, who retained his northern constituency of Nipissing with a majority of more than 16,000.

Ralph Maybank appeared to hold the honors in Manitoba, with a plus of 8,866 in Winnipeg South Centre, another Liberal seat.

W. G. Brown, only United Reform member of the last House, was high man in Saskatoon city with a majority of 5,457.

In British Columbia, A. W. Neill, Independent, retained his Comox-Alberni seat with a majority of about 6,000 on incomplete returns.

In contrast, one of the smallest majorities recorded was that for K. J. Cochrane, Liberal, in Cumberland, Nova Scotia, who held a lead of only six votes over P. C. Black, National Government. Guy Demings, C. C. F. candidate, trailed far behind.

Geo. A. White, First Native Son Of Madoc to Become M. P.

Member-Elect for Hastings-Peterborough is Prominent Lawyer — Served Overseas in Great War and Won Military Medal

A distinguished soldier and a self-styled "country lawyer", one who has served his country well and his municipality efficiently realized a life's ambition yesterday when George A. White, prominent Madoc lawyer, and National Government candidate in the Federal election in the riding of Hastings-Peterborough, was returned victorious by a majority of 188 over the ex-sitting Liberal member, Rorke Ferguson, of Norham.

Emerging victorious from his first campaign for parliamentary honors, Mr. White naturally was elated when interviewed by The Ontario Intelligencer today. He expressed his appreciation to the electors of his far-flung riding which stretches into the northern limits of both Hastings and Peterborough Counties, and over the tortuous roads of which he journeyed four times in the campaign battle.

The first native son to be elected to the Federal Parliament Mr. White was born in Madoc not too many years ago. He is in his early forties and during that time has never strayed very far from the place of his birth with the exception of the war years of 1914-18 when he served with distinction with the 44th Winnipeg Battalion, winning the Military Medal for conspicuous bravery on the field of battle, after being wounded three times.

His Active Career.

He received his early education in the public and high schools of Madoc later graduating from Osgoode Hall, Toronto, after returning from overseas. Previous to enlistment he was articled with the Belleville law firm of which the late E. Gus Porter was the head. His period of war service followed, and upon his return from overseas and graduation he was associated with the Toronto legal firm of Mowatt and McLennan.

He returned to his native Madoc in 1924 and has conducted a successful practice in that village since, taking time off to serve his municipality as a member of the council.

His demobilization from the army, however did not suffice to lull his interest in things military. For the past fourteen years he has been associated with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment with the rank of captain. He still takes a keen interest in his unit and his efforts toward the furtherance of that regiment have been no small contributing factor in the high plane it held among military units of the district prior to leaving for overseas.

Political Experience.

He also took an active part in the now famous "Battle of Hastings" by-election in 1936 when Dr. Harold Welsh, Conservative, was returned over Dr. Harold Boyce, Liberal, after a fight in which the high-ranking stalwarts of both parties took an active part.

Mr. White is married to an ex-Belleville girl, the former Miss Eileen McBride, daughter of Mr. E. R. McBride and the late Mrs. McBride of this city.

Commenting on the recent campaign and the election today, Mr. White stated that adverse weather conditions resulted in a much lighter vote than usual. "In some places," he said, only thirty or forty per cent of the vote was polled due to snow-filled roads".

He voiced the opinion that his majority of 188 would be substantially increased when the final returns of the soldier vote are made known.

Rogers Cites Re-Election as Answer to Criticism

Kingston, Ont., March 27—(CP) —Defence Minister Rogers cited his re-election in Kingston as an answer to criticism which would not be misunderstood by the people of Canada.

"There was no bitterness in my heart at any time during the campaign," Mr. Rogers told followers in his committee rooms after his return to parliament was indicated last night. "You citizens who supported me so well today know what the victory means, not only to this riding but to Canada as a whole.

"I hardly know what to say in words of appreciation to you for this great victory. Hundreds of you voters forgot your political affiliations and voted for the party which you thought could best carry on Canada's war effort."

Mr. Rogers was returned by a majority of 2,115 in the civilian vote over Col. T. A. Kidd, National Government candidate and former Speaker of the Ontario Legislature.

BRITISH DESTROY TWO NAZI PLANES

A series of Nazi reconnaissance flights staged over the area since Monday night revived forebodings of a possible German offensive through Netherlands and Belgium. French army sources pointed out, however, that there has been no appreciable change in the disposition of German troops massed near the Dutch and Belgian borders since last fall.

Some Nazi troops have been moved from the right to the left bank of the Rhine, it was said. The move involved relatively few men, however, and the general picture remained unchanged.

Most of the land operations over the past 24 hours have developed along the western wing of the front. Artillery batteries on both sides were particularly active along the 12-mile front between the Moselle and Nied Rivers.

Yesterday's routine patrol work featured several skirmishes in the sector to the west of the Saar river, a particularly active zone since the first days of the war. A German patrol attempted to envelop a French outpost, but was easily repulsed. A French detail succeeded, however, in penetrating deep into enemy territory and regained the Allied lines with valuable information.

Berlin, Mar. 27 (CP-Havas).—The German High Command claimed in its communique today that one British and one French airplane were shot down yesterday. The communique said:

"On the Western Front we succeeded in taking several prisoners during a reconnaissance operation in the sector south of Pirmasens. The enemy also suffered losses in killed and wounded.

"North of Wissembourg an enemy reconnaissance group was repulsed and suffered losses.

"During the night of March 25-26, pursuit planes and anti-aircraft guns, our reconnaissance planes operating over France obtained important reconnaissance results.

"During the night of March 2-526, several enemy planes flew over northern and western Germany. On this occasion, the territories of Denmark, the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg were again violated.

"On March 26 enemy planes tried several times to fly over the Franco-German border. German pursuit planes repulsed the adversary and shot down, without themselves suffering losses, one British Hurricane and one French Morane.

MAC HAIG PLEASED GOV'T RETURNED; THANKS WORKERS

Liberal Candidate Congratulates Mr. Stokes on His Clean Campaign

HAS NO REGRETS

A natural disappointment at being defeated at the polls in his first campaign, but which was tempered with distinct pleasure at the overwhelming return of the King Government in the Federal elections yesterday characterized a brief statement given to the Ontario Intelligencer today by Mr. McLean Haig, official Liberal candidate, who ran second in the three-cornered fight won by George H. Stokes, National Government in the riding of Hastings South.

"The vote polled yesterday in the Dominion," Mr. Haig said, "exemplified in no uncertain manner the faith of the Canadian people in the war effort of the King administration. The outcome should prove a source of encouragement to Great Britain and her Allies."

Mr. Haig extended his congratulations to Mr. Stokes, the victorious candidate and complimented him on his conduction of a cleanly fought campaign ."I also want to express my deep appreciation to those loyal supporters and workers without whom my campaign would have meen impossible. I have no regrets whatever in entering the election field, and feel confident that under different circumstances the ultimate result might have been changed."

PELEE ISLAND PLANE MISSING

Pilot and Possibly Two Passengers Missing Somewhere Between Island and Mainland

Leamington, Ont., March 27—(CP)—The Pelee Island mail plane with Pilot Tom Higgins, veteran of the short over-water crossing, and possibly two passengers aboard, was listed as missing here this afternoon and was believed to have come to grief somewhere on the 15-mile stretch of ice between here and the island.

The plane left Leamington landing field at 10.30 a.m. for the eight minute Pelee flight. It reportedly reached the island and took to return at 2.30 p.m. It was more than two hours overdue.

From Windsor airport a plane flown by Pilot Bev. Briscoe started a search, Windsor was asked for a second rescue plane.

Residents lined up along the beach and on the pier here. One man with binoculars picked up sights on what he said were three persons approximately four miles out from shore, walking towards the mainland across the ice. An open channel, 200 to 300 yards wide separates the main land from the ice.

LIBERAL STRENGTH INCREASED IN BRITISH COLUMBIA

Gov't. Has Stronger Parliamentary Strength in Western Canada Than in 1935

HERRIDGE DEFEATED

Winnipeg, March 27—(CP)—Liberals won stronger parliamentary support in Western Canada on the basis of incomplete civilian returns from yesterday's Federal election than was given them in 1935 when the West sent 37 Liberals and Liberal-Progressives to the House of Commons.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King received personal endorsation in Prince Albert which he has represented since 1926 and all four of his Western Cabinet Ministers were reelected by substantial majorities. With eight seats undecided in the four Western provinces, election of 39 supporters of the King Administration was indicated.

Liberal strength was maintained in Manitoba and increased in British Columbia. Losses to Co-operative Commonwealth Federation candidates in Saskatchewan were more than offset in Alberta at the expense of Social Crediters running under the New Democracy banner.

The Yukon seat was kept in the Black family when George Black, National Government candidate and former House of Commons Speaker, was elected in the constituency his wife represented in the last parliament as an Independent Conservative.

Prime Minister Ahead

Incomplete returns in Prince Albert gave the Prime Minister a lead of 533 over R. R. Manvill, National-Unity, with a C.C.F. candidate and a Communist far back. Resources Minister T. A. Crerar was re-elected in Churchill, Agriculture Minister J. G. Gardiner in Melville Hon. James A. MacKinnon, Minister without Portfolio, in Edmonton West, and Pensions Minister Ian Mackenzie in Vancouver Centre.

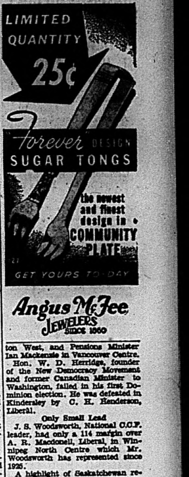
Hon. W. D. Herridge, founder of the New Democracy Movement and former Canadian Minister to Washington, failed in his first Dominion election. He was defeated in Kindersley by C. H. Henderson, Liberal.

Only Small Lead

J. S. Woodsworth, National C.C.F. leader, had only a 114 margin over A. R. Macdonell, Liberal, in Winnipeg North Centre which Mr. Woodsworth has represented since 1925.

A highlight of Saskatchewan returns was the re-election in Rosetown Biggar of M. J. Coldwell, National chairman of the C.C.F., who defeated R. P. Hassard, Liberal.

J. H. Blackmore, Social Credit leader in the last House, was reelected in Lethbridge.



Preferring to move from the land ceded to the Soviet union by the terms of the peace treaty, these Finnish women and children are en route to their new home in some other part of Finland—the actual site of which is still unknown to them. The mass movement began as soon as the treaty was signed. Notice that the children still gaze aloft as if searching for Russian planes, despite the fact that fear of bombing was removed with the signing of the pact.

Only the British censor knows why the name is withheld, but the young man on the LEFT here is one of the outstanding air heroes of the war on the western front up to now. He is 21, a New Zealander pilot in the Royal Air Force, and photographed as above chatting with a colleague as they loaded up machine-gun belts. The young pilot was flying over Germanv's Westwall recently with a sergeant as his gunner. German Messerschmitts attacked and shot the gunner, but the New Zealander flew the plane and used the guns, bringing down one German plane, driving the other off. He brought his own ship safely home to base.

PREDICTS REVOLT BY GERMAN ARMY IN JULY, AUGUST

German Aviator, Who Won Medals in Last War, Arrives in New York

SMUGGLES FAMILY OUT

"Things Are Terrible in Nazi Germany," He Says—Warm Water Baths Forbidden

New York, March 27—(CP)—Paul Mayer, a German aviator of the first Great War with a pocketful of medals for bravery, arrived from Holland aboard the liner Zaandam today with the prediction the German army will revolt in July or August.

"I look for an uprising by the army in July or August," Mayer said. "If there is a big battle the men who fought in the last war will not go on any longer.

"Things are terrible in Nazi Germany. There is nothing to eat but carrots and potatoes and one-half pound of meat a week for each person. A week before we left warm water baths were banned."

Mayer said that with the connivance of Nazi officials in Berlin he was able to smuggle his wife and children—Helga, 13 and Robert 12—across the border into Holland.

STRIKE CLOSES OSHAWA PLANT

Employees Ask Wage Increase of Ten Cents an Hour

Oshawa, Ont., March 27.—(CP)—The factory of The Ontario Malleable Iron Company closed today after its employees—numbering 200—went on strike. The strike was called by the local lodge of the Steel Workers' Organizing Committee.

The employees ask a general wage increase of 10 cents an hour, holidays with pay, and semi-monthly meetings on grievances. A closed shop also is asked. Picket lines were placed about the factory.

Negotiations have been carried on between the lodge and the company for several weeks. Last night the Union notified the head office of the company at Providence, R.I., that a strike would be called.

MISS A. MACPHAIL MAKES NO PLANS

Former Member of Grey-Bruce States Canada Will Regret Action of Yesterday

Ceylon, Ont., March 27.—(CP)—Miss Agnes Macphail, defeated as United Farmers of Ontario-Labor candidate in Grey-Bruce yesterday after 19 years in Parliament, told The Canadian Press today that she had made no plans for the future.

"I have no idea of what I'm going to do", said Miss Macphail, the first woman elected to parliament in Canada.

Miss Macphail commented on the elected in three terse sentences: "Canada will regret it. The entire issue of the election was whether the government can disregard Parliament. After this we apparently must take it for granted that the Government is everything".

Miss Macphail was defeated in a bitter fight with her two opponents, W. E. Harris, Liberal, who was conceded the seat on the basis of the civilian vote; and K. D. Knechtel, National Government candidate.

It was back in 1921 when Miss MacPhail, then just past the age of 30, was elected member of parliament for her home farm constituency. She was re-elected in the general elections of 1925, 1926, 1930 and 1935. During her years in the House she gained a reputation as an able debater and until recently was a bitter critic of expenditures for war preparation.

Mauretania Enters Pacific Ocean After Canal Trip

Balboa, Canal Zone, March 27—(AP)—The British liner Mauretania, stripped of her furnishings and bound on a secret war mission sailed out into the Pacific Ocean today for an unannounced destination after a cautious trip, which took 9 1-4 hours, through the Panama Canal.

The 35,739-ton liner steamed away at 1 a.m. EST, her crew lustily singing "It's a Long Way to Tipperary."

Yesterday her agents said she was crossing the Pacific and it was believed she was bound for Australia to become a troopship. The liner arrived at the Atlantic end of the canal Monday night, five days out of New York.

Color Cameras Expose Defence Of Camouflage

Washington, March 27—(AP)—The wide-vision eyes of aerial color cameras may prove to be one of the most effective weapons of warfare yet invented.

Color photography makes the art of camouflage a doubtful defence, officials of the army air corps said today, because it makes visible a range of colors which cannot be distinguished by the human eye or in ordinary black-and-white photography.

Gun emplacements, troops, supply trains and trenches which now are carefully concealed by nets, branches and colored cloth snap into sharp relief on a color photograph.

Test color pictures made by the United States Air Corps brought out camouflaged buildings and other details of the landscape which were invisible on black-and-white pictures.

MUSICAL PROGRAM AT KIWANIS CLUB

Leo B. Riggs, Miss Bernice Saunders and Harold Barrett Assisting Artists

One of the most interesting and delightful programs ever given to members of the Kiwanis Club was furnished by Leo B. Riggs, chairman of the musical committee and a brilliant staff of artists, including Miss Bernice Saunders and Harold Barrett at their weekly luncheon at the Queens Hotel on Tuesday.

The program was in celebration of the Easter holiday and it was a delight from every view point and the thanks of the club was ably expressed by Ivan Scott at the conclusion of the program. Leo B. Riggs, never fails to come up with something interesting when he is in charge and it appears it is a delight for him to be giving enoyment especially if that enjoyment is the result of music. Leo in his own inimitable style and beautiful technique rendered a composition "Gypsy Melodies" and the members simply were delighted with the rendition. When someone inquired, Leo hesitatingly admitted that more than six hours was given to practice on the composition, which clearly shows the interest this accomplished artist takes in his music.

Miss Bernice Saunders gave two solos "Pardon Me Madam" and "None But the Lowly Heart" and after an insistent demand another number was given. Miss Saunders has a beautiful soprano voice and was never heard to better advantage. She was followed by Mr. Harold Barrett, who although suffering from a sore throat for the past week kindly did his part with the beautiful baritone solo "Loves Old Sweet Song." The whole program was much enjoyed and would bear repeating at any future occasion.

FRANCE TO CLOSE REFUGEE CAMPS

Only 6,000 Spanish Civil War Refugees Out of 500,000 Now in Cantonments

Paris, March 27. — (AP)—French Government camps for Spanish Civil War Refugees, whose number reached 500,000 after General Franco's Nationalists drove through Barcelona to the French border a year ago last January, will be closed the end of this month.

French officials, announcing this decision today, said that of the flood of refugee Spanish Republicans only 6,000 men remained in the once extensive cantonments. They produced records to deny allegations made recently in the United States and Mexico that the refugees had received "bad treatment".

Of the original men, women and children who streamed into France before the Franco advance, only 155,000 remain, officials said, and with the exception of the 6,000 still in camps, they have been assimilated in the nation's war effort.

The other 345,000 either have elected to return to Spain or have taken refuge in other countries, it was said.

EXPLOSION DAMAGES DESTROYER

Newport, R. I., March 27—(AP)—One sailor was missing and six others were being treated for injuries today after an explosion damaged the United States Navy destroyer King yesterday at its mooring here. Captain William S. Farber, Commander of the neutrality patrol unit to which the vessel was assigned, said the blast was caused by leaking gas.

70-YEAR-OLD MAN HAS MOTHER 108 YEARS OLD

Omaha, Neb., March 27—(AP)—Seventy-year-old William Cline of Omaha walked into a shop and asked for a wheel chair. "For yourself?" queried the attendant. "No," replied Cline, "for my mother." He explained that his mother, Mrs. Lucinda Cline of Wisner, Neb., who celebrated her 108th birthday last Valentine's Day, suffered a fractured hip in a fall and was in need of the chair.

Something new in advertising—a perfumed advertisement—made its appearance in a St. Louis newspaper last week. The "ad" bore the aroma of the product advertised, a brand of perfume. And here is how it was done. At LEFT, you see a pressman pouring scented ink into the press fountain on which the "ad" was printed. At RIGHT, a young lady takes a sniff of the ad and decides she likes the aroma. We shudder to think of the consequences should the cheese manufacturers decide to follow the perfumer's example.

Arab and Jewish Recruits, side by side, receive rifle drill instructions from a British non-commissioned officer at a training depot in Palestine. Officially known as Palestinians, these Arabs and Jews have formed an auxiliary military pioneer corps in which they train together for transport and other duties in any part of the world. For the first time in history they have forgotten all racial and political differences and have volunteered in large numbers for service with the British army in Palestine. This is the first picture to show them side by side, united for one cause. The first section of this corps has already arrived in France

ELECTED BY ACCLAMATION

Richibucto, N.B., March 27—(CP)—J. Killeen McKee, a Liberal, was elected by acclamation to the New Brunswick Legislature today when no other nomination papers were filed in a Kent County by-election.

The by-election was necessitated when A. A. Dysart, Liberal Premier, resigned his seat because of illness. Liberals now have 29 seats in the legislature and Conservatives nineteen.

STEEL ORDERS PLACED

London, March 27—(CP-Cable)—Big steel orders have been placed by the South African Railways and Harbors Administration with two Canadian firms, it was learned reliably today.

LIBERAL TOTAL MAY EXCEED 180 MEMBERS

Election of 117 Liberals Conceded at 2.15 p.m. (Wednesday)—Five Seats Still Doubtful

By the Canadian Press

Toronto, March 27—As late reporting constituencies added to the Liberal total today, it appeared possible Prime Minister Mackenzie King might have a government strength of more than 180 members in the new House of Commons—by far the largest in history.

At 2.15 p.m., E.S.T., election of 177 Liberals had been conceded in yesterday's election on the basis of the civilian vote. Five contests were doubtful, four in Alberta and one in Saskatchewan, and Liberal candidates were ahead in all of them.

Should these five and the deferred election in Three Rivers fall to the Liberals, Mr. King's following would total 183 out of 245. The National Government party has won 38 seats, C.C.F. 8 and New Democracy 7.

However, there was no assurance the Liberal would win the five undecided seats for which polling took place yesterday. Contests were close in the Alberta constituency of Acadia, Jasper?Edson, Peace River and Vegreville with New Democracy candidates only a few votes behind in each case.

British Columbia's final concessions left the Liberals with ten of the 16 seats in the Pacific province, National Government four, C.C.F. one and Independent one. Manitoba's standing was 13 Liberals, one Liberal-Progressive supporter of Mr. King, one National Government and one C.C.F.

Hon. H. H. Stevens, leader of the unsuccessful Reconstruction Party in the 1935 election, was defeated yesterday in Kamloops where he ran as the National Government candidate.

Third Annual Spring Festival Opens at St. Michael's Academy

If anyone noticed considerable activity by the members of St. Michael's Parish lately—the answer is that the members of the Affiliated Catholic Societies have been expending real effort to have everything in readiness and just right for their third annual Spring Festival which opens today in St. Michael's Academy auditorium.

When the doors open this afternoon for cafeteria supper which will be served today and tomorrow by the Women's League, the Festival will be officially started. From then on the carnival spirit will prevail with midway amusements and refreshment booths in charge of the members of the Knights of Columbus, stage entertainment and dancing in charge of Holy Name Society members, with many features too numerous to mention each night. As an added attraction this year and through the courtesy of the Commanding Officer the regular Royal Canadian Air Force dance band, 12 pieces, will be present to take part in the stage entertainment on Wednesday and Friday night and also supply the music for dancing. And the old timers too will have a chance for square and round dancing on Thursday night when Nobby Jones and his Merry Makers including Fred Stone and his violin will supply music. In short there will be fun for all who attend any of the three evenings—a large number of tickets have already been sold by members of the parish, which speaks well for assured success on this annual undertaking.

Reuters said the vessel took aboard copper at Manzanillo and molybdenum at San Pedro, Calif. Both metals are used in munitions making.

Citizens Prefer Warmth of Homes To Chill of Streets on Election Night

Conservative Rooms, However, Became Scene of Enthusiasm as Word of Stokes' Growing Majority Came in

CROWDS DEPART EARLY

Conservative Belleville, outwardly unperturbed during the past few weeks by the strenuous election campaign waged between Messrs. George H. Stokes, National Government; McLean Haig, Liberal and Harry R. Cory, Liberal for the candidature of the riding of Hastings South, refused to comply with historic traditions last night, and but for a few of the faithful, heard the election results over the radio loudspeakers or by telephone from the offices of this newspaper.

Conspicuous by their absence were the election crowds of other eras, that thronged public thoroughfares, speculating on the return of their favorites or parties long before the first returns began to trickle in. Missing were the famous street corner arguments that in the days of "keg-beer" elections usually resulted in partisan fist-fights. Missing were the highly excited more peaceful crowds of recent years which massed and jostled in front of the newspaper office, eager and anxious to get the returns.

For insofar as outdoor demonstrations are concerned with the exception of a spasmodic splurge in the headquarters of the various political factions, last night was an ordinary affair with no untoward scenes and little if any noise, with citizens taking the election in their stride.

Not even in the heat of the returns when the Liberal Government gradually forged to the front to take an overwhelming lead it never relinquished, was there any noise or cheering on the part of the faithful few who ventured downtown to hear the returns and take part in the fun, if any.

They stood in knots, singly and small groups listening to loudspeakers broadcasting returns as they filtered in from all parts of the Dominion.

Few on Streets

They sat in the warm comfort of heated cars, proof against the chilly winds that swept Front Street in occasional gusts. They conversed in low tones, speculating on what the next returns would bring but there were no demonstrations of any kind. Interested electors not actively associated with the associations of either party wandered in and out of the various committee rooms listening to comments or reports, then casually wandering out again.

By eleven o'clock when the Ontario Intelligencer signed off its broadcasting for the night there was scarcely a "corporal's guard" on the street. The King government had been returned and there was nothing one could do about it. The Liberal sympathizers, with the exception of an occasional excited supporter, went home quietly satisfied with the outcome while the Conservatives torn between two emotions, one at the victory of the local candidate and the other disappointed with the failure of the Manion government to overthrow the King administration, likewise wended their way homeward after due and fitting ovations had been given the successful candidate.

Liberal and Conservative committee rooms were hives of activity shortly after 8.30 o'clock, when the first returns came in. Supporters gradually filled the rooms to capacity but everything was orderly and the various crowds easily acquiesced to requests to maintain silence when reports were being received over the telephones.

Enthusiasm gradually grew in the Conservative rooms, however, as the steadily mounting Stokes' majority reached figures not expected by party adherents. Later, when the final result was announced, a demonstration was staged in which Mr. Stokes was hoisted to table and asked to give an address while his supporters cheered themselves into a mild frenzy.

There was an aura of disappointment in the Liberal Clubrooms however, as returns indicated the defeat of the official candidate, McLean Haig. Spirits quickly rose however, and more than offset the atmosphere of regret at local defeat, as the news of the overwhelming return of the King government came over the wires.

Considerable interest was displayed in the Cory headquarters during the early part of the evening. A loud-speaker, with announcer Tommy Mason at the microphone brought over the latest local returns for upwards of two hours, but interest in the contest soon lagged as the defeat of their candidate became certain.

Editorial Rooms Busiest Place

Perhaps the busiest place in town was the Editorial department of The Ontario Intelligencer. Here a battery of telephones jangled and buzzed incessantly from seven o'clock until midnight. Members of the office staff poured out a steady stream of information as an election-hungry home-loving populace clamored for news.

Computing machines clicked ceaselessly as members of the staff added columns of figures. Visitors to the offices gazed interestedly at a newspaper staff working "under a full head of steam." Announcer Claude Tice beat a path from the office teletype machines to his microphone that carried the news over loud-speakers to the people waiting on Front Street. Long distance phones rang intermittently as the correspondents of the newspaper in the far-flung sections of the riding sent in their reports. Reporters dashed in and out with special news from outside points. Editors arranged copy for the next day's editions. It was a scene of frenzied activity carried on to the ceaseless symphony of telephone bells.

2500 Phone Calls

In the office of the Bell Telephone system here a battery of operators did yeoman service in transmitting calls to and from the editorial rooms as well as relaying information to callers unable to contact newspaper telephones. The "hello" girls did a splendid job and lived up to all the fine traditions of public service that they are justly famous for. It was estimated at a late hour last night that upwards of twenty - five hundred calls were made through the medium of the telephone and newspaper offices.

MILD RECURRENCE OF SUN SPOTS

Wireless Telephone Communication Service to Europe is Disrupted

New York, March 27 (AP)— A milder recurrence of the sun-spot activities which severely disrupted communications Sunday and Monday, today cut off wireless telephone service to Europe, South America and ships at sea, and blanked short wave radio communications with Europe.

The American Telephone and Telegraph Company reported its telephone service to London, Paris, Amsterdam and Rome was thrown out of kilter at 11:19 a.m. E.S.T. Disruption of the South American circuits and those to ships at sea quickly followed.

The London and Amsterdam circuits were restored about an hour later.

WILSON H. MILLS THANKS HEPBURN FOR HIS SUPPORT

Liberal - Elect Member for Elgin Says Ontario Premier Drew Many Votes to Polls

MEMBER SINCE 1934

St. Thomas, Ont., March 27 (CP)—Wilson H. Mills, successful Liberal candidate for Elgin at yesterday's general election attributes his success at the polls to his neighbor, Premier Mitchell F. Hepburn, outspoken critic of Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

"I want to say thanks to my old friend and neighbor, Mitch Hepburn for his assistance," said Mr. Mills today. "He was out polling votes for me and I appreciate what he did. I don't care whether it suits everybody to mention this or not but I intend to. If Mitch Hepburn had wanted to turn against me he could have made the outcome different."

Both Premier Hepburn and Mr. Mills are farmers in Yarmouth township, just south of this city. Mr. Hepburn represented the riding in the Federal parliament until his selection as leader of the Ontario Liberal party. When he resigned to lead the party in the Ontario general election of 1934 neighbor Mills stepped forward, obtained the Liberal nomination and has since retained the seat.

Quarrel Dates Back to 1935

The Ontario premier's quarrel with Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Federal Liberal administration assumed new bitterness in the past few month. It dates back almost to 1935 when the present administration swept into office with Mr. Hepburn's full support.

Several attempts were made to patch up the dispute but it always broke out again. The last was after the outbreak of war when Mr. Hepburn went to Ottawa and assured the Federal government of Ontario's support in the national war effort.

At the recent session of the Legislature, however, Mr. Hepburn sponsored a resolution condemning the Federal government for lack of energy in prosecuting the war. The passage of this resolution as representative of the view of the Legislature of Canada's largest province was cited by Mr. King as one of the reasons for yesterday's general election. He said the government required a new mandate from the people.

Mr. Hepburn maintained his critical attitude throughout the recent election campaign although he took no part. Today he had nothing to add to his brief comment on the result of the voting last night. He said "I am still taking a long range view of the situation."

Angus Mowat Advocates Nation-Wide Library Service for Soldiers

Toronto, March 27.—(CP)—Angus Mowat, Inspector of Public Libraries for The Ontario Department of Education, said today that a real need in Canada at the present time was a nation-wide library service for the soldiers under the supervision of some department of the Federal government.

Florence Cameron of St. Thomas, A. Hume of Windsor, Mr. Norman Lyle of Hamilton and Helen Deans of Toronto, gave reports on their respective libraries for soldiers. They said the libraries were successful but lacked money to buy books.

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen
Science Service Meteorologist

Highest clouds! Very highest clouds, cirrus, some even in the stratosphere, show prismatic colors. These are caused, it is believed, by diffraction (bending of light around opaque obstacles) of light by very small particles of water, such as cloud particles. These clouds have been seen as high as 15 miles, much higher than the ordinary cirrus clouds which are generally seen at about 5 or 6 miles elevation. It is now thought that clouds seen in the stratosphere are brought there by the ascending currents of air associated with the traveling storm or cyclone.

SOCIAL CREDIT GOV'T RETURNED IN ALBERTA

Twenty-Nine Members of Party Now Officially Elected According to Vote

WILL ADD TO COUNT

Edmonton, March 28 (CP)—Premier William Aberhart's Social Credit Government was officially returned to power today, the seventh day after Albertans cast their votes in the Provincial election.

Election of N. E. Cook, who defeated F. S. Grisdale, Independent, by a margin of 66 votes in Olds constituency, increased the Social Credit forces to 29, giving them a majority of at least one in the 57-member assembly.

Social Creditors were almost certain to add to their majority as they led in nine of the 10 doubtful ridings where second counts will take place later today or possibly tomorrow.

The chief opposition will be Coalition Independents who have elected 17 members and lead in one riding. The other member of the next legislature will be Angus Morrison, Labor, representing Edson.

Cook's final count was 2,549 and his opponent's 2,471 after an Independent Social Credit candidate, Herbert J. Ash, who represented Olds as a Social Credit member of the last legislature, had been eliminated in the second count. Two hundred and nineteen of Ash's 354 ballots had second choices, giving 207 votes to Mr. Cook and 2 to Mr. Grisdale.

The members elected by second counts yesterday were four Social Crediters, two Independents and Morrison, who won Edson on a second count that left J. H. Unwin, former Social Credit whip, short 197 votes.

S. A. Berg, William Masson, Floyd M. Baker, Chairman of the Alberta Social Credit Board, and A. V. Bourcier all were re-elected in ridings where the third-party contestants, three Co-oprative Commonwealth Federation and ne Independent, were eliminated n second count.

FEARS TURN TO WRATH

UNUSUAL ACTION BETWEEN SARRE RIVER AND VOSGES

Successive Raids, Waves of Artillery Fire and Patrol Fights Reported

ATTACKS REPULSED

English Planes Attacking German Reconnaissance Machines Knock Down Two

(By Axel De Holstein, Havas Staff Writer).

Paris, March 28—(CP-Havas)—Successive raids, waves of artillery fire and patrol fights brought unusual action yesterday to the central section of the front, between the Sarre River and the Vosges mountains.

Continued "patrol activity on both sides, especially in the Vosges region," was reported by this morning's communique from the French high command which said there was "a calm night on the whole."

All German attacks on French posts were repulsed with ease.

French military authorities said that the local activity gave no reason to believe that a large-scale action is imminent.

German artillery action was mostly limited to harassing and range-finding fire directed in particular against certain shelters and small woods, numerous in the hilly region between the Sarre and the western slopes of the Vosges. French artillery replied in the same manner.

No Report Received

Authoritative French sources said that no report has been received in connection with German claims they took prisoners in the Pirmasens region.

The same was true of another report saying that a French plane had been shot down. Two days ago a French machine came under the fire of German pursuit planes but escaped and landed behind the French lines, its crew unhurt.

Bad weather during the past 24 hours kept both German and French air activity over the front down to virtually nothing.

Authoritative French military sources gave the following details concerning Tuesday afternoon's fight between British and German planes over the lines:—

English planes attacked a group of seven German reconnaissance machines accompanied by pursuit ships. During a sharp fight two German planes fell in flames and one British machine was shot down.

There can be no denial of the number of German planes certainly destroyed, since they crashed behind the Allied lines. It is possible that other planes, seriously damaged by shots from the British planes, crashed in German territory.

Hungary Offered Slovakia And Transylvania for Reported German Domination

Paris, March 28—(CP)— Genevieve Tabouis, French foreign affairs commentator, wrote in L'Oeuvre today that Germany was reported to have offered Hungary Slovakia and Transylvania — the latter now part of Rumania— in return for guaranteed German domination in the state that would thus be formed.

Mme. Tabouis said it was even reported that the current visit of Premier Paul Teleki of Hungary to Rome was to sound out Italian leaders on their attitude to the project.

She continued:—

"Germany, determined to impose its protection on Hungary and the Danubian basin territories, is reported to have submitted to Budapest a scheme, the aim of which is to give the Magyar national territorial compensations in exchange for part of its political independence.

"The plan is to create a tripartite state linking Slovakia, on the one hand and Transylvania, on the other, to Hungary.

"These three countries would enjoy some administrative and constitutional autonomy but would all be part of the same state, under the acknowledged influence of Germany.

"Although this plan might appear audacious and liable to raise, above all, energetic opposition from Rumania it is said to be the subject of Rome conferences. It is even reported to be one of the motives which determined the trip of the Hungarian Premier to the Italian capital."

(Slovakia came under German domination last spring when Germany tore up the Munich agreement promising to respect the independence of what was left of Czecho-Slovakia. Transylvania passed from Hungarian to Rumanian sovereignty at the end of the first Great War. Hungary has been agitating for years to regain it.)

London, March 28—(CP)—Owen O'Malley, British minister to Hungary, has been called to London for consultation on diplomatic and economic questions, it was disclosed today.

The envoy is expected to arrive here next week. It is understood that other British diplomatic representatives in the Balkans will shortly be called back for similar conferences.

Berlin, March 28—(CP-Havas)—Dr. Walther Darre, German Minister of Food and Agriculture, will pay a three-day visit to Budapest beginning next Tuesday, at the invitation of the Hungarian Agriculture Minister, the German news agency announced today.

British Ambassador to Japan Predicts Improvement in Relations Between Great Britain and Japan

Tokyo, March 28 — (AP) — Sir Robert Craigie, British Ambassador to Japan, today predicted an improvement in relations between Great Britain and Japan.

The two nations, he said, in a speech "ultimately are striving for the same objective, namely, a lasting peace and preservation of our institutions from extraneous, subversive influences."

At the same time, he announced that he and Lady Craigie would leave in mid-April for a two and a half month trip to the United States on a "private holiday."

The ambassador's distinguished audience at a luncheon of the Japan-British society included Prince Chichibu, Princess Chichibu and Foreign Minister Hachiro Arita.

"Bearing in mind the declared intentions of the Japanese Government and the measure of success already achieved," Sir Robert said "I have a definite feeling of confidence in the future of British-Japanese relations."

He said there was "room for satisfaction in the thought that the good sense of our two nations has prevented animosities of the moment from hardening into deep-seated resentment or permanent estrangement."

"It would be idle to deny that there have been serious divergencies of national policy and outlook," Sir Robert continued, "but what has struck me most is the extent to which the real differences have been overlaid by a mass of misunderstanding, misrepresentation and, all too often, fostered by the unwelcome attentions of interested third parties.

"Already there is growing in each country appreciation of the extent to which the actions of the other have been vilified and misrepresented."

The ambassador listed reverence for the throne, religious tolerance and respect for old traditions and customs as attributes Great Britain and Japan have in common.

New Laboratory Hopes to Find Valuable Information on Heart

Minneapolis, March 28—(AP) —The University of Minnesota today opened a new heart laboratory in which it is hoped to find answers to the questions:—

How much can your heart stand?

Does sudden, vigorous exercise hurt an average heart?

What effect does modern living have upon this vital organ?

Does the average athlete injure or build up his heart?

The laboratory is using new methods which already have uncovered interesting information. The research is in charge of Dr. Ancel Keys. He is an expert mountain climber, a sport which first directed his attention to hearts through the effects of high altitude.

His research has ridiculed the once-popular theory that an athlete's heart is larger than that of the non-athlete. This was learned by a new method of measuring the heart's output of blood. However, there is a difference in the amount of blood pumped.

The reason is that the athlete's heart muscles relax more between beats than those of the average person. This relaxation enables the heart to take in more blood as it expands. It also lets the athlete's heart pump at a slower pace. The conclusion is that an athlete's heart does less work, more efficiently.

These measurements are made with the aid of X-rays showing the contraction and expansion of the heart and a measured amount of gas breathed into the lungs. This gas is carried away from the lungs by the circulating blood and the amount is an index of the volume of blood moving.

Measure Heart Leakage

The same apparatus gives for the first time an accurate method of measuring heart leakage. It has shown that a heart murmur does not necessarily mean a leakage of blood. Without the leakage a murmur may not be much of a risk.

The new laboratory resembles a combination of gymnasium, X-ray studio and physician's office. It contains a treadmill which moves at speeds from a walk to 20 miles an hour. A champion runner on this mill can keep the 20-mile pace for about 40 seconds.

The treadmill can be tilted into a 25-per cent grade. Specially designed X-ray apparatus makes it possible to photograph the hearts from all angles. In the past hearts have been X-rayed mostly from one angle.

The subjects vary from six years to adults. A system of long-time records has begun to chart the effects of diseases, types of work and differences in living.

U. S. DELIVERS 1,600 WARPLANES TO THE ALLIES

These Delivered in Last 14 Months and Production Rushed on 2,700 More

MAY BUY 8,000

Washington, March 28 (AP)—United States aircraft plants, an official report disclosed today, have delivered about 1,600 warplanes to British and French fighting forces in the last 14 months and are rushing production on orders for 2,700 more

These initial European war contracts were generally regarded as forerunners of a large-scale Allied program for purchase of 8,000 more ships at an estimated cost of $1,000,000,000.

Air Ministry Confirms Loss of R. A. F. Bomber

London, March 28 (CP)—The Air Ministry confirmed today that a Bristol-Blenheim bomber, intercepted by German pursuit planes while reconnoitring over Heligoland Bight yesterday, was missing.

DNB, official news agency, reported last night that the plane was shot down.

Two Norfolk lifeboats, meanwhile, were reported to have made a fruitless search for another British plane believed down on the North Sea after a patrol flight. The lifeboat crews were attracted by flares.

LONDON PAPERS HAIL VICTORY OF KING GOVERNMENT

Claim Landslide Renewed Proof That Canada's Only Disagreement Was as to How She Could Best Serve

LEADERS PRAISED

London, March 28—(CP)—British newspapers today hailed the Liberal landslide in Canada as renewed proof that the Dominion's only disagreement was as to how she could best serve the common cause.

The Times explained the sweeping victory on the grounds that "the alternative which the Opposition had to offer was not sufficiently attractive to tempt many voters to the risks involved in a change of government during the war".

JUST HAPPY OVER RESULT

London, March 28—(CP-Cable) —A serious scientific report that Canadian-born gophers at the London zoo have just begun waltzing sent reports and photographers hurrying to record the phenomenon today.

But the spry, near-albino gophers didn't waltz.

Said Superintendent Vevers: "May be it was an amorous display because it is the mating season."

Said Columnist William Hickey, "Or may be they had heard the election result."

Allies Decide Peace Terms Not to be Discussed Before Complete Agreement on Conditions of Security

SUPREME COUNCIL MEETS

Council Also Decides Community of Interest to be Maintained After War

London, March 28—(CP)—The British and French governments agreed today that during the war they will neither negotiate nor conclude an armistice or treaty of peace except by mutual agreement. The decision was made at a meeting of the Supreme War Council.

The meeting was attended by Premier Paul Reynaud of France and the Allied Commander-in-Chief, General Gamelin.

The Allied war leaders also agreed, said an official statement, not to discuss peace terms before reaching complete agreement on the conditions necessary to ensure effective and lasting guarantees of security.

Finally they agreed "to maintain after the conclusion of peace community of action in all spheres," the statement declared.

Statement is Issued

The text of the statement follows:

"The sixth meeting of the Supreme War Council was held in London today. The council assembled in the morning and a further meeting took place in the afternoon.

Neutral Nations Obliged to Protest Breaches of Neutrality Says Paper

London, March 28—(CP)— The Times today suggested in an editorial on the Norwegian situation that small neutral countries find themselves obliged to protest in any case of suspected breach of their neutrality in order to forestall possible German charges of unneutral bias.

The newspaper pointed out that the Norwegian puptests awaited answer here, said:

"There is full understanding and sympathy here with the difficulties of the Scandinavian states. The position of small neutrals during a struggle between greater powers is always delicate. No doubt they may consider it prudent, in order to forestall any German charge of unneutral bias, to protest whenever there is the least suspicion of irregularity — even when, as in the case of the Altmark, British ships intervened in order to prevent a gross abuse of the hospitality of Norwegian territorial waters."

The newspaper stressed, however, that "the British Navy is doing all in its power to safeguard the interests of neutrals, while the German Navy is entirely ignoring them.

"Since the outbreak of the war," it said, "no Norwegian ship has been attacked by us, and the Norwegians well know none is liable to be attacked. But Norway has lost 80 ships and the lives of 400 seamen, every one of them by German action."

Serve As Protection

The work of the British Navy and air force in waters used by Norwegian ships "is mainly directed toward preventing these attrocities," The Times continued. "The ships are there to sweep mines, sink U-boats and shoot down airplanes by which Norwegian lives are threatened.

"The truth is that the Scandinavian neutrals have everything to gain and nothing to lose by reg-

Pelee Island Mail Plane Crashes on Lake Erie Ice Field

Rescue Boat Guided Over Treacherous Ice Field by Pilot of Border Cities Aero Club and Message Taken Back to Shore That All Were Dead on Board

BADLY WRECKED

Pilot Reports Nose of Wrecked Plane Deeply Embedded in Ice and Engine Shoved Back in Cockpit — Believed Pilot Misjudged Altitude and Crashed

Leamington, Ont., March 28—(CP)—A rescue boat today reached the wreckage of the Pelee Island mail plane on the ice four miles off here and found Pilot Tom Higgins and two passengers dead. The passengers were Mabel Tessier, 20, North Ridge, and Sam Konscky, Leamington fur buyer.

Pilot John Dehne of the Border Cities Aero Club and Barney Gloster, newspaper cameraman, from another plane at eight a.m. today sighted the wreckage of the Pelee plane, more than 20 hours overdue here on its 15-mile hop, and guided a rescue boat to the spot.

It was believed that the three were killed as the plane crashed as there was no sign they had made any effort to leave the wreck.

News that the three were dead was brought here by the plane. Pilot Dehne and those in the rescue boat wrote "all dead" in the snow to give him the message.

Bodies Taken to Shore

Pilot Norman Reynolds in another plane, returned from the scene and said that the bodies had been placed in two rescue boats and were being brought to the mainland over water-covered ice. It was thought it would be 2 p.m. or later before the boats reached here.

Members of the boat crews wer Jim Sherratt, Robert Bosman, Thomas Bell, Charles Rowley, Earl Cooper, Martin James and Henry Fisher. It was learned that Miss Tessier, killed in the crash, was the sweetheart of Sherratt. Sherratt was Pilot Higgins mechanic.

The wrecked biplane was purchased last May for $20,000. It was a four-passenger model.

Plane Badly Wrecked

"The plane was badly wrecked," Pilot Dehne said. "It looked as though the pilot tried to get his position in bad visibility, misjudged his altitude and crashed. It seemed from marks on the ice that the plane bounced several times before the nose hit. The nose is imbedded in ice and it appears the engine is shoved back in the cockpit. I don't see how anyone could be alive."

It has not been established whether the mail plane reached Pelee on its daily trip with the mail or whether it crashed on the way there. The underground cable to the island has been broken and only communication this winter has been by plane.

The plane was due on its return

BRITISH BOMBER DOWN IN HOLLAND

One of Crew Leaps to His Death While Four Others Injured in Landing Will be Interned

Amsterdam, March 28 (AP) — A British bombing plane, machine-gunned by Netherlands pursuit planes early today, was forced down and burned near Pernis on the island of Ysselmonde, southwest of Rotterdam.

One of the British crew leaped to his death. Four others were slightly injured in the landing but escaped the flames which enveloped the craft.

An announcement by the government press service said the four survivors would be interned.

The plane was flying in a westerly direction over Dutch territory when, a communique said, "it was hit by the gunfire of a pursuit plane."

Eye-witnesses said two Netherland fighter planes came from the north and circled the bomber.

Witnesses said the plane, a Bristol Blenheim bomber was flying at an altitude of 1,200 feet when it was intercepted by two fighters.

The rattle of machine-guns was heard and then fire and smoke streamed out of the rear of the bomber.

As the flaming plane started down witnesses, expecting a crash, were surprised that the pilot could make a landing.

No burns were found on the body of the man killed by jumping. It was believed his companions did not attempt to use their parachutes because of the low altitude.

Burning fiercely, the plane was consumed in less than an hour after landing. Since there were no explosions it was believed it carried no bombs.

Brussels, March 28—(CP-Havas) —Several unidentified foreign aircraft flew over Belgian territory last night and early today and anti-aircraft guns opened fire.

Argent was held without bail and will appear in Friday's local police court for trial. Two young men found the folly of strong drink which resulted in their becoming tangled in the long arm of the law. Both will face charges of intoxication on Friday, after being arrested yesterday. Fifteen transients shared the cell block with the two inebriates last night, but the transients were allowed their freedom this morning.

All is Now Quiet Here After Recent Campaign

Quiet again after the rush and excitement of a hotly contested election campaign has run itself out with a landslide in favour of the Liberal Government at the polls on Tuesday last, the streets of the city have returned to a fair degree of normalcy. Business men and party henchmen have returned to the duties of everyday life, after a month or more of assisting their particular candidate in a battle for victory at the polls, while the candidates themselves, whether they stand elected or defeated, are more or less resigned to their fate at the hands of the electors.

Committee rooms, which have been the very centre of party activities since the election campaign opened are again deserted by the hordes of people who have flocked through their doors. While another indication that the issues of the election are dead, are the torn and wind-whipped advertising placards. Signs outside the committee rooms are being taken down by the party adherents, the last visible indication of an election that is past.

Occasionally a small knot of people is seen on the street, quietly discussing the results of the campaign. Those inclined toward pessimistic viewpoints merely state that possibly things would have been better if the government's majority had not been so large. Others, of a more optimistic nature, are heard quietly contending that some sort of a mild dictatorship is necessary during wartime, and that it is all for the better that the government will be unhampered by a strong opposition in their efforts to successfully prosecute the war.

Rawdon

Master Allan Tweedie of Almonte is holidaying with Mr. and Mrs. Edgar McKeown.

Mr. Bob Tweedie of Almonte is spending Easter week with Mr. Bert Sharp.

Mr. Percy MacMullen spent the Easter week end with his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Herb Black and other relatives in Toronto.

Mrs. Lindsay McKeown and Shirley arrived home last Wednesday.

The school teachers are holidaying at their various homes and the pupils are enjoying the Easter vacation.

The Easter season has come and gone and the weather man surely put on a special show for the occasion. Good Friday, Saturday, Easter Sunday, and Monday were all cold, blustering days and the high wind blew the snow in all directions. Many of the concession roads are filled even with the fences, while snow is piled here and there with motor travel on many roads at a standstill. Some of the folks on route three have had no mail delivery since Thursday morning.

On Monday the snow plow cleared the Campbellford road but on Saturday evening a few cars were parked in the snow drifts for Easter.

The Easter services scheduled for Sunday morning at Mount Pleasant and Sunday afternoon at Wellman's were both cancelled because of road conditions. This is the first time in several years it was necessary to cancel an Easter service.

The Passion Week services during the week at Mount Pleasant were not as successful as planned because of the inclement weather. The meetings planned for Wednesday evening were cancelled owing to a heavy snow storm and on Good Friday evening the snow plow got stuck in the snow near central cheese factory, so because of the road that meeting was cancelled.

On Tuesday evening, Rev. A. W Harding of Springbrook gave the special message and Mrs. Roy Thrasher presided at the piano. The Wellman's choir made a brave attempt to attend but found the snow drifts too heavy for motor travel.

On Thursday evening Rev. J. E. Beckel conducted the special service. Mrs. Ray Shortt of Bethel presided at the piano and Mrs. Harold Elliott rendered a vocal number.

The sunbeam mission band cancelled their Easter meeting scheduled for Good Friday afternoon and they hope to hold a meeting during the Easter holiday.

Letters From the Troops

Aldershot, England.

To the Belleville, Ontario Intelligencer,

Dear Sirs,—

I am writing just a few lines to you regarding conditions as we find them here. They are very good and the weather is fine.

We have Wednesday afternoons for sport and this afternoon we played Batt. C. Co'y and D. Co'y. I am in C. Company which was defeated by the score of 25 to 2.

The Y.M.C.A. furnishes us with the balls and bats with which to play. The Y.M.C.A. is very good on cold days in which we are on the range. They furnish us with hot tea and it is very good to have it on a cold day.

The boys from Belleville wish to express our thanks for the sending to each man of 50 cigarettes which we greatly appreciate. These cigarettes came from the National Billiard Parlors and they sure came in good for most of the boys are broke at the present time and I wish to thank them again for their hospitality in sending us these.

If you wish you can send us one of your papers as I should like to read of my home town and the things that are happening around there and when I get through I will pass it on to the other boys from Belleville. They are all around me now helping me to write this letter and I do not know why they picked me to write. Three of the Belleville boys are in my platoon. Bert Royle, Soup Mondeville and myself. Bert Royle is my brother-in-law and Mondeville is my first cousin, so I am not very lonely as we are all together along with Cecil Styles. And as they all lived at the wharf, the good old boys will keep their end up any way and hope you all will keep it up at home.

We are writing a book with the title "A Soldier's Life" and when we get it written I will send it to you to publish if you don't mind. I also keep a dairy in which I keep what I do every day so at the end of the day it is not so difficult to write a little more of "A Soldier's Life".

We want to thank the city of Belleville for that one Pound note which we each received after we arrived here.

Thanking one and all, I remain

Last-Minute Appeal Made By 'Army' Drive Official

$1,500 Needed to Meet Objective Before Campaign Closes Soon

20 HUTS AT FRONT

A last minute appeal to the citizens of Belleville and district to unite in an endeavor to put the Salvation Army Red Shield campaign "over the top" was issued by Major Alderman campaign director, this morning.

Major Alderman reports that although approximately $2000 has thus far been subscribed to the fund, there is still $1,500 to be collected if the Army's objective of $3,500 for Belleville is to be reached.

The "drive" has reached a critical stage, Major Alderman said. "This money must be raised if the Salvation Army is to carry on its good work of the past and shoulder the new burdens created by the war. Already we have 20 army huts operating behind the lines on the Western Front, but if the "Army" is to continue the work which was so much appreciated by the soldiers in the last war, it is necessary that the Dominion objective of $1,000,000 be reached in the Red Shield campaign."

"We have had great support from the public as a whole in the campaign to date. We realize that much has occurred to impede the progress of the drive, such as holidays, bad weather, elections, etc., but we hope that the people in the Belleville district will do all in their power to see that it is a success."

"We are not holding back on our reports," added Major Alderman, "and we feel confident that many potential donors are waiting for a visit from the collectors before giving in their contributions, but the campaign officials would appreciate it very much if such persons would send their donations directly to the campaign offices."

POLICE COURT

Four children were made temporary wards of the Children's Aid Society by Magistrate E. J. Butler, K.C., today in County Police Court held in this city. The kiddies were given into the custody of Inspector T. D. Ruston, who has completed arrangements to place the children in foster homes.

A Thurlow resident appeared charged with assaulting his wife, but the charge was dismissed when his spouse refused to attend court and testify against her husband.

The man later admitted to the illegal possession of liquor and was fined $10.00 and costs. Robt. McCulloch, local barrister, appeared on behalf of the accused, while Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., stated he had no evidence to present, after it was established that an amicable arrangement had been made by the parties included in the assault charge.

Two minor charges of violations of the Highway Traffic Act concluded the court proceedings.

WOODCHUCKS OUT TOO SOON

WILLIAM LARUE GIVEN 3 YEARS

Convicted of Three Charges of Fraud and Theft of Motor Car

William LaRue 21-year-old Thurlow resident, was sentenced to three years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary after being convicted on three counts of fraud and one of the theft of a motor car before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., in today's County Police Court held here.

LaRue was apprehended by Provincial Police some time ago on charges of obtaining $60.00 and a motor car by false pretenses, with intent to defraud. Today Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., added a further charge of fraud and a charge of the theft of a motor car. LaRue pleaded guilty to all counts after electing summary trial before His Worship.

Mr. Donnan than introduced the list of previous convictions, which had been registered against the accused and included convictions of theft and forgery.

"Apparently there is no use sending you to the reformatory," stated Magistrate Butler as he sentenced LaRue to three years in the Penitentiary on the theft count and one year on each of the fraud charges, the latter sentences to run concurrently with the major count. LaRue was not represented by counsel.

trip at 11.30 a.m. yesterday. Search was started when it became an hour overdue.

Ballot Boxes on Plane

Ballot boxes containing the Pelee Island vote in the federal election Tuesday were believed aboard the plane.

Yesterday, a search plane flew over the route and Pilot Bev. Briscoe reported he saw what appeared to be wreckage on the ice, with three figures moving near it. Swirling snow prevented him obtaining a clear look. Observers with field glasses on shore also thought they could discern three figures moving on the ice a few miles from shore. Search parties returned at dark last night after venturing as much as seven miles on the treacherous ice.

Bonfires were lighted on the shore last night and town factory whistles were blown in an effort to attract attention of the plane's occupants if they were stranded out on he ice. Icy winds swept the lake overnight.

Support the Boy Scouts By Buying Apples Saturday

Scout Packs Will be on Streets This Saturday to Sell Apples—Funds Needed to Carry on Work

CHARACTER BUILDING

The Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts of Belleville, under a more or less new organization and headed by a number of new scout masters and assistants, are once again becoming a progressive organization for youth in Belleville.

At the present time there are four boy scout troops and the nucleus for the fifth is well organized and working to the benefit of the individual boy as a member. No other youth organization builds character and citizenship like the boy scout organization. The individual boy develops his mind, hands and feet to useful labor and often finds his life's work listed among the merit badges for which he is striving. Many boys learn through the merit badge examinations just how to apply themselves in an emergency. The value of practical experience is given by the many definite cases cited where boy scouts have shown great skill and rendered fine service in accidents. Such is the boy scout organization doing for the youth in Belleville.

It is of interest to every citizen, especially to the mothers and fathers of boys nine to ten years, that the Cub Packs and Boy Scouts exist and are meeting each week. Each organization is backed by a church, representing the Christian side of scouting. The church also supplies a heated meeting place where they meet though he may not even be a member of that church.

Several Cub Packs

The following Cub Packs are organized and doing fine work: The St. Andrew's Cub Pack meeting each week under the leadership of Cub Master Morley Anderson; St. Michael's Cub Pack, meeting each week under the leadership of Cub Master Jack Murphy; St. Thomas' Cub Pack, meeting each week under the leadership of Cub Master Mr. McKay. There are approximately ninety to one hundred cubs registered in these three groups.

The following boy scout troops are organized, mostly under new leadership, and are doing fine work among the boys who are members: St. Thomas' Scout Troop, of Belleville, meeting each Friday evening at 7.30 p.m. under the leadership of Scout Master Gordon Barclay; St. Andrew's Scout Troop, meeting each Thursday evening under the leadership of Scout Master Freddie Churchill; St. Michael's Scout Troop, meeting each week under the leadership of Scout Master Leo Flagler; Christ Church Scout Troop, Belleville, No. 2, meeting each Friday evening under the leadership of Scout Master H. W. Hamilton.

There are approximately 120 boy scouts in these four troops. The boys are from every kind of family, some are poor, some are well-to-do. They are rubbing shoulders with one another, regardless of their religious connections and endeavouring to do "one good turn to somebody every day." This is a fine way for a boy to start out towards manhood.

It is this organization of boy scouts and cub scouts that will cheerfully greet the citizens of Belleville on Saturday, March 30th, which is Boy Scout's Apple Day. The City Council has generously granted this day to the boy scouts and cub scouts. They are all deserving and hopeful of the co-operation of the citizens to help them in their efforts to be better Belleville citizens.

Justice Keiller MacKay Presides at Picton

Two Cases Are on the Docket for Trial

Picton, March 28—Mr. Justice Keiller MacKay is presiding at Prince Edward County sittings of the Supreme Court here, opening on Wednesday.

Two important cases are on the docket. One being heard is for unstated damages for alleged breach of contract. Plaintiff is W. R. Browne and Son, Picton, and the defendant is the British-American Oil Company, Toronto.

Miss Vera Church, Glenora school teacher, is asking for unstated damages against the County of Prince Edward for injuries allegedly sustained when struck last December by a county road truck while walking to school as a result of which it is claimed she was seriously hurt.

Justice MacKay addressed the juries at the opening, stating he was strongly in favor of such bodies and expressing confidence that the forces of right would overcome those of might. He instructed the Grand Jury to inspect public buildings and to report Thursday. The petit jury was dismissed. Justice MacKay congratulated the county on the re-decorated court rooms.

Address to Jury

In his address Justice MacKay said: "Think for a moment of the present dark horizons of international affairs a disturbed world of ceaseless change, a world in which the forces of absolutism, ruthlessness and brutality are arrayed against the forces of liberty, reason and law. In the bosom of the people of this county there is one assurance that if there is any human force that can withstand this state of affairs it is the intelligence and responsibility of a free community," he declared. "This is the very stuff which comprises our nation. We look forward by inspiration from the past. Our brothers trod a like sanguinary path and overcome the same obstacles we face today. We can encourage each other that we have a certain knowledge of the justice and integrity of democratic government. We must overcome in a patriots consecreation whatever divides us. We must resolve wherever we find ourselves that we shall be worthy of the efforts of those who have gone before and proud of the flag that flies over us."

"We have just gone through a political campaign and it is well for us to bear in mind that the administration of justice is democratic.

"We are charged with the responsibility of passing the ideals of democratic government to our children. It is a grave responsibility."

Urging close inspection of jails, Justice MacKay said: "I do not believe in mollycoddling prisoners but a man should know why he is in jail, and he should understand that he is being punished for wrong doing. It is not right that he should bear a grudge against society after being released."

"Your fathers and mine tore from corrupt kings and ministers the charter that forms the basis of our liberty," said Justice MacKay. "Their determination, courage and desire to have the law spring from the masses of the people should be an inspiration to us. It is a long story and there are blood stains all the way," he said.

"The Grand Jury grew up from a common sense determination that men should not be thrown into prison for private or political reasons. Today a jury must decide if a man must face trial."

Little Benny's Note Book

I had 5 cents and I went in the Kristal Kandy Kitchen and I was looking around making up my mind while the lady was waiting on some other lad, and all of a sudden different voices said, Hello Benny, and I quick turned around and who was it but Puds Simkins and Glasses Magee and Sam Cross in back of me, and I thought, Heck, what good's 5 cents worth of anything in a mob like that?

And I quick said, Hello fellows, what are you going to buy?

Being a good start to get ahead of them, and Puds said, How do you mean, us? and Glasses said, We saw you through the window, and Sam said, Sure, you're the one that's in here.

What's you talking about, I'm not in here any more than you guys are, we're all in here, I said, and Puds said, Well you were in here first, so that proves you're the one that's going to buy something.

Why does it, any more than you? I said, and Glasses said, Because you can be in a candy store with other people without proving anything, but when you're in one all by yourself that proves you're going to buy something.

That's all you know, I said. If you want to know the truth I was going to sell something, I was going to ask her if she'd buy real home made fudge from me to sell in the store, I said, and Puds said, You were like fun, and Glasses said, Well if you were, go ahead and ask her, here she is now.

Wich she was, saying, Well, boys? and I said, Have you got any real home made fudge? and she said, Yes, we have, and I said, That's what I wanted to know.

And I quick walked out and so did the other 3, still looking as if they had their doubts but not being able to prove anything.

BEAT ENEMY, SINGLE AIM OF REYNAUD

How war has changed in the generations is clear enough from a statement of the new Premier of France, Paul Reynaud. Napoleon, he said, fought his wars with armies no larger than 600,000 men and with only one type of cannon. Only a million bullets were fired as contrasted with the billions of cartridges, millions of guns now needed. "Imagine the immense resources of military equipment and production that will be necessary. And at home we need men and more men," Reynaud said.

While France was quite fully dominated under Napoleon, Britain, where a foreign invader did not tread, went quietly about her business at home though keeping up her armies on the continent. Today totalitarian war has made the home front a very real part of any nation and a very important factor for war is a war of appliances and resources. While things are being destroyed more must be produced as war goes on.

M. Reynaud expressed the conviction that the France of today depends upon her arms for her strength and that "we are going to the test with our heads high, not prepared to submit, but to master, with the souls of warriors and the souls of victory."

The words of the Premier ring throughout France as they cheer her people and they send a challenge to Adolf Hitler's Nazis. Reynaud says, "The duty is clear. It is to make war and to make it in every field.

"The war is here and with it the hardest kind of sacrifice. It is a hard war but we will win."

Those words speak for the French people. They show how modern war is a war of nation against nation and not merely army against army.

Beat the enemy. Beat Hitler. That is the one aim of Premier Reynaud and his government.

In other words, that means that Hitler is the foe of freedom and democracy and that nothing else matters but to crush Hitler, centre of the sinister force in the world today.

FINNS TO REBUILD, AN EXAMPLE TO THE WORLD

While there has been a suggestion that Finns in large numbers from the evacuated areas to be ceded to Russia as a result of the recent peace agreement could find a home in Ontario, the Finns are going to stay in the new Finland and help restore her from the losses of the war of fifteen weeks against the Russian Soviet.

The offer was kindly but the Finns are inspired by so great a devotion to their country that they will trek from their former homes into the narrowed native land they love so much and help to rebuild her from war's calamities.

The Finns are a race who have been an example to the world. They have resourcefulness and a ruggedness which will carve out a great future for the nation if it is able to remain at peace. But whatever the future her people are devoted to their native land and everything that is Finland.

If aggressor nations could only see this heroic little land in the proper light, there would not be aggression. The Finns are going to take a reduced country and build it to be a greater country than it has been to date, if that is possible. But the peacetime heroism of her people can hardly surpass their achievements during the war.

If a totalitarian state like Germany had done as Finland does, Germany could have set to work within her own borders (not the new Hitler borders which keep the Austrians, Czechs and Poles prisoner) and developed Germany for herself, not to make arms with which to try to dominate the earth. Germany would have had enough if she had not poured out her real wealth in making guns out of the "butter" of her resources. Finland does not waylay the nations for more territory. She goes to work with goodwill towards the world. Nazis make guns, biding the time to seize from the nations.

But Germany had not leaders who were inspired as the Finns have been. What Germany has wasted is the real tragedy. What waste her actions will yet bring has to be told in the future. It was an ill day when her Fuehrer came for what she needed was a man who would seek to build up Germany on the basis of goodwill and peace. Instead what has she got?—First she is herself dominated and then she is to try to dominate the world, an endless task which will break down not only far short of the Nazi ambition but also crash upon their heads.

But Finland has chosen the way that leads to greatness, while Nazi Germany picked that which has to lead to only one end, collapse of sinister Nazi ambitions and ideals. In becoming engrossed in her peacetime pursuits Finland does not lose sight of the need of security. She proved that by the might of her arms and the valor of her people in the winter war. They are a great people, the Finns, greater than the German Nazis because they have a true spirit of freedom while the Nazis have made themselves the slaves of militarism and aggression.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

The Gastroscope Reveals Cases of Inflamed Stomach

When a patient has some of the symptoms of ulcer of the stomach or of the first part of the small intestine, an Xray of these parts of the digestive tract is made after giving the patient some barium sulphate. The use of the fluoroscope which shows whether there is any depression in the lining of the stomach and intestine, and the use of Xray films which give a permanent record, is one method of telling whether ulcer is present. Other methods are the amount of hydrochloric acid in the stomach digestive juice after a meal of tea and toast has been in the stomach an hour or more.

Similarly when symptoms of cancer are present, test meals are given and Xray examinations made.

Thus when the physician is told by the Xray expert that neither ulcer nor cancer is present, it is a great relief to his mind and to the mind of the patient also.

However, if the patient still has the symptoms although no ulcer or cancer is present, something must be wrong, and something must be done to relieve the symptoms. It is in such cases as this that the gastroscope is of help to the physician. The gastroscope ('gastro' means stomach) which enables the physician to see the lining of the patient's stomach, often reveals that the lining of the stomach is inflamed and the ailment is known as gastritis.

Just to what extent this new instrument can clear up doubtful cases is reported by Dr. E. Bulmer in the British Medical Journal. From 1575 stomach and small intestine cases culled from nearly 10,000 new outpatients, the cause of the symptoms was not definitely found in 589 cases (nearly 40 per cent.). By use of the gastroscope, 147 patients in which the Xray did not show ulcer or cancer were studied; in sixty-six of these 147 cases no abnormality was found though it may have been present, but in sixty cases the gastroscope showed gastritis—inflammation of the lining of the stomach. The gastroscope in the other twenty-one cases (where Xray reported nothing) showed 9 cases of ulcer, a suspected cancer, and a cancer too late for operation.

"Therefore, the gastroscope has proved of great value in the routine investigation of this type of dyspepsia. Chronic gastritis can be diagnosed or discovered with certainty only by means of the gastroscope".

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

March 28th., 1920.

At a meeting of the directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce a resolution was passed and will be forwarded to the Grand Trunk Railway Company requesting that the company establish a restaurant at the station here. It was also decided to suggest to the telegraph companies that an all night service be introduced here. It was reported that the new Chamber of Commerce offices in the Corby Building will be ready for occupancy by April 1st.

Mr. and Mrs. D. R. Leavens have returned to the city after spending some time in California.

Col. Rierdon of Madoc, commanding officer of the 34h Battery, will take up residence in this city shortly.

30 YEARS AGO

March 28th., 1910.

Mr. Fred Abraham of Montreal, formerly of Belleville, is spending a few days in the city.

Many streets in this city could stand quite a bit of cleaning and the footbridge gangway would surely look better for a wash and brush up.

A man wearing a straw hat was seen on the street here yesterday.

Mr. W. R. Mather, Reeve of Stirling and Warden of the County of Hastings was in the office today.

Mr. Roy R. McMullen has left for Montreal where he has accepted a position.

Mr. Delbert Sheffield is home from Calgary on a visit to his parents.

40 YEARS AGO

March 28th., 1900.

Mr. Charles Smith, Mayor of Campbellford, was in town today.

Mizpah Lodge No. 127, I.O.O.F. entertained three of its members who are leaving the city to reside elsewhere; they were Messrs. S. Elliott, J. A. Doris and W. Kennedy. Noble Grand C. Ostrom presided at the gathering and short addresses were made by Messrs. J. Hume, J. T. Osborne, J. Boyd, C. Willis, L. B. Cooper, O. S. Hicks, F. M. Clarke, L. Grills, A. Matthews, G. Wilson, J. Thompson, P. Harrison and J. Harris. Songs were rendered by Messrs. S. Burrows, George Fax, J. A. Doris and J. Berkley.

Mr. Harrison Meyers and family will leave here shortly to reside in Trenton.

50 YEARS AGO

The Rev. Robert Wallace will sail shortly for Canada from Liverpool with 117 children for the Marchmont Home in this city. We bespeak kind and hearty welcomes for the youthful strangers about to settle in our land.

Some of the cottagers on Crow Lake are talking of buying a steam yacht to operate on the lake this summer. It would be a delightful luxury.

The bay is opening up rapidly. Nearly all the vessels in the harbor are ready for the season's business.

Sportsmen have had poor luck with wild geese. Some of the wary birds have been fired at at long range, but without success.

Dr. Gibson is spending today in Kingston.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

Strained relations existing between France and Soviet Russia as evidenced by the French request for the recall of Soviet Ambassador Jacob Surits reflect resentment at the interference of Russia in the domestic politics of other countries as well as distaste for Russia's alliance with Germany and aggression against Finland.

The Moscow government's influence in world affairs is not confined to the activity of the Red army and the actions of Soviet leaders in domestic and foreign affairs. Through the worldwide Communist party it is in a position to operate against other countries from within.

Surits' offense was that he openly fyled an uncoded telegram of congratulations to Moscow on the Russian triumph in Finland. He might have sent it through the usual diplomatic channels but chose to deliver it openly to a telegraph company where its contents could become known. The French government considered this was done deliberately with a view to progating the Soviet point of view in France.

As the French Communist party has been forced under cover and the distribution of Communist propaganda has been illegal since the start of the war the telegram possibly may have been expected to furnish a means of reaching sections of the French people.

The German Nazi party follows similar tactics to the Communist party in attempting to spread German influence in other countries but because of the racial doctrines of Nazism has made little progress so far except in countries like Czecho-Slovakia, Poland and Austria in which it could appeal to sizeable groups of German people.

The Communist influence however, should it be used to serve joint German and Russian purposes may yet be a factor in the attitude of some of the Balkan States towards the present war.

It's Different on Farms today

A gentleman from Peterborough drove to London on Friday morning and instead of following No. 2 took the north road, No. 7. All went well until he arrived at Elginfield, 14 miles north of London, and north and south roads had been drifting more than east to west. The snow plow ahead broke down and cars were lined up behind. The way to get through—and it worked—was for the first car to get a shove from the one behind and then another would shove the second car if necessary. The report is that the side roads are badly blocked all through.

From several sections of the province we have noticed reports that farm homes are in a bad way because the various trucks from city or town have not been able to get through. The bread truck is the one most mentioned, but we read too that in some sections the butcher makes his rounds and calls at farm homes.

A meat scarcity on account of hard going would be in a district where there was no beef ring in operation, and where there had been no pig killed and dressed. The scarcity of bread would come from the custom of many farm homes of today where no bread is baked. It all comes from the baker.

The way in which people live at present is quite different from 30 or 40 years ago. We can recall blocked roads and blocked lanes and a path which had to be dug—not swept or shovelled—from the house to the barn. Nor is it dificu't to recall taking down line or field fences and driving through the field because the going was better there. The road was apt to go for a distance along the concession, then strike off through a field, and it might do that a number of times. But the sleighs went through.

Today most people depend on cars and this winter they have been out of luck a number of times unless they happen to have frontage on a highway. A car cannot drive on the road, then off it and through a field, and it cannot get over the old pitch holes as safely as a team and a bob sleigh. Years ago it would make no difference if the roads were bad; there would be bread baked on the premises and there would be meat in the cellar. The farm home could stand quite a siege of rough weather and three meals a day would appear. Possibly the country is getting more modern, but it is also doing more fussing when the roads get blocked—Peterboro Examiner.

Gas Attacks in 431 B.C.

In the Peloponnesian War, between the independent city states fo Greece, gas attacks were employed. In 431 B.C., the Spartans attempted to capture the cities of Ballum and Platea by the use of burning sulphur and pitch.

In olden Times

Marco Polo refers to the Karaunas, a Persian tribe, who applied a cloud gas in warfare. The Crusaders met burning pitch and its nauseating stench in their attempts on Palestine.

The Royal Flying Corps dropped 25,000 messages over the German lines in October, 1914. It was old stuff even then for during the Napoleonic wars Lord Cochrane had pamphlets dropped from kites towed by the brig Pallas along the French coast.

In Pepys Diary

In the Diary of Samuel Pepys there may be found this passage:

"Friday, March 14, 1662. Home to dinner. In the afternoon come the German, Dr. Knuffler, to discourse with us about his engine to blow up ships. We doubted not the matter of fact, it being tried in Cromwell's time, but the safety of carrying them in ships; but he do tell us, that when he comes to tell the King his secret, for none but the Kings, successively, and their heirs must know it, it will appear to be of no danger at all. We concluded nothing; but shall discourse with the Duke of York tomorrow about it."

Pepys, first lord of the admiralty, apparently worried less about magnetic mines than Churchill, his successor, for he does not mention them again. He could not have known about the degauss equipment as used on the Queen Elizabeth, however, for Oested, of Copenhagen, did not promulgate the principle of it until 1819.

Many of the modern wisecracks which have been put in the mouth of the ancient Confucius have been traced to Egypt, where the fellahs appear to have been telling them hundreds of years before Confucius was born. — Moncton Transcript.

Trees for Snow Fences

The original cost of snow fences together with the expense of putting them up and taking them down each year, is an item of no small dimensions in the Province of Ontario, and when we add to this the cost of ploughing out highways and county roads the figure is considerably increased. This cost will grow rather than become less, for the townships and counties are undertaking to keep sideroads and concessions open during the Winter in order that farmers may market their produce any and every day of the week.

There is growing enthusiasm regarding the usefulness of trees to replace snow fences. Hedges of forest trees planted around thirty feet from the road lane are being tried in several counties. The railroads have already demonstrated the effectiveness of tree rows in preventing drifting and municipal officers have inaugurated a similar policy but as yet only in an experimental way.

In many districts it will probably work out so the strip of land between the trees and the roadway will be cultivated. Fences will be eliminated and a weed-cutting problem will be solved.

Where valuable land is involved the problem is not so simple; but as time goes on, municipalities will learn more about the cost of planting, maintenance and the use of property for this purpose. They will then be able to balance the expense of snow fencing against the cost of tree rows for the same purpose and utilize the system that is most effective and at the same time- least expensive. — Farmer's Advocate.

Churchill's Star

Seemingly reliable, though varying, forecasts of Cabinet reorganization in Great Britain have one thing in common. They all agree that Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill will play a prominent part in any shuffle that may occur.

This merely carries on the rumours that have been in circulation since some time before the ousting of Rt. Hon. Leslie Hore-Belisha as Secretary of State for War. In fact, one of the most persistent reports just preceding Mr. Hore-Belisha's more or less involuntary retirement was that there was a move on foot to bring all Britain's war activities under the control of one Minister.

Since the change at the War Office, these rumors have persisted. They have been bolstered by growing criticism of Sir Kingsley Wood, Secretary of State for Air. The trend has consistently been towards bringing Army, Navy and Air Force under one administrative regimen.

Now comes reports that Prime Minister Chamberlain is spending the Easter vacation conning over a plan which will eventuate in the selection of a "War Cabinet" of five members. Significntly, Mr. Churchill is the only head of a strictly war department whose name is mentioned as a prospective member of this inner circle. If there were not some scheme of centralization in the wind, the list would without doubt include the names of Sir Kingsley Wood and Rt. Hon Oliver Stanley, who succeeded Mr. Hore-Belisha.

Any War Cabinet would of necessity have in it the heads of the three department charged directly with carrying on the war. The plain implication is that these three departments are to be combined under one head.

Granted that this merger is to take place, with Mr. Churchill assuming new and greater powers, it can be taken for granted that he is not planning to stop there. There are plain indications that he has an eye on a repetition of history. In the last war, Asquith remained at the head of the Government only a short time before Lloyd George, the little Welsh firebrand, stepped in to make his driving force felt in pressing the war through to victory.

A repetition of this political drama would find two modern statesmen of distinctly similar types in almost exactly similar roles. It would be another case of a deliberate, scholarly Prime Minister, well on in years, stepping down to make way for a somewhat younger man with the drive and energy so necessary in time of crisis.

Chamberlain's relinquishment of the Premiership has for some time been openly hinted. The placing of all the war activities under Churchill's direction would be looked on in many quarters as a step towards a change in the leadership of the Government.

x x x

Should this happen, it would mean the realization of Churchill's dearest dream, brought about by a national military crisis. It would be a fit occasion for the ascendency of the star of a man who has distinguished himself no less as a soldier than as a statesman and writer.

In peacetime, Churchill was kept out of the Government. He was "too dangerous," too hot-headed, to suit Chamberlain. Almost the moment that war broke out, however, Chamberlain showed that he had full appreciation of the service which his erstwhile opponent could render when the country had a military campaign on its hands.

Incidentally, what appears likely to happen now will effectually scotch quite the silliest story which grew out of Hore-Belisha's resignation. This was the tale cooked up by a couple of Washington commentators, to the effect that the change was made for two reasons. One was that Stanley, the new Secretary for War, was pro-German, and that Chamberlain called him in as a man likely to be able to make peace with the Nazis. Secondly, these "experts" declared that Chamberlain ousted Hore-Belisha because of the latter's rapid growing popularity, which was threatening to put him into the Prime Minister's office.—Windsor Star.

And if you have forgotten your high school French that means "French spoken here." For this is a French loud-speaker, ready to do the talking if "hot words" develop along the western front this spring. The gun is a 155 mm. long-range piece. Something on the style of the high-angle weapons used by the Russians to rock the forts of the Mannerheim line—a procedure that finally made them untenable.

Soaking the Rich

A correspondent takes THE JOURNAL to task for reporting as a piece of news "and without a single word of protest" the case of a girl in the United States who has an income of $25,000 a year and a fortune "already up in the millions." He says "money-grabbing" and great fortunes are the cause of "unemployment and poverty and vice and crime and ignorance and squalor and insanity and poor-houses and jails and houses of prostitution and wars," which is taking in a lot of ground.

Well, the great fortunes of every country are being broken up with neatness and dispatch by income taxes and succession duties, and if, as our correspondent suggests, their disappearance will usher in an era of peace, virtue and plenty, he should not have long to wait for his utopia. The much-abused "capitalistic system" under which vast fortunes developed has proved its adaptability to new conditions, to a greatly increased cost of government, and is paying its way. If there is anything better for general purposes in the mess of theories and panaceas offered the world in great abundance, its superiority still has to be demonstrated. It is under the system of private profit, we should remember, that the world has advanced in a material sense to the possibilities it now holds for human comfort and safety, and if we have failed to make the best use of the knowledge we possess it is not the fault of the system.

Moreover we cannot agree with our correspondent that the great fortunes should be abolished forthwith, presumably by confiscation. Let us consider the case of a Canadian "worth" $10,000,000. If his fortune is in assets readily turned into cash the Government, by taking it over, can improve the condition of each resident of the country by something less than a dollar—or the Government may have on its hands a chain of retail stores, an automobile plant or a street railway. But the rich man, permitted to retain his fortune, derives from it an income of perhaps $400,000 a year. Out of that, if he lives in Ontario, he pays 60 cents in the dollar of a total of about $276,000 in income tax to the Federal and Provincial Governments. He probably lives expensively in a big house, pays many thousands more in local rates, in sales tax, in all the hidden taxes which surround the wealthiest as the poorest of us. He has plenty left, of course, to live very comfortably, but out of that living he probably employs several people, contributes to the wages of many others.

So long as this man lives he pays and pays handsomely for the privilege of his large income, and when he dies the Provincial Government steps in, takes millions out of the estate. Perhaps his widow inherits. She pays income tax on what remains, and at her death succession duties take another large chunk of the capital. Two deaths will whittle the ten millions down to three or four.

This process is going on all the time, in this and every country, and it is accepted by most people as right and necessary. Wealth actually is being redistributed—all the quicker when it is squandered on reckless extravagance — and whether or not the poor are becoming richer certainly the rich are becoming poorer. — Ottawa Journal.

3 WESTERN SEATS STILL IN DOUBT

Liberal Government Now Have 178 Seats With a Majority of 111 in House

(By the Canadian Press)

Three western seats were still in doubt in the general election today, but the virtually-complete picture of Tuesday's ballotting showed the Liberal government with a total of 178 seats—a majority of over 111 over all others combined.

Actually the government strength stands at 184 seats, when three Liberal-Progressives and three Independent-Liberals are included on the government side. This total is just 123 more than in all the rest of the new parliament, a government majority of record-breaking proportions.

Close counting from the few remaining doubtful seats last night added another seat to the Liberal fold when Peace River was captured from Social Credit. The other concession last night came from Vegreville, also in Alberta, which was retained by the New Democracy party, the successor to Social Credit in the federal field.

Doubtful seats yet are Maple Creek in Saskatchewan, and Acadia and Jasper-Edson in Alberta. The election in Three Rivers, Quebec has been deferred.

Beauties of Bali

Certain scientific gentlemen in Georgia have made motion pictures of the people of the East Indian Island of Bali and deposited the pictures in a crypt at Oglethorpe University, Atlanta, for the edification of inhabitants of this plant 6,000 years hence. Having in mind the gales of laughter provoked by refilming of early thrillers, or the showing of ancient photos in the family album, this procedure seems grossly unfair to the Balinese, though in sixty centuries from now they probably will not care.

There may be other reasons for the "no peeking" policy of the Georgia scientists. This island of Bali is a remarkable place. The women are—well, mere words are inadequate; it takes pictures to tell the story. When the Ontario government some years ago had a picture branch of the film censor's department, it sent a young man on a world cruise for "stills" of interesting scenes, and he happened to visit Bali. Around the Parliament Buildings they are still talking about those Bali photographs; at least, they are if Mr. Hepburn has left any survivors of that regime. One Toronto newspaper reproduced carefully selected specimens.

Newspaper readers may recall that a few months ago a couple from the United States took a honeymoon trip which included Bali and the bride came home alone.

Perhaps, after all, a sealed crypt is about as good a place as any for motion pictures of Bali.

NORWAY INTERNS NAZI SUBMARINE

Became Stranded in Norwegian Waters Two Miles Off Odden

Oslo, March 28 (CP)—A German submarine which became stranded in Norwegian waters two miles off Odden was interned with its crew today at the port of Mandal, on the southern tip of Norway.

The German minister to Oslo asked that the submarine and crew be freed on the grounds that the vessel took refuge in territorial waters because of bad weather and engine trouble.

The Norwegian admiralty, however, ruled after an inquiry that the submarine was stranded due to an error in navigation and that engine trouble resulted from the stranding.

The Norwegian news agency said the submarine was the U-21, one of a group of 24 coastal type undersea craft built in 1935-36 with a standard displacement of 250 tons. Some of the vessels were reported to have been fitted experimentally with new type machinery.

Must Protest Sharply

Arbeiderbladet, chief organ of Labor (Government) Party, said today Norway must protest sharply against British "violations" of Norwegian territorial waters.

"British papers claim that German warships use Norwegian waters for warlike operations, but Chamberlain admitted in the Commons a week ago that there is no evidence for the claim that German submarines caused three sinkings outside the west coast of Norway in December, and after that time the British admiralty never saw German warlike operations in Norwegian territorial waters," the newspaper said.

"Great Britain has consequently not the slightest reason for the violation of Norwegian neutrality.

"The truth is that violations whic hmay have been performed which may have been performed warships and aircraft. The Altmark affair happily is up till now the single case where British war action was executed on Norwegian territory, and we earnestly hope that the British government will admit its mistake in that case."

Other warlike actions never went farther than two attempts, and we may perhaps hope that the British government will not approve them. Such attempts are very dangerous for Norway and Norway has therefore to protest against them and defend itself against them according to its ability, because we do not want to be drawn into the war between the great powers."

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Thursday, March 28

THE ASTRAL influences bearing rule on the events of this day are somewhat doubtful and conflicting. There is danger from some form of sharp practice, deception, trickery or fraud, with writings and papers figuring as contributory agents to trouble. Avoid law, theft and dubious complications and there is prospect of very definite progress in important relations, as elders, superiors and those in influential places are friendly and ready to lend support.

Those whose birthday it is are under aspects of a conflicting nature, with promise of splendid cooperation from employers, superiors and those of prestige and power. Yet, there are also loopholes for fraud, trickery, loss and litigation, with writings or documents, signatures or misconstructions as elements of contention. With care in this particular, there may be progress, promotion and gratification.

A child born on this day may have excellent talents with worthy ambitions and fine executive ability, winning approbation of those highly up. Some latent tendencies to trickiness, slyness and want of integrity should be disciplined in early youth.

For Friday, March 29

THE PLANETARY configurations for this day are read as extremely benefic, with strong prospects of fulfilled ambitions and aspirations in every direction. It is a time for reaching for high goals, and toward social, sentimental and humanitarian objectives. In business there is promise of the cooperation of those in power and financial security, whose friendship will be assured and greatly worthwhile. Romance also figures for the eligible. But in all there is an aura of intrigue, collusion or subtlety, operating for good or ill, according to the way it is manipulated.

Those whose birthday it is are at the threshold of a door in which benefic astral forces will be found the open sesame for attaining high goals and fondly-cherished hopes and wishes. In business the friendship and co-operation of the mighty should be cultivated. In social, emotional and philanthropic avenues the signs are propitious, especially for courtship and marriage. But all affairs are under two forms of intrigue, subtlety and conspiracy — one adverse, the other to be employed to enhance and facilitate cautious plans. Be alert to deception and peculiar entanglements.

A child born on this day may have much ability for success, with expansive and large ambitions, which it may put over on a pretentious scale through the support of those in power. Popularity, social prestige and romance are assured.

WEDDINGS

McDERMOTT-BELL

Easter lilies and daffodils decorated the altar of Sacred Heart Church, Marmora, on Tuesday morning, when Miss Florence Olga Bell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Bell of Lannigan, Sask., became the bride of Vincent McDermott, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael McDermott of Read. The ceremony was performed and the Nuptial Mass was celebrated by Rev. H. J. Farrell. Mrs. Myrtle McCormack was matron of honor and the groom was ably supported by his brother, Mr. Leonard McDermott of Read.

The bride was becomingly attired in a blue suit with matching hat and accessories. The matron of honour wore a sand suit with matching hat and accessories. Miss Reta Deacon was organist and solos were sung by Mrs. Hugh Brady and Marjory Stephens and hymns by the Sacred Heart choir.

After a short honeymoon the happy couple will reside in Marmora Township.

CAFLEY—FARGHER

Easter lilies, stocks and snapdragon were the setting for a beautiful wedding at the Church of the Good Shepherd, Mount Dennis, on Saturday, March 23rd., when Margaret Elizabeth, only daughter of Mrs. Fargher and the late Mr. F. T. Fargher, became the bride of Ronald M. Cafley, younger son of Mrs. Cafley, and the late Rev. E. W. Cafley. Rev. R. P. Walker officiating.

Mr. R. Philp was at the organ.

The bride, given in marriage by her mother, entered the church on the arm of her uncle, looking winsome in a dress of white slipper satin, fashioned on long slim lines with full length veil of tulle and carrying a bouquet of red roses.

Miss Joan B. Cafley, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid, wearing a dress of hyacinth blue moire taffeta with matching flower hat and carried Sunset roses.

Mr. Donald Keenan was best man and the ushers were Mr. A. Fynn and Mr. Donald Gillespie.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at 135 Brownville Ave., the home of Mr. and Mrs. S. Fordham.

Mrs. Fargher received wearing an ensemble of heaven blue crepe with navy accessories and corsage of Talisman roses assisted by the groom's mother, who wore rosewood crepe with navy and corsage of butterfly roses.

For travelling the bride chose a grey suit with Kolinsky neckpiece and wore a cameo pendant, the gift of the bridegroom.

After the honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Cafley will reside at Fort Erie South.

BIBBY—RYAN

On Easter Monday at St. James' Church, Stirling, the marriage took place of Anna Madeliene, youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Ryan to John Bibby, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Bibby. Rev. Father Lesagé officiated at the Nuptial Mass.

The bride wore a very becoming costume of Queen's blue crepe romaine, trimmed with a Suez pink necklace. Her turban was of blue straw, with coloured flowers and veil. She carried a white prayer book. Mrs. Wilfrid Forestell, sister of the bride was bridesmaid. She wore marine blue, with matching accessories. Mr. Wilfred Forestell of Madoc, assisted the groom.

The wedding music was played by Miss Pauline Shea and during the ceremony Vincent and Jean Farrell, cousins of the groom, rendered solos.

Amid showers of confetti the bridal party motored to Belleville, where the wedding dinner was served at the Guild restaurant. For travelling the bride wore a navy coat with a corsage of white flowers and scarf. After their wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. Bibby will reside in Thurlow Township.

GREEN—WALMSLEY

Queen St. Church, Kingston, decorated with Easter lilies, was the setting for the marriage Saturday afternoon at 5 o'clock of Leona Mae Walmsley, Reg.N., daughter of Mrs. L. E. Walmsley and the late Leon E. Walmsley of Belleville, to Ian Rowland Green, R.C.C.S., Kingston, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Charles Green, Swift Current, Saskatchewan.

Rev. Basil Thompson performed the ceremony.

The bride wore a street length frock of aquamarine with brown accessories and a corsage of Butterfly roses and lily-of-the-valley.

Mrs. Ronald Guthrie was her only attendant and was dressed in wine crepe with brown accessories and a corsage of sweet peas. Corporal Miri Chaffe, R.C.C.S., was best man.

Following the ceremony a small reception was held for immediate relatives. Mrs. Walmsley, mother of the bride, wore a frock of black and white figured sheer, black and white hat, and a corsage of sweet peas and lily-of-the-valley. Signalman and Mrs. Green will reside in Kingston.

Mrs. L. E. Walmsley, Miss Corinne Walmsley and Mr. Bruce Walmsley of Belleville, were in Kingston for the wedding.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Too Much Foolish Pride

Dear Miss Fairfax

I went with a young man for a year and a half, and we were very much in love. Last Fall he started to college; I had another year at high school, so we drifted apart, although he phoned me once in a long while.

I've loved him all along, and can't stand being away from him any longer, so I'm coming to you for advice. I'm pretty certain he still likes me but doesn't want to make the first move. We both have a lot of pride. He always asks a friend of mine all about me, and when she wanted to know why we didn't go back together again he just said, "Pride, on both sides".

I love him so much at times that I'd rather die than go on without him. Isn't there same way of straightening out this mess?

E. N.

My dear girl, what's the matter with investing a nickle for a bottle of ink, some decent stationery at the five and ten, and writing the young Freshman a letter You've been good friends so why stand on foolish pride and ceremony? Don't write a love letter; write an amusing one with a sprightly account of things in the home town and the high school. He'll be glad to get it.

Sometime pride is just silly, and reaps a tremendous number of victims. Don't add another to the list.

He Has Begun to Take Love Seriously

Dear Miss Fairfax

I am 21 years old and have been going with girls ever since I was in ninth grade. I graduated at 18 and then I began taking love seriously, but am not getting anywhere. Every time I fall on love with a girl, she is not in love with me; if a girl falls for me, I don't care for her. This has been going on for three or four years.

My only happiness is the dream that I may some day find a wonderful girl who loves me and whom I love. But it doesn't seem to happen to me. Do you think I was born to be a bachelor, or do you think I'll find that girl some day if I keep on looking?

Unhappy

At 21, it seems to me pretty early to entertain thoughts of becoming a bachelor permanently. In fact, if you did but know it, luck is on your side. If your affections were reciprocated, you might be tempted to marry, and unless you're a long way ahead of the average in securing a good job at 21, you might be faced with some of the problems which try the souls of young people who marry too early.

Your experience is pretty general. Those you fancy do not fancy you, and vice versa. But the day will come, my dear boy, when the love lightning will strike you both simultaneously.

High School Youth Gave Her Mature Advice

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm a junior in high school, and the boy I've been going with stopped seeing me all of a sudden because he said I would not pass my exams if I saw too much of him. Although he did not date me, he told everyone how much he thought of me and that he would like to go with me again.

Now he started dating me again. He gave me a ring for my birthday. Do you think I should give him a birthday present?

Dazed

Looks to me as if that young man had a long head. He saw that your interest in him was likely to prevent you from passing your examination. So he suggested a moratorium. Sensible boy. I think it would be better to confine your enthusiasm to sending a birthday card, which does not commit you to anything. When you get to swapping rings, it's rather a ticklish business. If it is just an inexpensive circlet, and your parents are willing, it's O.K. by me if you keep it.

He Calls Her a Pest, But Still is Jealous

Dear Miss Fairfax

I'm 17 and in my last year in high school. I like a certain boy and he seems to like me. We go together for a few weeks, attending parties and school affairs, and he's very attentive. Then all of a sudden he starts telling everyone I'm a pest. When I become interested in another boy, he gets jealous and starts paying me compliments again. Do you think he likes me, because I like him very much and can't forget him, although I don't like to be called a pest.

Puzzled.

Nothing worse the matter with this young man than a case of bad manners. Even if he considered you a pest, which of course he does not, he wouldn't go about confiding the offensive term to others.

In showing jealousy, paying you compliments when you go with other boys, he's just following the old adolescent trail. They've all done that, back to the time of Adam. Don't take him too seriously. Have lots of boy friends.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Wedding Guests

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—Is it proper for wedding guests to arrive at the reception before the bride and groom? If so, does everyone take their places at the table and wait, of course, for the bride and groom?

2—Who makes the toast to the couple and what is an appropriate toast?

M. P.

1—If the guests have been present at the ceremony, it usually doesn't happen that they arrive at the reception before the bridal party. But if there have been only a few guests at the ceremony, with many guests invited to the reception, it is sometimes difficult for the guests to time their arrival accurately. If they do arrive before the bride and groom, it doesn't make much difference, and they chat together and wait for the arrival of the couple. They shouldn't take their places at the table—they would wait in the living-room or wherever the reception is to be held.

2—It is usually the best man's duty to propose a toast to the bride and groom. And it is the groom who responds to this toast, for his bride and himself. The toast is usually a simple one, for example, "I propose a toast to the happiness of Dorothy and Tom", or "Let's drink a toast to Dorothy and Tom . . . and to their happiness, always."

Form of Address

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Please tell me the correct way to address a clergyman when writing a thank-you note? Should I say, Reverend Paul Jones or Reverend Mr. Paul Jones? I have never been sure which is correct.

J. K.

You address the envelope to The Reverend Paul Jones.

Hotel Register

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I expected very soon to go travelling across the country with my aged mother and grown son.

Please tell me the proper way to sign when registering at the hotels?

Mrs. M. Ward

These are the forms for the signatures:

Your name: Mrs. Martin Ward

Your mother's name: Mrs. Edward Underwood.

Your son's name: John Ward.

Remarriage

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

Kindly advise if it is proper for a woman who has been divorced, and with no children, and who is to re-marry, to wear a white bridal dress and veil for the ceremony?

G. V.

No. The formal white bridal dress, veil, and orange blossoms should be worn only at the first marriage of the bride.

Surprise Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I have been asked to a surprise birthday party for a sixteen-year-old friend. I have been told to bring a boy friend.

Should my escort also take a gift, or will my gift be enough?

G. H.

It isn't necessary for the boy to take a gift to the birthday party. But it would be gracious for him if he wishes, to take simple corsage, or a box of flowers, in compliment to her and her kind invitation.

Acknowledgment

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

When thanked for a greeting card, what would be the proper thing to say?

C. L.

We might say, "I'm so happy that you liked it", or "I had such fun choosing it, and I'm glad you enjoyed it", or "It gave me such pleasure to send it, for I did want you to know that I was thinking of you on your birthday."

"Blondie on a Budget," featuring Blondie, Dagwood, Baby Dumpling and Daisy, the family pooch, is now at the McCarthy Theatre. Charles Starrett in "Man From Sundown" and "The Shadow," are also on the same program.

Cheese and Rice Fondue
Molded Tomato Salad
Cherry Pie
Broccoli
Pickles
Coffee

CHEESE and Rice Fondue— Ingredients: One-fourth pound American cheese, one cup scalded milk, one cup soft bread crumbs, one tablespoon butter, one-half teaspoon salt, three eggs, one cup cooked rice. Cut cheese into small pieces; mix scalded milk, bread crumbs, cheese and butter and salt over hot water. Stir until cheese is melted, then remove from fire and add egg yolks, beaten until lemon colored; fold in cooked rice and, lastly, stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into buttered baking dish and bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 20 minutes or until nicely brown. This will serve eight.

Molded Tomato Salad—Ingredients: Two and one-half cups canned tomatoes, one tablespoon minced onion, one stalk celery, one-half bay leaf, one-half teaspoon salt, one teaspoon sugar, two tablespoons unflavored gelatin, one-half cup cold water, two tablespoons mild vinegar. Put tomatoes into saucepan, add coarsely-chopped onion and celery, and add to tomatoes with bay leaf, salt and sugar. Heat to boiling and boil gently for 10 minutes. While mixture boils sprinkle gelatin on top of cold water and let stand five minutes. Force cooked tomatoes through strainer, add gelatin at once and stir until it is dissolved, then add vinegar. Pour at once into molds that have been rinsed in cold water, and set aside to chill. Unmold when ready to serve on any desired salad green and serve with cooked dressing or mayonnaise.

Cherry Pie— For the Hot Water Pie Crust you'll need three cups cake flour, one teaspoon salt, one cup fat, one-half cup boiling water. Sift flour once, then mix with salt and sift again. Put fat in mixing bowl, pour boiling water over it, stirring until creamy and well blended. Add flour gradually, stirring it in as it is added. Shape into ball, cover with waxed paper and chill thoroughly before rolling out. This amount makes a large two-crust pie. You will need about two and one-half cups of canned cherries with one-half of the juice. Save the rest of the juice and add to fresh fruit juice cocktails. Roll crust and line pie pan, sprinkle with one or two tablespoons sugar and one tablespoon flour, and dot over with one teaspoon butter, then put cherries in and spread them evenly. Sprinkle with one-half cup sugar, one tablespoon flour, dot with butter, cover with top crust; make vents for air to escape. Bake in hot oven, 400 degrees F. at first, then after five minutes or so reduce to 350 degrees F. and continue until crust is brown.

Decorating Demands

By ELEANOR ROSS

IT IS difficult to give long-range advice on decorating the home without seeing the rooms to be done To budget-shoppers we can only repeat the best of all possible advice: Put money into the major things, and take time to acquire accessories.

Springs and mattresses, chairs, tables and bureaus should be as good as money can buy. Scatter rugs can always take the place of full carpet or rug, and be used later over the rug, in the hall or in another room.

It is wise to put as much as one can possibly afford into springs and mattresses, even if a plain metal frame has to be used for them. A box-pleated flounce in gay chintz or solid fabric will always lend charm to such a bed, especially if it matches dressing table skirts and is contrasted by a solid tone bedspread tying in with window drapes. A simple kidney-shaped table with a mirror added costs very little.

Living Room

For the living room, a sturdy card table is preferable to a cheap dining or occasional table for dining. A low chest of drawers or a secretary makes excellent storage space for linen and silver, if the living room is to be the dining room, too.

The sparsely-furnished room need not lack charm. A smart decorator reminds us that it is as important to keep the wrong things out of a room as to put the right things into it. The trend today is away from superfluous furniture and toward functional design. Furnishings which have a useful purpose are likely to be simple and can be beautiful. All wall space needn't be furnished; it is pleasing to have plenty of it around any group or piece of furniture. Do not even hang a picture unless it completes the effect of the grouping against the wall.

It isn't necessary to get suites. Similarity in scale of furnishings will unite groups. The wood tone, the craftsmanship and detail of even two occasional pieces can serve to establish the atmosphere of a room. Whatever is bought should blend in with later purchases. Traditional eighteenth century is always a good bet. The strictly modern changes, so that what is good now may be outmoded 10 years hence, unless one can buy the fine, fundamental modern pieces. Such furniture isn't in the strictly budget class.

A WEEK WITH THE QUINS

I certainly don't think we are spoiling the Dionne Quintuplets with too many clothes. The new dresses and coats and hats they have are spaced far enough apart that getting clothes is just about as much a novelty for them as it is for any ordinary child.

We did a little checking up this week on the money we spent on the Quins for clothes last year and found that it was just a little over $500, or about a hundred dollars per Quin. Surely that isn't high for five young ladies who appear every day of their lives—weather permitting—before the public.

Of course the Quins get quite a few presents of clothing from people all over this continent. However, last year, included in this five hundred dollar outlay were the clothes we got them for their visit to see King George and Queen Elizabeth at Toronto. We spent more on these outfits than on any other clothes we have gotten the children.

Last year, too, we were particularly bothered by the children outgrowing their clothes. For instance each child had about ten new dresses, and yet, I don't think that one of them discarded a dress that was worn out. They were just too small for them when they got new ones. The same was true of shoes. We just couldn't have them wearing ill-fitting shoes, and the result was that they each had to discard about four pairs of shoes.

I think a lot of this was due to the fact that following their operations for bad tonsils, they gained in size and weight very, very rapidly. One month, last March, Marie gained four pounds. That wasn't altogether unusual. They had shown such gains before in one month, and then the month following they wouldn't gain an ounce. In fact, they might lose a few ounces. But Marie gained another four pounds in April, and some more in May. Her sisters all kept pace with her, and if you have been following the progress of these children, you will perhaps remember that we had to put the children on a diet because they were gaining weight too fast. So, believe me, this fast weight gaining was hard on the Quintuplets' wardrobe. We found out the other day that the special dresses we made for Their Majesties' visit are now too small for them. But we are keeping them as museum pieces for the children.

The children don't get much chance to wear hats except when they are in the play yard and the public can see them. Recently some friends in New York sent them a selection of spring hats, five apiece. We had a great time when we opened the cartons and brought the children in to see them. They made a great deal of fuss over the hats, jumped around and clapped their hands and made little squealing noises. Then Yvonne stepped up and picked for herself a bright red tam shaped bonnet. Cecile chose one in her own color which is blue and Emilie picked a blue one too, even though there was a rose colored one that wasn't far off her own favorite pink. With her favorite, yellow in mind, Marie picked a very modest little cream pill box. Annette failed to find a green hat, so she picked on the rose one Emilie passed up.

When they got the hats all on, the children had a fashion parade, and each one was very generous in her praise of the other's choice in hats.

After it was all finished and the hats were piled on the table in the middle of the room, Marie asked: "How many hats are there?"

"Oh, there are enough," Cecile replied with a wave of her hand.

An old friend in the form of the redingote ensemble is here for Spring. A smart model has the redingote in heavy ribbed silk in a deep moss green. The dress is of light green, white and black silk with much shirring at neckline and waist. Long funnel pockets on the redingote which has wide wrist-length sleeves.

Caroline Chatfield Says Today

Give a Gal a Home, She Can Keep it

The other day I heard a mother moanin' low because she hadn't taught her daughter to cook, sew, mend or even pick up her clothes from the floor. Now daughter was going to be married, have a home of her own and she wasn't prepared to take charge. She thought dresses walked out of the closet, were mended, pressed and put back on the hangers with automatic precision.

Never having been in a grocery store, daughter had no conception of what it cost to put out three meals a day. As for ordinary routine matters such as having sheets for beds, towels for bathrooms and linen for dining room, it had never darkened daughter's mind that money was involved. Mother had been derelict and now she was doing pennance.

Mother needn't don sackcloth and rub her head in the ashes on this score. Here's one of the most merciful provisions of nature: that however ignorant she may be, a gal will set to and master the arts of housekeeping when she has the husband and the home to preside over. The gals are doing it every day and even though there are some minor catastrophes in the kitchen and some weeping spells in the dining room they learn quickly at the hands of the best teacher: experience.

A couple of eggs fried in an ungreased skillet, a pale gray, flabby steak, some burnt dough that masquerades under the name of biscuit, and the bride knows the answer to that one. She goes out, buys a cookbook to study, after which she can compete with the experts. One feels embarrassment at being caught by an unexpected caller with a dusty living room table and the bride learns to clean house methodically.

Take a family where there are plenty of servants to do what has to be done, it's not in the cards that daughters will make beds, wash dishes, sweep floors and put away the laundry. Yet if the mother in such a home has had any design for living, any conscience about preparing her children for life she hasn't permitted them to sink into the lap of luxurious leisure. She has seen to it that they have had fine education, that they have learned to think, and consequently understand that life isn't a perennial picnic.

It is undeniably true that the discipline of homely work is good for youngsters. While they are acquiring useful, practical knowledge and skills, they are learning that food, shelter, spending money and all the other things which give them pleasure do not grow on trees to be picked at their convenience.

On the other hand, many a girl who has never darkened the kitchen door, nor dusted the furniture, nor made a bed, goes into her new home and in an incredible time masters the arts of domesticity and dispatches the business in such a way as to make mother ashamed of her complicated menage.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Easing Mother's Nervous Strain

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

I GUESS fathers know little of the nervous strain to which the average mother of young children is subjected. Since she has no maid, she not only has the burdens of the household, but also the care of the little children.

No matter how systematic she may be, one or two children who are beginning to creep or toddle bring constant interruption. The cake is about ready to be taken from the oven when Jean, four, inadvertently pushes the door against the fingers of her baby brother. Or the mother is talking on the telephone when the baby screams as if seriously injured. Jean has just rescued from his grasp the precious doll he had appropriated. Perhaps dinner guests are expected within two hours and the dinner program is consideraly delayed. Mother is pressing forward at her best when Jean is heard from the rear of the house. She had fallen and slashed her knee. First aid must be applied. It is just time for the baby's dinner and he is yelling for attention.

Not Time to Relax

Any mother knows about these trying times with the little children at home. If she goes away with the children, even if she has nothing to do but to care for them, she rarely will have a moment to rest and relax. If these children are under five or six, a number of new problems will emerge just because they are not home. There are many new places and persons calling for many new adjustments. Of two or three children, the youngest will likely get most attention, stirring up feelings of jealousy.

For a mother to be engaged in household affairs all day is in itself a heavy task; but so to spend day after day, with constant interruption and constant attention needed by the children and on top of all this to have her sleep at night often curtailed or interrupted, calls for expenditure of physical and nervous energy about which fathers know little. Most fathers would be ready for the mad house after a few days of it.

How so many mothers can live through it all is a wonder. A mystery to me is that so many mothers not only live through it, but smile through it and maintain their youth remarkably well, while their childless sisters, comparatively free of such care, and nervous strain, wrinkle and grow old at a younger age.

Opportunity for Dads

We dads have an opportunity to reduce their burdens, and will if we care. We can't, of course, supply the infant with nature's food. But there is nothing else about the baby's care we cannot learn to do well, in case we choose to do it.

Let any father of one or two children under five send his wife off for a day or two of complete rest, and stay home himself and take care of the children, if he thinks her job is easy. Then he will change his mind. I have tried it. It works.

Fashion Flashes

IT'S GAY down south, and printed floral fabrics vie with flowers and palms. A charming dinner dress is silk chiffon jersey with little flowers in red, green, yellow and blue, all with black centres on a white ground. The long bodice has a low square neckline intricate draping and high puffed short sleeves.

South of the border colors of vivid Mexican stripe design are seen a great deal. Striped taffeta in yellow, green, red and purplish-blue is used to trim a brimmed white felt hat. The handbag, of the striped fabric is lined in white.

Finding a disguise for the snood has kept the milliners busy. There are hats n a very light-weight taffeta, and in place of the ubiquitous snood has ruches in back to cover the hair.

Teamed up for smartness are a hat and a bag both of light gray snakeskin, with trimmings of red snakeskin.

CHAPTER XXVI

As Sara watched Toby and Sonia drive away together, she felt strangely disturbed. Could she be jealous, she asked herself. But that was absurd—when she was in love with Curt, not Toby! No, it was just that she thought Toby deserved some one better than the flashy Sonia.

She went into the kitchen and started getting things ready for supper. She set out the percolator and measured coffee—ready to be placed on the stove as soon as the others should awake. She investigated the icebox and found cold beef to slice and a dish of scalloped tomatoes that could be reheated. She set the table and sliced the bread.

Then she returned to the living room and put things in order—straightened chairs, folded the afghan under which Toby had slept, pushed young Bill's fire engines into their special cubbyhole.

After that, she went out onto the verandah to wait for Curt. She sat down on the top step, her back against a post, and gazed out at the Sound, now bathed in color from the sunset.

It was here that Curt, arriving in his roadster a few minutes later, found her. She quickly told him the news of Bill's and Wendy's rescue, happily pouring out the whole story and unconsciously stressing the part Toby had played.

"Your Toby Martin seems an energetic, resourceful chap," Curt commented, when she had finished.

"Oh, Toby is fine!"

Curt seated himself and leaned back against the opposite post. "Well, now," he said, with his easy, pleasant smile, "let's talk about us!"

Sara stared down at her hands, folded about her knees. She knew he was going to press her for an answer to his proposal—and she still didn't know what answer to give him.

"Sara," he said gravely, "after you left last night, I made up my mind that, if a secret marriage was so distasteful to you, I'd let every one go hang and marry you the way I want to marry you—openly and with bells ringing!"

She glanced up at him quickly, her heart leaping. Then, his next words immediately dashed her hopes.

"But that," he went on, with a wry smile, " was before I had a talk with Dad this afternoon. He and the rest of the family returned to Yellow Gables this morning — and he was in a bad frame of mind. It seems that my brother Palmer turned up at the wedding yesterday and informed Dad that he wasn't going to fight Stephanie's suit for divorce. And Stephanie who blew in for a while today, now says that she's determined to go through with it, regardless of how Dad feels about it. The result is that he's fit to be tied. He thought he had just about persuaded her to drop it.

"He isn't any too well — has a bad heart—and what with office worries and this divorce business, he's in a very nervous state. Under the circumstances, I just could not bring myself to break any more news to him. Possibly, I was unduly apprehensive, but I didn't want to take a chance on what his reaction might be if I told him you and I were planning to be married."

Curt paused, then reached over and took Sara's hand. "And so, darling, things are just where they were but, if you'll only say yes and elope with me, I promise you that we won't keep it a secret for long. Please say you will."

"I—I don't know what to say, Curt," Sara faltered. "I've been thinking and thinking about it, but I can't decide. I — I do want to marry you—but not that way. I still don't see why we shouldn't wait until you're ready to tell your father."

"Well, for one thing, it will be so much simpler to tell him afterwards than beforehand," Curt argued. "Look, darling — just close your eyes and decide quickly. Let's make it next Saturday . . ."

Sara sat for a long time without speaking, her eyes fixed on the horizon. Why not yield to his plea?

Then, unbidden, Toby crept into her thoughts. She though of that day when he had proposed to her—had suddenly produced the ring that must have cost him so much. She had refused it, and now he had turned to Sonia. Was he, perhaps, at this very minute, slipping that shining, firelit diamond onto Sonia's finger?

Impatiently, she shook her head, as though to rid herself of this picture, then heard herself speaking almost without volition.

The next instant, she was in his arms.

During the next half hour, as they sat there together, making plans, Sara tried to forget many things that kept intruding themselves into her troubled mind. Tried to forget her mother, who would not learn of her marriage until after it was accomplished. Tried to forget the happy, exciting days that had preceded her sister's wedding. The assembling of the trousseau, the monogramming of linens, the fitting of the wedding dress.

Tried to forget the wedding day itself, with Vicky so radiant in her bridal white and long, soft veil. "Something old and something new, something borrowed and something blue. . . ." Flowers everywhere. Her family and Bill's and a few friends gathered to hear the exchange of the solemn, significant, beautiful vows. A setting of beauty and dignity for the initiation of a new home. . . .

Tried, most of all, to forget Toby sprawled today on the living-room sofa, under the knitted afghan, one arm boyishly curved above his tousled brown head. Tried to forget him driving away with a black-eyed, scarlet-lipped girl. . . .

CHAPTER XXVII

Late Monday morning, Juliette, who had returned to town the previous evening, was still sleeping soundly when the white telephone on the chromium stand beside her bed started ringing insistently.

Rousing, she sleepily reached for it. "Hello!" she said crossly.

"Juliette? This is Stephanie Carrington."

"Oh!" Juliette didn't particularly like Stephanie, and she certainly didn't like being awakened by a phone call that would undoubtedly turn out to be quite trivial.

"I hope I didn't wake you, darling," Stephanie cooed.

"You did."

"Oh, I'm so sorry! But I wanted to tell you something I accidentally learned yesterday. I really thought you ought to know."

"Well, what is it?" Juliette demanded, her curiosity now piqued.

"It's about Curt. You'd really better take him in hand, Julie, if you expect to hold onto him. I was down at Yellow Gables yesterday afternoon, and just happened to hear this from one of the maids.

"It seems that Curt and that little blonde from his office were down there during the storm on Saturday, and got caught by the tide out on the dunes—at least, they said they got caught. Anyway, they stayed out there for hours and hours—practically all night. It seemed funny to me for Curt to take her to Yellow Gables in the first place, with all the family away! So I thought I'd better tell you."

"Thanks," Juliette said tersely. "I am glad you did."

"If I were you, darling . . ." Stephanie began, but Juliette stopped her.

"I don't need any advice, thanks!"

Juliette slammed the phone into its cradle and sprang from the bed in a frenzy of rage. So Curt was still playing around with that girl! So that was why he had been so anxious not to have the engagement announced! Perhaps he was even contemplating backing out of it. . . Well, she'd fix him. She'd show him he couldn't make a fool out of her!

Flinging on her negligee, she stormed through the apartment, shouting for her colored maid, Dicey.

"Dicey! Get me the phone numbers of all the newspapers!" she ordered. "Quickly!"

When the numbers had been supplied, she sat down at her phone and spent the next fifteen minutes talking to city editors.

"This is Juliette Carter. . . . I've a piece of news for you. I'm announcing my engagement to Curtis Carrington. . . . Yes, I'll be glad to give an interview. . . . Yes, you may send a photographer, too. . . ."

An hour later, surrounded by reporters and photographers in her spacious living room, she was graciously posing for pictures and giving her interviewers generous quantities of information about her "romance".

This over, she waited only until she had had lunch, then set out in her car for the Carrington and Broderick offices.

It so happened that, just before her arrival there, the receptionist asked Sara to substitute for her for a few minutes. Hence, when Juliette swept into the reception room, she was momentarily disconcerted to find Sara at the desk.

Then, she quickly regained her poise and assumed her most haughty air. This coincidence, she decided, was a stroke of luck! It gave her a chance to put the girl in her place!

"How do you do, Miss Sidney?" she said coldly. "Will you please tell Mr. Carrington—I mean Curt, of course—that his fiancee is here?"

She carefully emphasized the word "fiancee" and was greatly gratified by the startled reaction it produced.

For an instant, Sara just stared.

Then, she stammered, "Why—why, yes—of course." She picked up her phone and got Curt on the wire. "Miss Carter is here to see you . . ." Then, to Juliette, "Please go right in."

Left alone, she found the room spinning around her. Was it possible that Curt had asked her to marry him when he was already engaged to Juliette Carter? Was that why he wanted a secret elopement—because he didn't have the nerve to break his engagement to Juliette? Or—or was his plan for an "elopement" just a scheme to make her go away with him next week-end. . . .

Oh, no! She couldn't believe such a thing of Curt! Neither could she believe that he would be so underhanded as to marry her while engaged to another girl. No, it was just a mean trick of Juliette's—a lie prompted by jealousy. It must be.

However, Sara couldn't shake off her doubts and, when she returned to her own desk a few minutes later, she was so troubled that she couldn't get any work done.

Then, she suddenly became aware of a strange silence in the office. She looked around and saw that all the other girls had left their typewriters and were gathered around Brenda's desk in the far corner of the room. They were looking at something and murmuring to one another. She saw Rose glance in her direction, then quickly avert her eyes.

HEIRESS ANNOUNCES HER BETROTHAL TO CURT CARRINGTON

Sara went icy cold. So it was true. Juliette surely wouldn't dare make this public announcement unless it were!

Shaken and white, she turned away. She knew that the other girls were all staring at her, but she didn't care. She made no attempt to hide her shock. Let the girls think what they liked.

She somehow got back to her desk sank into her chair, and sat there in a daze. Why had Curt done this to her? Oh, how could he, how could he!

She longed to lay her head down on her arms and sob her heart out but, of course, she couldn't. Presently, she found herself typing — madly, furiously—in an attempt to deaden the pain. . . .

CHAPTER XXVIII

Curt sensed trouble as soon as he heard that Juliette was in the reception room. Though he had no idea of the purpose of her visit, he felt sure it boded no good.

However, he rose with a smile, as she entered his office, and greeted her with feigned cordiality.

"Well! This is a pleasant surprise!"

"Is it?" she snapped. She flung herself into a chair and glared at him. "Maybe you'll change your mind about its being pleasant! Are you trying to double-cross me, Curt Carrington?"

"What—what do yo mean?"

"I've heard about your little escapade over the week-end—that's what I mean! I suppose you thought you could get away with it because I was out of town, but I'm here to tell you that I'm not going to stand for that sort of thing!"

Curt was silent a moment. So the cat was out of the bag! He debated how to answer her. He would have to have things out with her sooner or later, but the question was whether to do it now. He decided that this was not the time or place.

"What did you hear?" he hedged.

"Don't act dumb! You took that Sidney girl down to Yellow Gables when all the family were away, and spent most of the night with her on the dunes! Then I have to endure having Stephanie phone me to tell me about it!"

Curt's temper flared. "Stephanie is a cat! She would give you a distorted story! I simply took Miss Sidney out to watch the storm on Saturday afternoon, and we happened to be cut off by the tide for a few hours. We got back to the house soon after dark, and then she left. That's all there was to it."

"And just why did you have to take her there in the first place?"

"Well, why shouldn't I?" Curt said uncomfortably. "I'd told her what a swell sight storms are out there, and I thought she'd enjoy it."

"No doubt she did! And no doubt you haven't told her that you are engaged to me! Well, she'll soon know—and that will put an end to your little two-timing game! Have you seen an evening paper, Curt?"

He suddenly had a sinking feeling. "N-no. Why?"

"Because you'll find an interesting piece of news in it. I phoned all the papers this morning and announced our engagement."

"What!"

"That's a shock to you, isn't it? You were so anxious to keep it secret for a while, weren't you? Oh, yes! I see why now!"

Curt, greatly agitated, rose and walked to a window. The worst had happened! When Sara saw that announcement, what would she think, what would she do? How could he explain to her? He must deny it! Yes, that was the only way out!

He turned, realizing that he must have his show-down with Juliette here and now.

"All right!" he said furiously. "You announced it without my consent—but I'm going to deny it! Do you understand? It's all off! It was nothing but a contemptible bargain, and I don't know why I was such a weak fool as to be lured into it—I've been regretting it ever since! Take your money and buy some other man—you can't use it to buy me!"

Juliette had turned white. Was she going to lose him after all? Panic gripped her, but she brazened it out.

"You're talking awfully big now, but you'll sing a different tune if Carrington & Broderick loses that contract!" she blazed at him. "When that happens, you'll come running back to me so fast, it won't even be funny! But don't be too sure I'll take you back!"

"Hang the contract!" he exploded. "I don't care what happens, your bribery won't work! You may as well know the truth— I'm in love with Sara Sidney, and I intend to marry her!"

Juliette, now trembling violently, rose and stalked to the door. There she turned.

"Very well, Curt—go ahead and be a cad! Deny our engagement! But mark my words—you'll regret it!"

She flung open the door, and whirled out.

Curt dropped into his desk chair, and buried his head in his hands. Then, instantly, he leaped up. He must see Sara at once! He pressed the buzzer to summon her.

As soon as she appeared, her expression told him that she had already seen a paper—and his heart sank.

She nodded, without speaking.

"It's a mistake, Sara! There is absolutely no basis for it! Juliette did it to trap me. For some reason, she has been bent and determined to marry me, and she figured that, if she announced an engagement, I wouldn't have the courage to deny it. But that's exactly what I'm going to do, just as soon as I can get all the papers on the wire! I told her so when she was here a few minutes ago!"

Sara looked at him steadily. "It's hard to believe, Curt, that she had no basis whatever. I can't imagine any girl placing herself in the humiliating position of having such an announcement denied— especially when she knew the prominence it would be given."

"You don't know Juliette! Darling, you must believe me!"

He tried to take her in his arms, but she struggled free, and stood off from him.

"I'm sorry, Curt—but I can't. It's plain that, for some reason, you have been deceiving both Miss Carter and me. Don't try to tell me why, because I don't want to know. All I know is, that you haven't played square with either of us. Miss Carter has shown, by her announcements, that she knows how to take care of herself. Well, I too can take care of myself. I—I can do it by ending things between us right now. I mean to leave here as soon as I can find another job and in the meantime, I'd appreciate it if you

CHAPTER XXIX

That same Monday afternoon, things were also astir in the offices of Zenith Advertising—things that affected Toby's plans.

Shortly after he returned from lunch, he was summoned into the private office of Samuel Greenwald, the general manager.

"Look here, Martin," Greenwald began, "something has come up which I'll explain to you in a moment. It means you'll have to leave for Hawaii sooner than expected. Now, I don't want to rush you too much, but would it be possible for you to start for San Francisco Wednesday night? That is not giving you much notice, but I hope you can manage it."

"Why, yes," Toby said slowly, "I believe I can." He thought glumly that, the sooner he got away from New York—and Sara—the better off he'd be.

"Fine!" said Greenwald. "I've decided to send Miss Lester at the same time. I've already talked to her, and she says she can make it. I figure you'll need her help out there from the start."

"Good," said Toby.

Had Sonia, he wondered, been pulling strings? Had she prompted Greenwald's decision to send her at the same time?

Sonia had, very decidedly, been pulling strings. She had had a talk with Greenwald while Toby was out to lunch and had persuaded him of the wisdom of letting her accompany Toby instead of following him to Hawaii.

When he emerged from Greenwald's office after a half-hour conference, she was watching for him from her near-by desk, and flashed him a smile.

"How do you like the new plans?" she called.

He walked over to her. "Suits me. It—it's great you're going with me."

"I'm pleased, too," she enthused, "even if I will have to break my neck to be ready to leave on Wednesday. It's going to be fun, Toby!"

"Yes. Well, we'll talk it over at dinner tonight," he said, moving on.

He had asked her to dinner to make up for the date he had cut the evening before but, when the dinner hour came and they faced each other across a table in a little Italian restaurant, he did not keep his promise to "talk it over". Instead, he was morose and silent, making only monosyllablic replies to her eager attempts at conversation.

He couldn't get his mind off Sara. The more he thought about leaving on Wednesday—only two days off—the less he liked it. It was going to be pretty hard. When a fellow had been in love with a girl as long as he had been in love with Sara, it wasn't easy to break away — even if his common sense did tell him that it was the best thing to do. And once he had said goodbye to her he might never see her again. . . .

Finally, Sonia said impatiently. "I don't like you tonight! You're about as cheerful as a tomb! But all right—if you don't want to talk, I don't have to talk ,either! I can read!"

She reached for a newspaper that another diner had left on a neighboring table. But she didn't remain silent long.

"Say! Look at this! The million-dollar Carter girl has announced her engagement to Curtis Carrington."

"What!'

"Boy!,' he yelped. "Say, that's swell! That's marellous!"

Sonia stared at him in bewilderment. "What on earth is the matter with you? What difference does it make to you?'

"All the difference in the world!" he said excitedly. "Curt Carrington is the fellow I thought was going to marry my girl—Sara Sidney. But if he's engaged to Juliette Carter, I was all wrong! It means that maybe I've still got a chance, after all!"

Sonia didn't like this one bit. "I see," she said coldly. "But what gave you the crazy idea he was going to marry your friend Sara? I know she works for his firm, but. . . ."

"He's been giving her a rush — asked her out to his home and everything! I thought at first he was just stringing her along, and I told her so, but then, things seemed to get serious." Toby paused and stared off into space. "Gosh! Poor Sara! This has probably given her an awful jolt. She lost her head over him."

"Listen, Toby Martin!" Sonia said irritably. "If she passed up a swell guy like you for this philandering playboy, I wouldn't waste any sympathy on her. She's got what she deserved. Moreover, I'd forget her. I don't see how you can still care about any girl as fickle as that. Where's your pride?"

"She wasn't fickle," Tony defended. "She—oh, well, you would not understand." He hesitated, then said, "Look, Sonia—do you mind if I desert you after dinner and go by to see her? I—I've got so little time before I leave and . . ."

"I certainly do mind! Honestly, Toby, you're the limit!"

"Aw, come on — be a sport. I know it's rude, but the circumstances are unusual." He rose abruptly "I'll go phone her now to see if she's going to be at home."

He dashed away, with Sonia looking daggers at his retreating back.

To reach the phone booth, he had to pass the cashier's desk, on which the latest editions of the evening papers were on display. He chanced to glance toward them, then suddenly halted, his eye caught by a headline:

CARRINGTON DENIES ENGAGEMENT TO MISS CARTER

He bought the paper and stood there staring at it. Gone, now, was his elation—snuffed out in an instant. So Carrington wasn't engaged—unless he was to Sara.

"Mistake," he muttered. "Later edition says no. So I — I don't phone her." He slumped into his chair.

Sonia took in the altered news, then looked at him smugly.

"Well . . . I told you that you were an idiot . . ."

"Oh, hush!" he growled.

CHAPTER XXX

That night, in the library of the Carrington's apartment in town, Curt was havig a difficult time with his father.

During the past few hours, Sturges Carrington had been successively elated, bewildered and angered by that day's front-page newspaper stories involving his son. He had experienced delighted surprise when he had seen Juliette's announcement but, almost immediately, had come the severe jolt caused by Curt's sensational denial.

Now, he was angrily seeking an explanation from his son and was not at all satisfied with the replies Curt was making.

"I tell you, Dad, it was a scheme" Curt was insisting. "Juliette figured that, if she announced an engagement, I would meekly agree to it. But I wasn't going to stand for a trick like that, so I denied it."

"Yes—and made a public show of all of us! Set the whole town to talking!" Sturges Carrington took a turn about the room. "It all seems very queer to me. I can't believe that Juliette would have done such a thing unless you had said something to lead her to suppose there was at least an understanding between you. . . ."

He halted abruptly in front of Curt and looked at him squarely.

"See here, I want the absolute truth! I'm not at all convinced that you're being honest with me. Are you ready to swear that you gave Juliette no reason whatever for making that announcement?"

Curt, faced with this direct challenge, lowered his eyes. He couldn't bring himself to swear to a flat lie to his father.

"Well, I—I did give her some reason—"

"Ah! Now we're getting somewhere! Go on!"

Curt hesitated, then blurted, "Oh, all right! There was an engagement of sorts, but Juliette forced me into it! I regretted it right away and meant to get out of it. She apparently was afraid I'd do just that, so thought she could clinch it by making it public."

"I see! So you did lie to me! What do you mean, she forced you into it?"

"Well, I agreed to it largely because of you, Dad. You'd been pestering me about the advantage of marrying Juliette, and then she started in on me. She got jealous of Sara Sidney, and so, she coolly tried to bribe me. Offered to put her money into the firm if I married her. I got to thinking what might happen if, by any chance, we didn't land that Remo Dam contract and, before I knew it, I'd agreed to her bargain. But I could not go through with it, Dad. It's too cold-blooded."

The older man turned away impatiently. "Curt, you're a fool! It needn't be cold-blooded if you'd come to your senses. You've always been extremely fond of Juliette. But now, because of a silly infatuation for a stenographer, whom you couldn't possibly consider marrying, you turn down a girl who's not only devoted to you, but can do a great deal for you."

"But I don't love her! And what you call a silly infatuation isn't that at all! I—" Curt hesitated, then recklessly plunged on. "I love Sara Sidney. And I most certainly could consider marrying her. In fact, I intend to!"

"What!" Sturges Carrington looked as though he were about to have apoplexy. "You'll do nothing of the kind! Have you gone completely crazy? How can you think of trying to fit a girl of that sort into your world? She has absolutely no background, no—"

"She doesn't need it," Curt cut in defiantly. "I'd pit her any day against the whole Social Register. She's got twice the charm, character and personality of—"

"Just a moment!" his father interrupted. "Before you get too carried away, let me ask you this? Would you want to marry a girl who tried to wreck Carrington & Broderick?"

Curt stared at him. "What — what do you mean?"

"Exactly what I say! Gwendolyn Pickett believes that it was Miss Sidney who stole those blueprints, and I'm beginning to suspect it myself—"

"That's utter nonsense!"

"Not at all. It's very logical. She once worked for Poulton, Inc., and it would certainly be to the Poulton company's advantage to put us out of the running for that contract by doing away with our blueprints. It's quite within the realm of possibility that they stooped to the device of paying her to steal them."

"Dad, you can't believe that! I'd stake my life on Sara's integrity!"

"I'm not so biased," the older man retorted. "However, I've done nothing about it because I didn't want to accuse her without more proof, and also because we were able to repair the damage. Fortunately, the blueprints could be replaced. The duplicates are on their way to us now, and should reach us tomorrow, in ample time for submission before the deadline on Wednesday. Otherwise, I would most certainly have questioned Miss Sidney further—"

Just then, there came a knock on the library door, and the butler appeared.

"A cablegram, sir."

The man delivered the message, then withdrew.

Sturges Carrington tore it open, glanced through it quickly, then suddenly sank into a chair.

"Good lord!" he gasped, his face paling.

Curt leaped up. "What is it, Dad!"

"It's from Fowler! The plane on which he sent the blueprints is down in the mountains! They won't get here in time—if at all!"

Curt was speechless—at a loss for words in this unexpected crisis. Then, his father, banged the table with his fist. "That settles it! Tomorrow, Miss Sidney goes on the grill! We've got to recover the original blueprints, or we're finished!"

STORY—FIVE

"But Dad, she hasn't got them! I'll swear she hasn't!"

"We'll see about that!" Sturges Carrington said grimly. 'We'll get them out of her unless she's destroyed them! If she has—" He paused and ran a hand distractedly through his hair. "Well, in that case, you'll simply have to make up your quarrel with Juliette! Otherwise, it's bankruptcy!"

THANKS MOSBY'S TONIC—RELIEVED OF BACK PAINS

Mr. Kelly Felt Tired and Sluggish — Complexion Sallow and Pale — Bowels Constipated — Now He Says: "Mosby's Tonic Has Relieved Me. I Feel Fine!"

"Oh! How my sluggish kidneys hurt me! The backache. The sharp pains. The stiffness and soreness. And all night long my sleep was disturbed, due to this kidney sluggishness. I couldn't rest. But since I got MOSBY'S TONIC my sluggish-acting kidneys are relieved. Now I can sleep. Backache relieved. Here is a Splendid Medicine!"

MR. BERNARD KELLY

That is what thousands of people here in Belleville and vicinity are saying about MOSBY'S TONIC, a "New Mixture of Roots and Herbs and Other Splendid Medicinal Agents" now being introduced to the public daily in this city at Lattimer's Drug Store, 228 Front Street, your Tamblyn dealer.

And remember—MOSBY'S TONIC not only help Nature relieve weak, sluggish kidney but also clears gas and bloat from stomach, cleanses bowels, invigorates the liver action, acts to relieve pains of rheumatic and neuritic trouble, caused by contaminated system. It accomplishes several things in the body at the SAME TIME.

For instance, just a few days ago, Mr. Bernard Kelly, of 103 Roseheath Ave., Toronto, Ont., made the following statement. This grateful man's testimonial, praising Mosby's Tonic, follows:

Was Low in Energy; Felt Weak and Sluggish

"About a year ago I began losing weight," said Mr. Kelly. "And as time went on I seemed to lose all my energy. I had no appetite and what little food I did eat wouldn't nourish my body properly and as a result, my complexion took on a sallow, "muddy" colour and I simply felt worn out ALL THE TIME. My back was full of aches and pains, which was due to sluggish kidneys, and I was also a victim of bowel constipation.

"One day a friend of mine told me what Mosby's Tonic had done for him, and he almost insisted that I get this medicine and start taking it, which I did, and now I want to tell you that the first bottle has given me a great surprise. Why, do you know, within ONE WEEK I could see the colour coming back into my cheeks. At the same time, this medicine helped me to gain back my weight, and, say, what an appetite-builder this Mosby's Tonic is! Now I eat like a schoolboy, and I have gained in energy and never feel tired and worn out like I did before. It also relieved those pains in my back and regulated my bowels. I simply feel fine in general. It is SPLENDID."

TAKE THE "LEAD" FEELING OUT OF YOUR LEGS
Get More Oxygen In Your Blood and Get the Pep that Sends You Bounding Up the Stairs
People who smother to death die because oxygen has been completely cut off from them. Just as surely you are slowly smothering if your blood lacks red corpuscles. Red corpuscles are your oxygen-carriers. They carry the oxygen you breathe in to every part of your system. Without enough oxygen-carrying corpuscles, your kidneys, liver, stomach and bowels slow down. Your skin gets pale, flabby, often pimply. Your nerves may become jittery — you tire quickly — feel depressed.
What you need is Dr. Williams Pink Pills. These world-famous pills help make more and better red corpuscles and thus increase the oxygen-carrying power of your blood. Get Dr. Williams Pink Pills today at your druggist. See for yourself how quickly this time-proven blood-builder will help give you back your pep. Copr. 1940, G. T. Fulford Co., Ltd

SURVIVES 107 TEMPERATURE

Fort Erie, Ont., Mar. 28 (CP).—Physicians in this border area are frankly puzzled over the fact that 26-year-old William Huron who has been confined in hospital here the last fortnight suffering from a blood infection has survived a temperature of 107.

His physician, Dr. A. S. Hammond of Fort Erie North, said today previous medical experience indicated a temperature of 105 is the absolute maximum which an ordinary person can survive. Dr. Hammond added that Mr. Huron's temperature today has dropped several points but remained at a high 107 an entire day. Blood transfusions have been administered in effort to aid recovery.

H. G. Wells Calls Chamberlain Gov't 'Grossly Incompetent'

Leeds, England, March 28—(CP) —H. G. Wells called the government "grossly incompetent" today and said Prime Minister Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax are "just playing about with the war."

The writer, speaking to the British Students' Congress at Leeds University, said the government publication, "The British Case," was "calculated to damn us utterly in the eyes of our ally, France.

Mr. Welles said the publication showed that "we are fighting for the British Empire and imperialism" and that "if this is the stuff for which we are fighting, then it is foolish to fight."

"Everybody knows our government is grossly incompetent and yet no one dares attempt its replacement. Why is there this hysterical trust in and loyalty to the government? All the lack of confidence in the spirit of our people is psychologically different only in degree from what is happening in Germany.

"The Germans adhere to Hitler because they fear complete chaos if his gang breaks down."

HULL'S PROTEST OF SYDNEY TEAM IS DISALLOWED

C.A.H.A. Finds Players of Sidney Eligible to Play in Playdowns

OSHAWA WINS

Juniors Defeat Marlboros and Force Fifth and Deciding Game

By the Canadian Press

Kirkland Lake Blue Devils have exacted their revenge for the beating they took from Toronto Goodyears a year ago in the Ontario senior hockey finals.

The Blue Devils, beaten 3-0 in games last season by the Goodyears, scored a 6-2 victory over the Toronto team last night, winding up the best-of-five games Ontario final without a loss. Goodyears' only consolation was a 1-1 draw in the second game.

By their victory the Northern Ontario team qualified to meet Sydney Millionaires, Maritime champions, in the Eastern Canada semi-finals of the Allan Cup playdowns. The teams will meet in a two-out-of-three series starting at Toronto Saturday.

Millionaires qualified for the semi-final by beating Hull Volants in three straight games. The Volants protested to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, charging Sydney had used ineligible players, but their protest was rejected.

Meantime, Sherbrooke Red Raiders neared the final round of the Quebec playdowns by beating Joliette Cyclones, Quebec's Intermediate champions, 11-6 in the first game of a total goals series. Second game will be played tomorrow and the winner will meet Montreal Royals for the provincial title.

In the junior playoffs, the Dominion champion Oshawa Generals forced a fifth and deciding game in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior "A" final by beating Toronto Marlboros 4-2. Oshawa won the first game of the series but dropped the next two. The deciding game will be played at Oshawa Saturday.

Only eastern amateur game tonight will be at Quebec where Verdun Maple Leafs, last season's eastern junior finalists, will meet Quebec Aces in the Provincial final. Quebec won the first game of the total-goal round 4-2 and are favored to dethrone the Leafs.

KIRKLAND LAKE WINS SERIES FROM TORONTO GOODIES

Win Fourth Game 6-2 and Now Meet Sydney Millionaires in Next Playdowns

PLAY IN TORONTO

Kirkland Lake Built Up 5-0 Lead at End of Second Period

Kirkland Lake, Ont., March 28—(CP)—Having revenged their defeat by Toronto Goodyears in the playdowns last year Kirkland Lake Blue Devils considered themselves embarked safely today on the Allan Cup trail.

Blue Devils shellacked Toronto 6-2 last night in the fourth game of the all-Ontario final to take the title with three victories and a tie. Kirkland Lake now meets Sydney Millionaires, Maritime champions, in the Eastern Canada semi-finals. The teams meet in a best-of-three series starting at Toronto Saturday.

Dick Kowcinak, formerly of the championship Trail club, gave Blue Devils the lead in less than three minutes last night. From then on the Northerners were never headed. Cooper added another five minutes later.

In the second frame the winning team's defencemen took the scoring action away from the forwards. Doug Boston banged a brace of markers past the Toronto netminder and Butch Stahan added another to put the result beyond doubt before the third period started. In the last 20 minutes Mel Snowden, another puckman from Trail, ran the Blue Devil count to six before Imlach put Goodyears in the scoring summary. O'Flaherty added the second Toronto tally in the last few minutes of play.

The game lacked the spectacular thrusts and bodychecking of the first three games. Both teams adopted a cautious style for the first half of the game and the 1,400 fans had little to cheer about.

LEAFS READY TO TACKLE DETROIT

One More Win for Toronto and Team Will be in Finals for Stanley Cup

Detroit, March 28—(CP)— Detroit Red Wings on the verge of elimination from the National Hockey League play-offs, are ready for a last-ditch stand tonight against the powerful Toronto Maple Leafs.

If the Leafs can duplicate their 2-1 victory scored Tuesday night at Toronto, they will play in the final for the Stanley Cup for the third successive year. Two years ago the Leafs lost to Chicago; last year to Boston. This year they meet the winner of the Boston New York Rangers series.

From Captain Ebbie Goodfellow down to the newest rookie the Red Wings were in fighting mood for tonight's game, convinced they can even the series with Leafs and return to Toronto for a third game Saturday night.

Detroit hasn't defeated the Leafs at Toronto in years, but managed to get one victory over Conny Smythe's team here this season.

Confidence of the Leafs dropped a peg after Tuesday's close game at Toronto, but they still are heavy favorites with their high-powered offense led by Syl Apps and Gordon Drillon.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By the Associated Press

Winter Haven, Fla., March 28—(AP)—Bill Terry of the Giants is speaking:

"If I could win 77 games with the humpty-dumpty team I had last year, I don't see any reason in predicting less than 90 victories this year—and that'll put me high up in the pennant race. Why shouldn't we be a better team? We're better at second and third, have a chance of improving in the outfield and have a better first baseman."

Sebring, Fla.—The Yankees came here today to take on the Newark Bears, after barely escaping with their lives yesterday at the hands of the Kansas City Blues. It was the first time the Yanks had put their complete machine on the field but Lefty Gomez was disappointing and the Yanks had to rally to win.

Clearwater, Fla.—The outlook is more and more than Pee Wee Reese will start the season at shortstop for Brooklyn Dodgers, who play the Red Sox today. Manager Leo Durocher, following a doctor's orders, hasn't used his ailing arm at all since he returned from Baltimore, and with Reese hitting a neat .429 in the spring series, it looks like he should fill the bill.

BLUE DEVILS WIN ALL-ONTARIO SENIOR CHAMPIONSHIP

Without sustaining a single loss the Lake Shore "Blue Devils" (above) won their first all-Ontario senior O.H.A. hockey title by beating the Toronto Goodyears 6-2 in a fourth and final game last night. The Blue Devils were without their ace centreman, Jo Jo Graboski, one-eyed player who sustained a back injury recently. The Blue Devils displayed superior checking and speed to win the first, third and fourth games of their series with Goodyears, the second game resulting in a 1-1 tie. The new champions will now meet the Sydney "Millionaires" in their first quest of an Allan Cup title. ABOVE LEFT to Right: Lex Cook, Bill Durnan, Zeke Ferley, Frank Straham, P. M. McPhail, M. MUZZ PATRICK GIVES TEAM NEW LEASE ON LIFE

N. Y. Rangers Confident They Can Take Boston Bruins in Next Two Games

CLAPPER QUITE SORE

Boston Defenceman Deflects Shot Into His Own Net in Game at New York

Boston, March 28 —AP)—Late in the National Hockey League's regular season Muzz Patrick scored a goal for New York Rangers. Excited by the unusual sensation he declared, "If I can do it, nothing can stop us."

And that seems to be the attitude of the Rangers as they head for Boston and the fifth game of their best of seven series with the Bruins in the Stanley Cup play-offs. For it was Muzz's goal Tuesday night that evened the score for the series at two games apiece—and gave the Rangers a new lease on life.

While Muzz was being hailed as hockey's newest hero, Dit Clapper was kicking himself all over the place, for the game-winning goal was unintentionally deflected into the net by Clapper.

Bruins are certain they'll be able to swing the pendulum in their favor in tonight's meeting in Boston, where they have been almost invincible throughout the season—and absolutely so during the play-offs.

The Bruins, in addition to getting a trouncing Tuesday, also got an idea of big town inhospitality. Among the souvenirs they carried back to the Hub were an assortment of metallic nuts, several marbles, insulators, a cigaret lighter and a lip-stick, all tossed on Garden ice by Manhattan fans who were anxious to show the home lads that they could do anything the Boston fans can.

Fans Sympathetic For Johnny Paychek Against Joe Louis

New York, March 28 (AP)— The mourners' bench hung out the "S.R.O." sign today as the fistic clan peculiar to heavyweight championship bouts hit town loaded down with sympathy for Johnny Paychek in his golden shot at Joe Louis tomorrow night in Madison Square Garden.

Experts, fight managers, promoters, fighters, hangers-on and just plain fans from all along bash boulevard were unanimous in their belief that Louis' 10th defence of the richest bauble in the science of scrambling ears meant just another victory for the bomber.

One or two (count 'em) thought there was an off chance the Des Moines hopeful might last for the 15-round route if he got by the first two rounds and could keep up his speed. The rest were certain not even his prized fiddle and a football helmet would keep Johnny awake for long once the Bomber started pitching.

For the warriors, meantime, this was a day of relaxation and concentration. That is, for Johnny it was relaxation and concentration; for peaceful Joe, his training over, it was just relaxation. Louis leaves the concentrating department to trainer Jack Blackburn because the relaxing takes so much time.

Sports Roundup

(By Eddie Briets Associated Press Sports Writer).

New York, March 28 (AP)—Scooparade: It's a fact that Lee Eavold turned thumbs down on a June title bout with Joe Louis .... Mike Jacobs nearly swallowed his store teeth when Lee told him he'd rather whip another good guy first ....We don't blame him for taking care of himself as long as possible—but then there's the angle that opportunity and the postman may not ring twice....anyway, with Billy Conn on the shelf for another six months, Lee's postponed fight with Bob Pastor may be put on as an outdoor show in Detroit this summer ....Another major sport (can you guess which?) is beating the brush for a man who can swing a big stick a la Judge Landis.

"The dogs do bark."

Reason La Berg passed up the mid-south tournament (which she won last year) to hurry back home, was tootsie trouble....for some reason most femmes on the Grape Fruit circuit have been complaining of their dogs this season. .... Joe Louis has reservations on an 11:45 Detroit plane tomorrow night, just to give you an idea....by the way, that shiner Joe is sporting is the first he ever received in a training camp....The U.S.G.A. didn't like it a little bit when Bud Ward, United States amateur champ, flew 3,000 miles from his home port at Spokane to the St. Augustine pro-amateur tournament ....(The brass hats think it might have been a publicity stunt) .... Old Wes Ferrell has just about cinched a berth with the Dodgers.

Today's guest star.

Sec. Taylor, Des Moines Register: "I can only hope that Johnny Paychek is 'good to the last drop'," —nice going, Cunnel.

Today brings the third and final episode pertaining to "The Golden Age of Hockey in the Ottawa Valley" and the story of the famous Renfrew "Millionaires" as narrated by Harry J. Walker in the Ottawa Journal some time ago. Just about the time that Perry and Cook both claimed to have discovered the North Pole, (Cook's claim was tossed into discard, however), hockey down in the Ottawa Valley rose to dizzy heights. About that time Teddy Roosevelt was big game hunting in Africa and Jack Johnson had beaten the white hope of the day, Jim Jeffries, Cobalt Town was booming and Haileybury was moving into the hockey picture also. There was talk of war in the Balkans, but otherwise the sturdy lads of the Ottawa Valley had no idea they would soon be implicated in what later proved to be the greatest war up to that time. Ottawa won the Stanley Cup in 1909 and Renfrew won the Federal League, but Ottawa would not recognize the "Millionaires" or their challenge, relates Mr. Walker.

The next season Renfrew and the Wanderers were refused admission to the Canadian Hockey Association, comprised of teams from Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec City. That refusal began the greatest hockey war in Canada's history. The Strachans of Montreal, the O'Briens and Barnets of Renfrew met Nickel Belt puck magnates headed by Noah Timmins and the National Hockey Association was born, comprising Wanderers, Haileybury, Les Canadiens, Cobalt and Renfrew and thus, relates Mr. Walker, the present N.H.L. actually began as the result of the refusal of the Ottawa-Montreal interests of the previous year. Renfrew raided Ottawa and signed Lester and Frank Patricks (yes, the present heads of the Rangers) at a salary of $3,000 each for a schedule of but eight games. The "Millionaires" were trying to induce "Cyclone" Taylor to leave Ottawa and finally the "Listowel Beauty" appeared for practice in Renfrew and signed. Encouraged by this addition, the Renfrew magnates offered "Hay" Millar of Edmonton, the largest sum ever offered a hockey player. Millar was offered $1,000.00 to play the opening game with the "Millionaires" against the Wanderers, but Millar preferred to play amateur with Edmonton at that time and refused that offer.

The next season Millar signed with Renfrew and at that time the "Millionaires" boasted of some really great players in Fred Taylor, the Patrick boys, Herb Jordan, "Hay" Millar, Fred Whitcroft, Fraser, "Newsy" Lalonde, Bobby Rowe and Bert Lindsay. The Ottawa Journal claims that is the greatest galaxy of hockey players ever to wear the same uniform at the same time. However, they finished the season behind both the Wanderers and Ottawa, but amassed the greatest scoring record of all time. In their twelve games of the 1911 season the "Millionaires" scored 96 goals, an average of eight goals per game, reports Mr. Walker. On Dec. 22nd, 1911, however, Joe Boyle, of Klondyke hockey fame, arrived in Renfrew with $50,000.00 in gold and led an attack on the Renfrew roster, but it was with no avail as the pucksters of that day were not too anxious to trek up Yukon way, as there was boom enough in Northern Ontario.

It must be remembered that Renfrew was but a town of 4,000 inhabitants at that time. Then along came the Montreal Shamrocks, led by such durable hockey players as "Dad" Pitre, Nickolson, "Bad Joe" Hall, Vezina and Jack Laviolette, the latter player having resided at Rossmore in his youth and learning to skate on the Bay of Quinte. Laviolette was once considered one of the smoothest skaters ever to play hockey. With the personnel of the Renfrew and Shamrocks given, Mr. Walker concluded his articles with the rosters of those really great N.H.A. teams of 1910 and '11 which included:

Cobalt—Jones, McNamara, Smaill, Vair, Clarke, Campbell, Doran.

Do you remember when Johnny Dundee—the Scotch Wop—retained his world - junior lightweight boxing crown at Toronto 17 years ago tonight when he shaded Jimmy Goodrich of Buffalo in 10 fast rounds. The New Yorker later held the featherweight title.

Unless some immediate action is taken locally regarding baseball, or some other summer sport, the only competitive sport to be played in Belleville this summer will be softball. Surely in a city of 14,000 population there is room for more than one line of competitive sport, but alas there is too much disinterest and "let George do it" attitude displayed by Belleville citizens towards the fostering and sponsoring of sports in this city. "Wake up Belleville, before it is too late."

SPORT SPICE—"Soup" Campbell, of the Oshawa Times, can breathe a little freer today, the Oshawa Generals raced back into the junior O.H.A. picture with a 4-2 win over the Toronto Marlboros last night. . . . Tonight it's either the Bruins or Rangers that pass into Stanley Cup oblivion at Boston and we favour the Bruins to win. . . . In Detroit it's do or get out for the Red Wings as the Maple Leafs only need one more victory to be in the Stanley Cup finals. . . . Not since the days of the Sudbury Wolves and the "Soo" Greyhounds has a team roared down out of the north with the success enjoyed by the Lake Shore "Blue Devils" this year. . . . The Blue Devils won the all-Ontario senior puck title from Toronto Goodyears without sustaining a loss, won three and tied one. The Devils now meet the strong Sydney "Millionaires."

Lakeland, Fla.—Some of the Detroit Tigers who haven't been doing so well this spring were more nervous than ever yesterday when Donald Barnes, President of St. Louis Browns, dropped in to watch the Detroit - Washington game at Orlando. Barnes had been visiting his son who is a student at nearby Rollins College.

As far as is known, no deals were made.

Orlando, Fla.—There's still a chance that Zeke Bonura may wind up in a Washington Senators' uniform before the season opens. The big first baseman who has permission to make a deal for himself, turned up again yesterday for another conference with owner Clark Griffith.

WALL STREET

New York, March 28 (AP)—Renewed strength in aircrafts today helped the stock market absorb a sizable amount of profit-selling in the wake of Wednesday's speedy rally.

With most plane issues pushing up a point or so, steels came back for small gains fololwing a spotty opening. Modest plus signs were in the maority near the fourth hour.

On the Canadian list Hiram Walker and Lake Shore Mines dipped trifles while Dome Mines came back as much. Other issues were unchanged.

Bonds worked higher, as did commodities.

Prominent on the upside were Douglas Aircraft, Glenn Martin, Lockheed, International Harvester, American Bosch, N.Y. Shipbuilding and Electric Boat.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, March 28 (CP)—Volume expanded on Toronto exchange today with prices showing strength in the industrials and weakness in the mines during the early part of the session. Trade passed the 300,000 share mark in the first three hours.

Pickle Crow was under selling pressure on a report that the ore was showing lower grade at depth. The price dropped to 3.20, its lowest in three years or more, recovering later to around 3.40 for a net decline of 25 cents overnight. Teck Hughes and Wright Hargreaves were off 5 to 10 cents. Bidgood-Kirkland, Omega and Malartic Goldfields were features of the cheaer group.

Ford A, Fanny Farmer, Bell Telephone, Brazilian, Walker's common and Massey-Harris were strong issues of the interlisted industrial group. The western oil share market was dull and practically unchanged. Home Oil sold at 2.44, up 2 cents.

LIVESTOCK

Toronto, March 28—(CP)—Trade in cattle was dull with prices a shade easier on the Toronto Livestock Market up to mid-session today. Veal calves and hogs were steady. The holdover from Wednesday was 200 head of cattle.

Toronto Produce Shows Easier Trend

Buying interest seemed to be lacking on the butter market. Fresh supplies continued to arrive in light volume and sellers did not force sales, but prices sagged to the range of 27 1-2c to 27 3-4c for No. 1 grade Ontario creamery solids. Only the odd sale of regraded was reported at the lower figure, with fresh make not available under the 23 3-4c mark. Western offering attracted no attention, Prices were quoted at 28c to 28 1-2c per pound.

Supplies were ample to meet the slow trading on the egg market. The carryover from the holiday week-end offset the light receipts which were being curtailed because of present road conditions. Prices were a shade easier for the three top grades in the graded section, but the retail division showed no change. Government inspected lots of graded eggs commanded a 1-2c premium on prices quoted.

21 INSPECTIONS MADE OF HOTEL

Testimony is Given at Inquiry Into Avonmore Hotel Fire

Toronto, March 28 (CP)—Twenty-one inspections of the Avonmore Hotel were made by inspectors of the Liquor Control Board between April 7, 1939, and March 4, 1940. W. C. Mair, assistant director of hotels for the Liquor Control Board testified at the resumed inquiry into the fire which occurred on March 15, before Provincial Fire Marshal W. J. Scott today.

The report showed that all instructions for fire prevention had been carried out.

K. S. Gillies, building commissioner for Toronto, informed Mr. Scott that there were only nine or ten hotels in the city of fire-resistance construction.

The Avonmore Hotel had been built before the new bylaw calling for fire resistance construction was passed in April, 1935. He informed the fire marshal that any alterations made in the hotel had conformed to the requirements of the city by-laws.

Last night a further statement was taken from Arthur Oswald, clerk of the hotel, who is in the hospital recovering from his injuries received during the fire.

PARLEY ARRANGED

It was reported that Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax discussed at some length yesterday with Russian ambassador Ivan Maisky the degree of neutrality to be accorded Russia by the Allies.

British detention of the Russian ship Selenga and Vladimir Mayakovsky for contraband examination also was said to have been discussed, but foreign office sources denied that Maisky had protested the British action.

Diplomatic observers held that Russia was unlikely to raise any major dispute over the detentions because they believed the present Soviet foreign policy is to pursue a cautious course while sizing up the European situation.

Russia Becoming Uneasy

The impression even existed in some British quarters that Russia is becoming uneasy over her diplomatic position and the effects of her alignment with Germany. Whether she is actually seeking to recover favor with Britain and France is not known, however.

France's Premier Paul Reynaud was reported to advocate a more rigid policy toward Russia and treatment of her as virtually a war ally of Germany. The British government was said to feel, however, that Russia still could be kept from any closer co-operation with the enemy camp.

Further steps to wean Italy from Germany also were expected to be projected by the Allies, with France possibly taking the lead in new approaches to Rome.

Stopping of the 3,972-ton Vladimir Mayakovsky, en route from Mexico and California with metals for Vladivostok, was reported yesterday. The 2,492-ton Selenga, carrying Chinese tungsten ore, was taken into Hong Kong January 13 and presumably is still there.

The British press described navy interception of the Russian ships as merely a part of the general tightening of the blockade against Germany by shutting the eastern "back door", through which it was believed supplies from the Americas have been filtering via Russia.

The News Chronicle said the seizure was "closing another gap," and added:

Speed up the War

"For many weeks now the stream of sympathy coming out of America for Finland has been equalled in size and rate of flow only by the stream of important American war materials which have found their way to Russia.

"There is strong reason to believe that some of these materials have been getting through to Germany —and, failing preventive measures, much more would get through in the future."

The Daily Mail said British and French statesmen, including Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain and Premier Paul Reynaud, expected to meet "somewhere in Great Britain" for immediate talks "to review methods of speeding up the war."

The paper commented:

"Both in Great Britain and France, the demand is urgent and action on sound lines to end the present state of 'sitdown war.'

"Leaders of the Allied governments are keenly aware of this and the need, while being careful of avoiding action for action's sake, for keeping ahead of any of the complicated moves by which Germany is waging war."

One active but little publicized British phase of the war—the coastal air patrol system — was credited meanwhile by neutral observers with halving the commerce-destroying effectiveness of German submarines.

R. A. F. Highly Praised

Calling the Royal Air Force coastal command the sharpest new weapon employed against the submarine menace, one expert said it had "reduced by 50 per cent" Germany's chance of striking a body blow at Allied shipping such as that of April, 1917.

Flying a mixed collection of bombers, scouting planes and fighters, the coastal command pilots have travelled more than 7,000,000 miles since the war began.

The pilots, many of them first Great War veterans, daily scan 3,000,000 square miles of sea crossed by Britain's shipping lanes.

The coastal command has attacked 60 of the more than 100 submarines it has sighted, and believes it has sunk 15 to 20.

Coastal planes have escorted more than 700 convoys without incident. They also have spotted many mines of the surface type.

Several times the planes have caught submarines "in the act" of attacking merchantmen. Because the planes' bombs are not as penetrating as depth charges which ships can carry, destroyers are called to such a scene whenever possible.

LONDON PAPERS HAIL VICTORY

"Mackenzie King has won a remarkable victory in the Canadian general election", The Times said. "At a very early stage in the campaign there was little doubt his government would remain in power.

"The alternative which the Opposition had to offer was not sufficiently attractive to tempt many voters to the risks involved in a change of government during war.

"All the returns are not yet in, but it is clear already that the Liberal predominance in the new parliament will be even more overwhelming than it was in the last. Mackenzie King himself and all the other Ministers have kept their seats, most of them by sweeping majorities.

Heavy Polling in Bad Weather

"Another surprise about the election has been the heavy polling in spite of bad weather. Reporters tell of voters making their way to the booths through blizzards and snowdrifts.

"The Liberals had the advantage that they were the government in being and were able to point to their not inconsiderable achievements in the Empire air scheme in raising, equipping and dispatching Canadian troops and in their contribution to naval defence.

"The Conservatives maintained that more should have been done and more promptly and that it would have been so done if they had been in office. Owing to their lack of capable leaders they were not able to put up an alternative government of their own for Canada to choose, and they advocated instead the formation of a National Government to be composed of men of all parties and of none for the sole object of winning the war.

"Unfortunately no one was able to say who the members of this government would be or to offer any convincing argument to show that they would be any more patriotic, any more capable or any more energetic than the Ministers whom the country was urged to turn out of office.

"As the result showed, even the voters who were inclined to be critical and distrustful of the present Ministers preferrd to leave the conduct of the war in their hands rather than transfer it to they knew not whom.

Decisive Factor

"This preference was probably a decisive factor in the Liberal victory. Other causes contributed. Whereas the Liberals had a strong and well-knit organization in every province, the Conservative Party had not recovered from the smashing disaster of 1935.

"In particular its five years in opposition had not thrown up any effective leaders. Dr. Manion is personally popular and has fighting spirit, but it is impossible yet to put him in the same class as such former leaders as for instance Sir Robert Borden or Mr. R. B. Bennett.

"There was no one on his side to give him the effective support which Mr. King received from Mr. Lapointe, the leader of the Quebec Liberals in the Federal parliament. To judge by the result, the co-operation of Mr. Hepburn in Ontario seems to have been rather a hindrance than a help.

"And to make matters worse, the Conservatives mismanaged their campaign. They had a legitimate ground of complaint in the hasty way in which the Prime Minister sought dissolution when they proposed to criticize in parliament the administration of the war departments, but they spoilt their case by bringing wild and exaggerated charges and by making all sorts of irresponsible promises to attract support.

Refrained From Party Appeal

"Mr. King, on the other hand, refrained from any appeal to party or sectional feeling. He made very few speeches, and in them, ardent Libral though he is, he was more concerned to play the part of Prime Minister and National Leader in time of crisis than that of Party leader fighting a general election".

The Daily Telegraph, in an editorial entitled "Canada's Single Mind", said that "seldom has a democratic premier received a clearer and more absolute mandate than that now accorded to Mr. Mackenzie King".

The newspape said: "It was the bitterness and persistence of the attacks upon his administration by Mr. Hepburn, Liberal Premier of the Province of Ontario, that decided Mr. Mackenzie King to go to the country at once", the newspaper said. "And it is notable that in Ontario itself he now has the support of 57 of the Province's representatives in the Dominion Parliament".

U. S. DELIVERS 1,600 WARPLANES

Aviation spokesmen, after conferring with army and navy officials here yesterday, voiced confidence that aircraft plants could handle the expected heavy increase in foreign buying "in a manner affording complete protection to our national interest."

They predicted also that the big buying program would materialize quickly in view of the War Department's decision to permit the export of latest model United States military craft. Heretofore, the Allies have been slow to place additional orders, contending that anything but the latest planes would be obsolescent by the time mass deliveries were made.

Secretary of War Harry Woodring explained the new export policy to the House military committee yesterday, and the arrangement won its general approval.

There remained a possibility, however, that a similar Senate committee might decide to examine the effects of foreign plane orders on National Defence requirements. A vote on an investigation proposal was fixed for today.

Data on Purchases

The data on aircraft war purchases to date, as compiled by War, State and Treasury Department sources, showed a $300,000 backlog on Franco-British orders for planes, engines and propellers as of Feb. 29.

The report said that, in all, foreign purchasers had 3,364 military planes on order at an estimated cost of $247,565,500. Engines on order totalled 10,123, costing $98,845,000, and there were contracts for 9,530 propellers at $18,221,000.

Unfilled orders of the principal nations were: —

France: 1,371 planes, $100,886,000; 6,355 engines, $61,425,000.

Canada: 12 planes, $883,000; 144 engines, $1,392,000.

Finland: 2 planes, $147,000; 65 motors, $628,000.

Sweden: 295 planes, $21,708,000; 446 engines, $4,311,000.

Other countries: 269 planes, $19,795,000; 514 engines, $5,968,000.

Louis Johnson, Assistant Secretary of War, told the House Committee that by the end of this year the industry's capacity would be between 30,000 and 40,000 complete aircraft as contrasted with the 3,643 output of 1938.

TOWERING FLAMES LIGHT BERLIN

DNB News Agency States Blaze More Spectacular Than Amount of Damage Done

Berlin, March 28 (AP)—Towering flames from a warehouse of the Bergmann Electric Company on the northern outskirts of Berlin threw a warlike red glare over the city early today.

But the blaze apparently was less sensational that it seemed last night when fire-fighting equipment was massed for half a mile around the scene in Wilhelmsruh, six miles from the centre of the Capital.

Tongues of flames leaping high into the overcast night sky caused reports that the burning plant had been converted to manufacture of war materials and that powder stores were exploding. This, however, was not confirmed.

DNB, German News Agency, said "highly inflammable material" was ablaze in the wooden warehouse but did not tell what it was.

The flames were believed to have been confined to the one building but military police barred the way to the plant and strict wartime laws against reporting news of any military value hampered efforts to obtain information

ORDER INCREASES ARE EXPECTED

U. S. Revised Policy of Co-operation With Allies in Plan Purchases Studied

Washington, March 27—(AP)—The United States Government's revised policy of full-fledged co-operation with the Allies in warplane purchases went under Congressional scrutiny today, as first steps were taken to speed action on an anticipated sharp increase in Franco-British orders.

The House of Representatives military committee called War Secretary Harry Woodring to explain particulars of his Department's decision to make the latest military aircraft models available for export and also to waive delivery on existing air crops orders so that the Allies may obtain them.

Simultaneously, without waiting for the committee's reaction, other army and navy officials met representatives of the aircraft industry to discuss the new policy and its immediate application.

Although the "all-out" co-operation decision was reached after the House inquiry had been arranged, there were no immediate signs of disagreement by individual members of the military committee.

FARMERS ASSISTED IN MAIL DELIVERY

So badly did the recent snow storms block the roads north of Peterborough, that farmers of that district had to assist in the delivery of mails. Government mail carriers, who cover the rural route north of Peterborough, could not negotiate the heavy snow drifts off the main highways. Some mail carriers left their mail at strategic points, where accommodating farmers, with sleighs and teams, crossed fields to collect the mail and later deliver it as a helpful gesture to the stranded mail carriers. Drifts 20 feet high were reported outside of Peterborough earlier in the week. Snow ploughs were helpless before the solidly packed drifts.

'Dominating Idea Is to Win War' Says Gen. La Fleche

Paris, March 28—(CP—Havas)—Major-General L. R. La Fleche, Canada's first military attache in Paris, declared today that "the dominating idea with us is to win the war."

General La Fleche, who has just arrived here to take up his new post, said in an interview that "it is with ardor that Canada has mobilized all her energies and her resources and today is stretching all her efforts towards the victory of our arms."

Recalling the pilgrimage to Vimy in 1938, he said, "the warm welcome given our ex-servicemen by the French Government and the whole French nation deeply touched all Canadians."

"In this connection," he added, "I would like to say that in Canada the ex-servicemen are among the most determined in the Canadian war effort. Coming from those who underwent the hard test of 1915-18 this determination is highly significant."

Seventh Annual Report Of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association

Following is the report submitted by S. L. Joss, secretary of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association at the seventh annual meeting held recently at the Chateau Laurier Hotel in Ottawa.

The meeting opened with the president, Mr. R. H. Mayberry, in the chair. The secretary, Mr. S. L. Joss, took the minutes.

Over two hundred delegates attended the sessions, representing the following counties: Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Grenville, Prescott, Russell, Carleton, Renfrew, Lanark, Leeds, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland, Peterboro, Oxford, Middlesex, Elgin, and Perth.

Present also were Messrs. J. F. Singleton, Associate Director of Marketing Service; C. E. Lackner, Director of Dairying for Ontario; H. H. Hannam, secretary, United Farmers of Ontario; G. F. Perkin, secretary, Farm Products Control Board; William Newman, assistant chairman, Farm Products Control Board; V. S. Milburn, secretary, Canadian Dairy Farmers' Federation; C. W. McInnis, representing The Concentrated Milk Producers' Association; Dr. Gibson, Kemptville Agricultural School, and many others.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS:

Mr. Mayberry welcomed the delegates and expressed his pleasure that all the cheese producing counties in the province were represented. He stressed the fact that we are at this time called upon for a national effort to bring about success in the war in which we are taking part. "This fact," he continued, "lays upon us as cheese producers certain responsibilities. It is our patriotic duty to our country to put forth special effort to conduct our business as efficiently as possible. Cheese and bacon are the products that Canada is asked to produce and it is in these two commodities that this group is especially interested. It is our duty to do our best to help our country at this time, and it is right and proper that our government should take on itself extraordinary powers, and the authority to regulate. The exigencies of war make it advisable that the whys and wherefores for such regulations should not at a time like this be made public, and while we may be inclined at times to criticize the action taken by our government, it should not hinder us in co-operating to the best of our ability. It is the duty of the government to see that the producers of these necessary commodities receive remuneration for their products in line with production costs.

"We are also presented with another problem, that of the inevitable readjustment that takes place after war, and as far as it is possible for us to do so we should foresee conditions that might arise and as an organized body prepare ourselves to cope with them.

"There are two things we can do; first, in our cheese we have a definite place on the British market. It is inevitable that the increased production, which will be stimulated by the war effort of all producing countries will lead to a condition at the end of the war when possibly production may exceed the demand. If we make a concerted effort during the war to establish a better market for our cheese, it will stand us in good stead when the war is over. While we urge increased production as a war effort we must guard jealously the quality of our product. Any let-down in the quality of our product now will extend over the difficult period when markets will be hard to obtain.

"I am very glad that at this seventh annual meeting we have no need to be ashamed of our organization. After seven years of organized effort we realize that our progress has been slow. We realize that the problems that appeared easy of solution when we first thought of organizing were greater than we anticipated, but while our progress has been slow, it has been substantial and today I consider that our organization has a sound, solid place in the farming community of Ontario, and it is so firmly established it will continue no matter what trouble may arise.

"We have done many things for the betterment of the industry but we have not done all we would like to do. Much remains to be done. We have systematized the selling of our cheese. We are not here to say that the system practised at the present time is the last word in selling methods. It is possible and probable that these methods can and will be improved in the future. We have systematized it in a way and we are in a position to see whether it is the best that can be evolved and can be improved upon. We have established a better feeling from one end of this province to another toward organized effort. We have still opposition from men who have not concerned themselves about organization . . . The fact that the permium obtained through the efforts of your association during the past year has been several times the amount paid into the organization has been a very good answer to our critics.

"We feel also that we need at the present time greater publicity, that information concerning your own particular business be brought home and made available to all the producers of Ontario. We have a plan for distributing this information this year that will be put before the meeting later, and we need not go into it at the present time.

"We have brought the cheese producers of Ontario to the realization of the need of a better outlook for agriculture in general. Farmers today are facing a new set of facts. For generations we were concerned with production only. Different methods of production with different methods of doing business and different conditions in marketing have arrived and farmers have to do something about them. Countries that were formerly importers of our produces are today exporters of the same identical products and this situation has grown until today we have only one market in common with most of the producers of the world, Great Britain."

Mr. Mayberry pointed out that co-operation within commodity groups had become necessary as a result of over-supply and this would be more necessary than ever in the post-war adjustment. Surpluses have a depressing effect, and a surplus of cheese appeared inevitable after the war, especially if it should last some time, and production continue to increase. He stated that the British Minister of Agriculture has suggested that surpluses were best handled by the producers themselves, with the promise that if they were not able to get results things would be regulated for them.

Mr. Mayberry announced that, owing to the funeral of Lord Tweedsmuir which was to take place that afternoon, the programme would be rearranged, and the meeting continue in session until one o'clock, when adjournment would take place until 4:30 p.m.

MR. C. E. LACKNER:

Mr. C. E. Lackner, Director of Dairying for Ontario, in reviewing the cheese session of 1939, stated that rancidity was still the great problem confronting the industry in the making of cheese. His department had been discouraged by the amount of it appearing early last spring and expected a recurrence this coming spring. During last summer this defect almost disappeared, a fact for which his department took little credit as so little is known about the cause of rancidity.

It is known that unsanitary conditions are a determining factor, and as a result instructors must spend more time cleaning up factories, and on farm inspection.

He announced that next season there would be a central station at Kemptville where makers could secure a good starter when needed.

He knew there was a resolution calling on the government to take over all testing without charge to the association but he could not see how this could be done, because if a fight is to be waged against rancid cheese, a defect which cost farmers many thousands of dollars each year, his men must be made available for instruction work. Mr. Lackner suggested the necessity of a testing programme that would give instructors more time for instruction and farm inspection. The Department would not put more men on the work and he felt instruction was suffering as a result of the amount of time his men had to spend testing.

"In asking the department to do all milk testing in cheese factories you are making a mistake," he said.

REPORT OF S. L. JOSS

(Secretary-Treasurer, Ontario Cheese Producers' Association)

My report this year is divided into two parts, viz. (1) the Financial Statements of the Association Limited and the Marketing Board, and a review of the Cheese Market during 1939, and (2) a statistical study of the Dairy Industry, illustrated by charts.

The second part of my report was inspired by the many discussions on agricultural problems that have taken place at farm organization meetings and through the farm press during the past year. I hope that what I have to say regarding our dairy industry will provide some contribution toward solving our difficulties.

THE FINANCIAL STATEMENT AND A REVIEW OF THE CHEESE MARKET DURING 1939.

Copies of the Financial Statements covering the operations of the Association Limited and the Marketing Board were mailed last week to all on our mailing list and no doube practically everyone in the audience received a copy of each.

I will deal first with the Financial Statement of the Association Limited. We did not buy any cheese during the season 1939. The reason for this was that we did not have sufficient funds, due to the fact that we carried over from 1938 a stock of 6,796 boxes at a cost of $90,615.70, which left us a balance of $9,384.30 out of our credit of $100,000. The stock of 6,796 boxes was made up of 4,025 in Canada and 2,771 in the United Kingdom. They were sold between April and November, 1939. In September our financial position was such that we could have made some purchases, but owing to the war situation, other problems demanded our full attention.

Dealing with the Balance Sheet as at December 31, 1939, it will be noted that our total loss is $11,214.34, which is made up by the two items, viz.:

Deficit as at May 31, 1939	$4,546.72
Loss for the seven months ending Dec. 31, 1939	6,667.62

This loss covers our total purchases of cheese, which have been 37,036 boxes, extending over the period from October 1935 to October 1938. It will be noted that under liabilities we show the loss of $11,214.34 as a loan from the Marketing Board.

The Trading and Profit and Loss Statement sets out the returns from sales; the cost of goods sold, and the mechanical costs in carrying the goods, arriving at our loss of $6,667,62 for the seven months period.

Interest	$ 940.84
Bank charges	54.38
Ontario Corporation Tax	20.00
		$ 1,015.22
Loss for the seven months ending Dec. 31, 1939		$ 6,667.62

We will now deal with the Financial Statement of the Marketing Board. In the Balance Sheet you will note that under Liabilities we show a deficit for the year ending December 31, 1939 of $6,781.10, which reduces our surplus to $15,943.05. The loss on our cheese purchases is responsible for the reduction in our surplus account.

Under Revenue and Expense, tolls received amount to $42,220.38, and expense is shown under three headings, viz.:

Office and general	$4,519.90
Administration	9,260.36
Bank charges	23.48

The total, $13,803.74, represents the total amount spent in the administration and operation of the head office.

Under grants to Ontario Cheese Producers' Association to stimulate and increase and improve the marketing of Canadian Cheddar Cheese, the important items are:

Grants to County organizations	$10,554.97
Grants to Cheesemakers' organizations	500.00
Milk testing	11,593.45
Provision for loss on advance to Ontario Cheese Producers' Association Limited	11,213.34
	$33,861.76

As you are aware, the grants to County organizations is 25 per cent. of the tolls collected. The counties are using this money in various ways that represent financial savings to the producers. For instance, cheese boards in many counties are operated through the county organizations; supplies such as milk cans have been purchased through the county organizations; and savings in the form of discounts for cash have been realized. The grants of $500.00 to cheesemakers' organizations were made to these bodies for the purpose of encouraging makers to improve the quality of their cheese by offering them cash prizes for the highest average score for the season. Any improvement in quality is reflected in increased returns to the producer. High scoring cheese was particularly remunerative during the past season owing to the premium paid by the Dominion Government on quality.

The $11,593.45 paid for milk testing is a direct saving to the producers.

I will now endeavour to review the cheese market during 1939. In considering the events of the past season in so far as the marketing of cheese is concerned, I intend to quote from letters received from the United Kingdom as I believe by doing this I can cover the subject clearly and concisely.

The following quotation from a letter received in July from one of the large United Kingdom importers gives a very good idea of the attitude of the British importer at that time.

"Certainly prices were rushed up unduly and far and away above anybody's idea but the position has tamed down during the last seven days, and those who paid around 69/- c.i.f." (approximately 13⅛c f.o.b. factory) "for their June cheese will not be very happy about it." On July 8th the cheese board prices had fallen to approximately 12⅛c.

It was difficult, or practically impossible, to find anyone bullish about the cheese market and I can assure you that the outlook at the beginning of the season, and lasting through until September, was anything but encouraging. It is impossible to say just what the situation would have been if such conditions had continued. The war changed the entire picture, and although there was no clamouring for cheese the first few weeks of the war, the sentiment among buyers was entirely different, as reflected in advanced prices. There were still many uncertainties, however, and buyers generally were hesitant in making any large commitments until the situation had somewhat clarified. In fact it might be stated that some of the largest importing houses in the United Kingdom stayed out of the Canadian market entirely, first because of the outbreak of the war they did not know how far their government would go in the matter of control and, second, the price paid for our cheese had advanced away beyond their ideas.

At this point it will be interesting to review the situation in so far as prices are concerned. The following table serves this purpose very well:

Date	Fixed Price for Cheese in U.K.	Equivalent of Fixed Price F.O.B. Factory	Date	Cheese Board Price
Sept. 1	63/- Landed Terms	10¼c	Sept. 2	No sales
Oct. 3	68/- Landed Terms	11¼c	Oct. 7	13⅜c
Nov. 2	78/- Landed Terms	13c	Nov. 4	14½c

I would like you to note the difference in the fixed price and the price paid at our cheese boards. I would also draw your attention to the fact that at the time of writing the fixed price in the United Kingdom is still 78/- landed terms, yet our cheese has sold on the United Kingdom market as high as 111/6 L.T., and up to 19⅛c on our cheese boards. In explanation of this high price it must be remembered that our cheese has only been under partial control by the British Government, and because of our excellent competitive system of selling we have been in the happy position to take full advantage of this market. I might quote here from a letter received from one of the British importers in connection with the relatively high prices paid for Canadian cheese:

"Quite frankly, it is impossible to sell this cheese to the general trade such as wholesalers and the only people who have been buyers have been the Multiples" (chain stores) "and some people who process cheese. The reason they have been willing to buy above the current maximum landed terms is that they feel it may be better to have cheese which today appears too dear rather than be without cheese altogether."

I would like to say a few words here in connection with the weekly advice I sent to the cheese boards during September regarding the selling of their cheese. It seems that in the opinion of many this advice was nothing but a guess as to what the trend of the market might be. It is quite true that nobody knew definitely that the market was going up, but I might say that I had the privilege of discussing the matter with many people in close touch with conditions, including Government officials and members of the Montreal trade, and also received advice from the United Kingdom. The information I gleaned from these sources was sufficiently definite, in my opinion, to justify my action. Subsequent results proved that my conclusions were correct.

The trade also played a prominent part since the beginning of September and the advice sent out to the cheese boards during those first two weeks by Montreal houses was very much appreciated. Also, the relatively high prices we have been receiving is due in a large measure to their trading acumen. I might say that in making these statements I am not claiming any credit for myself, the Association, or the trade. I am merely stating facts.

The following quotation from one of our United Kingdom correspondents will give you some idea as to the present situation. He wrote on January 8th:

"The position so far as cheese is concerned still remains unchanged. The Ministry of Food took complete control as from November last of all Australian and New Zealand cheese and are allocating to all agents their original brands as and when they arrive. All agents are selling this cheese at prices fixed by the Ministry, which are still as follows:

Australian	All grades, white and coloured, 73/- per cwt. ex-store.
New Zealand	All grades, white and coloured, 75/- per cwt. ex-store.

"There is no question that cheese today throughout the whole country is very short indeed, and this, of course, accounts for the exceptionally high prices that some buyers have paid for the later makes of Canadian.

"We had hoped that early in January the position would be relieved by heavier arrivals from Australia and New Zealand and although the make in these countries is satisfactory, owing to the war, shipments have been considerably delayed and current arrivals have been light. It seems unlikely that there will be any heavier weight of cheese from these countries until the end of this month or the beginning of February.

"Although at the moment there is no intimation thatt the Ministry will take over complete conrol of cheese, it seems probable to us that in the spring they will control all cheese in this country, and although we are guessing, it seems possible that then they will make allocations to number one importers based on an arbitrary period in the past. However, this is not happening at the moment."

I would like you to specially note the New Zealand and Australian prices, viz.: 75/- and 73/- landed terms. As I have already stated, our cheese has sold as high as 110/- c.i.f., or 111/6 landed terms, a difference in our favour of 36/6 over New Zealand and 38/6 over Australian, or 7 to 7½c per pound respectively. The foregoing quotation also states that full control of cheese is likely to be taken over by the British Government in the spring. We have every reason to expect that this will take place, and we can prepare ourselves for a fixed price more in line with what our competitors are receiving.

A STATISTICAL STUDY OF THE DAIRY INDUSTRY, ILLUSTRATED BY CHARTS:

The charts that I am going to discuss with you have been prepared for the purpose of facilitating a statistical study of the dairy industry. All statistics used are on a butterfat basis, and I have dealt with the total fat production, domestic consumption of fat, exports, and average prices of fat in cheese and butter. In addition to the foregoing I have also prepared charts in connection with a "Levy Scheme", which I will enlarge on later.

The correct interpretation of statistics is difficult and from personal experience I find that the only way I can arrive at fairly definite conclusions is to confine myself to some spcific study, without, of course, ignoring factors that have a bearing upon conclusions arrived at from such a body. My method of doing this for the period under review is as follows:

1. I determined from the charts the trend of the industry and the extent of that trend.
2. I determined the trend of the various branches of the industry and their relative statistical positions.
3. I charted prices of butter and cheese for the purpose of comparison, and also to show their positions in relation to production and consumption.
4. I prepared charts in connection with the "Levy Scheme" in order that the workings of the Scheme may be more fully understood.

Before going any further with this paper I would like to state that in considering the matters I will deal with, war conditions did not enter into my calculations.

My first chart is the basis upon which the whole study is founded. It deals statistically with the entire industry separated into its various branches, and showing the total fat production; the total butter production; the total whole milk production; the toal cheese producion; and miscellaneous fat production, for the period 1921 to 1938. The trend of each branch, together with the total production, is shown very clearly and the chart lends itself to a study of each branch of the industry separately.

Dealing with the total fat production, it will be noted that there has been practically a steady increase each year with the exception of 1938. Although the increase has been large, from 345,216,351 lbs. butterfat in 1921, to 601,601,619 lbs. in 1937, equivalent to 82.96 per cent., we would nd by going further back that the rate of increase is much greater. It will be noted that the rate of increase is slowing up. The reason for this, I would say, is due principally, or wholly, to the difficulties in marketing at remunerative prices. There is nothing in the charts to indicate that we are at the saturation point in our production. I would like to emphasize this point as I intend to make it an important factor in my conclusions.

Butter and whole milk production are largely responsible for taking care of our increase in production. The butter trend has followed very closely the trend of the total fat production. Whole milk, however, has shown a more decided up-trend, and it is interesting to note that in 1921 the production of butterfat in the form of whole milk was 72,100,000 lbs. and in 1933 it amounted to 241,925,956 lbs., an increase equivalent to 235.54 per cent. This tremendous increase is due to increased consumption at home, and although it is true the chart from 1928 to 1938 would indicate that we are approaching the saturation point so far as domestic consumption of whole milk is concerned, I do not think it would be wise to come definitely to that conclusion. I will refer again to this question.

The years 1928 to 1936 inclusive were relatively high production years in whole milk, and as I have no reason to believe otherwise, I am assuming that consumption during the period exceeded other years. The point that presents itself to me is that there seems to be a field in the whole milk industry for investigation along the lines of increased consumption.

Regarding cheese, in 1925 we produced 69,438,530 pounds butterfat in the form of cheese, against 39,340,304 pounds in 1934, and apparently we had no more difficulty handling the large quantity than we had with the smaller. Our domestic consumption of cheese has varied very little and other markets except the United Kingdom market had practically no influence on our sales in 1925 and 1926, therefore in spite of the fact that our production during those two years was relatively high, we did not seem to have any difficulty in marketing.

The point I am arriving at is that it might be profitable for us to try to find some means of increasing our production of butterfat in the form of whole milk and cheese. As already stated, there is a possibility of increasing consumption of whole milk on the domestic market. Attention has been drawn to the fact that the United Kingdom market appears to be able to take more of our cheese without affecting price. The domestic consumption of cheese is ridiculously low compared to many other countries, and it seems there is a field here for increased consumption.

The following table shows the production of butterfat in Canada and its distribution during 1921 to 1938 inclusive:

My next chare is complimentary to the last. It has consolidated the various branches into their relative statistical positions in the one line and may serve as an aid to further study. There are several angles that could be taken up from this chart but I will leave them for some future time.

The next chart deals with the average prices of butter and cheese for the period 1921 to 1938 inclusive and also the domestic consumption of butterfat for the same period, the object of the chart being to find out what influence price had upon consumption. We will note that from 1921 to 1929 consumption of butterfat increased from 278,934,813 pounds to 482,134,532 pounds, or 72.49 per cent. This was a period of relatively high prices for butter. From 1930 to 1937 inclusive, a period of relatively low prices for butter, the increase in domestic consumption was 13.63 per cent.

Without going into the matter of spending power of consumers during the period under review, which I fully realize is important in connection with consumption, the chart, (or Table No. 2) would indicate that prices had very little influence upon consumption.

It will be noted that the relative price spread between butter and cheese from 1921 to 1929 inclusive are wider than the period 1930 to 1938 inclusive. It might be suggested that production was responsible for this disparity. For instance, in 1921 to 1929 the production was considerably less than in 1930 to 1938 and not much greater than our domestic requirements, whereas in 1930 to 1938 we had a surplus which found an outlet on the world's market and had a marked influence on price.

If we study cheese prices for the same two periods we find a different story. From 1921 to 1929 it might be said that butter relatively held its own in price with cheese. From 1930 to 1938 butter was behind cheese in relative prices. Our production of cheese in the first period was relatively high and our production of butter relatively low, and vice versa in the second period. There seem to be two conclusions from these observations, namely, that cheese does not altogether set the price of butter — butter surpluses play an important part—and, as has been often said, it would be more profitable to put our surplus milk into cheese.

Demonstrating the power of his "mass murder bomb", Inventor Lester Barlow showed a U.S. naval and military committee that the explosive would be safe to handle. He placed a half pound of it under two big logs with the ABOVE results. A liquid-oxygen-carbon bomb, the inventor claims that his new weapon could spread certain death within a 1,000 foot radius and would keep enemy warships miles from American shores. SEEING DOUBLE

By JANNIS PARKER

Bruce Manning chauffeured for old Miss Alma Martel in summer and played football for alma mater in winter. Now it was summer and although he sprawled carelessly like a starfish on the tiny wharf, he was listening intently for the girl next door.

At last his hungry ears were filled with approaching footsteps.

But it was only her kid sister.

Bruce wilted.

"It's you," he announced bleakly.

The youngster, whose glasses had earned her the nom de gloom, Four-Eyes, bristled and sent a clam shell flying over the bay with a savage kick equaling the famous Manning's

"Who were you expecting—Cleo?" came the devastating contempt of youth.

"Yes," breathed Bruce, inhaling his romance again.

"And who do you think you are—Anthony or Caesar?"

Bruce shuddered.

No solace was derived from being near her sister.

Nothing about the youngster's gingham shapelessness suggested relationship to the divinely proportioned one.

As though she sensed she was being rated lower than the two of clubs, Four-Eyes shuffled off.

"Ask your sister to come down in swimming," Bruce called after her.

"Huh?"

He pleaded desperately.

"Why must you either be so smart or so dumb? Be a good kid and tell your sister I've got to know her."

The youngster's x-ray eyes looked through him.

"You want to know my sister..."

"How you jump at conclusions!"

Four-Eyes was consumed with curiosity

"When did you see her last?"

"Trying to earn a little hush-money?" Bruce asked "When last seen she was wearing a red bathing-suit and a cap covered with red stars. While we're on the subject, what's her name?"

"Her name's Veronica. Vonny."

"Four-Eyes stood grinning owlishly.

"Imagine falling for my sister! Suppose she does like you?"

"Then her money's refunded. Now lope along and tell her romance is waiting."

Bruce hummed his college song, did a few suppressed rah-rahs, and began to wonder what was keeping Vonny.

Finally he trudged home to Miss Martel and the eight cylinders.

The next day it was the same.

And the next. No Vonny.

Bruce lost patience.

Who did she think she was—Cleopatra? He winced, remembering.

Suddenly, the smooth surface of the bay was shattered by something round and covered with stars.

Bruce's heart did a jack-knife.

"Where've you been?" he demanded.

"I've been swimming under water," came the soft-voiced reply, and Cupid pinned Bruce's shoulders to the mat.

He had seen eyes before but not eyes that were greener than grass. He'd seen mouths, but not a mouth that was a bow sending its arrow straight into a guy's heart.

"My sister told me very mysteriously that something to my advantage awaited me on the wharf."

Vonny smiled dazzingly.

"That's why you zoomed along and got here in three days," he snorted.

"I'll bet she said there was a man down here with bands on his teeth who was that way about you."

"She said if you'd tread water till she grew up she'd go for you, herself."

Vonny swam leisurely toward him.

He reached down a long lean arm and every inch of diving proportions was hoisted onto the wharf.

A trifle slim, he reflected, but he liked 'em streamlined.

"How's for a date tonight?" he asked.

"I don't believe so. My parents are funny that way. They think I shouldn't get around till I'm old enough to vote."

"So you haven't sat up in your perambulator, yet," mused Bruce.

Vonny flushed. "One of these days I'll be 18!"

Bruce grinned. One of these years! She couldn't be more than sixteen.

"The parents wouldn't stick a blue nose into a picnic basket, would they?" he asked.

The next morning a flabbergasted grocer muttered, "They must be starvin' that young man down at Martel's," as Bruce in slacks, sneakers, and striped jersey set off with his purchases for the picnic-ground. He was in heaven 'til a tuneless whistle announced the approach of Four-Eyes.

"Be good and don't stop," he implored her.

Vonny will be along any minute."

Four-Eyes was engrossed in whittling.

Her uneven hair straggled dejectedly in her face.

"You're making a big mistake," she warned him. "You've only seen Vonny in a bathing siut. Maybe you'll feel like the girl who stepped out with the life-saver."

Bruce laughed.

"Let's see how fast you can run."

She sighed, and for a sudden, bewildering moment he felt remorse.

There was something rather pathetic and winsome about the kid.

Four-Eyes walked thoughtfully home where she slipped off the gingham shapelessness. Streamlining was revealed.

"Why didn't I suggest a clam-bake so I could have worn my bathing suit?" she moaned.

She whipped off the glasses and looked at her eyes. He had said they were greener than grass. She dipped her little finger into a pot of rouge; emphasized a perfect bow. A sport dress of her mother's, sleeveless, backless, hung in the closet. She tore it from the rack, slipped a foot into high-heeled slippers, pulled a jangle of bracelets over her wrist.

Her hair was the problem. What could she do with the perfectly impossible kid's thatch? Spying a flaming scarf, she seized it with gypsy avidity and bound her head. The green eyes glowed. She resembled an alluring magazine cover.

Bruce look at her, his heart in his eyes; Vonny looked back, her heart in her mouth. He saw the fading mark on her nose that could have been made only by glasses, and didn't know whether to spank her or take her in his arms. What he did know, he told her.

"In about five years I'll have a life-long job lined up for you."

SENTRIES GUARD NEUTRAL SHIPS IN CERTAIN PORTS

Neutral Crews in Virtual 'Quarantine' to Prevent 'Contact With Enemy Agents'

BRITISH START DRIVE

London, Mar. 28 (CP).—Neutral vessels anchored in certain British ports were placed in virtual "quarantine" today as authorities launched a drive to prevent contact between foreign seamen and enemy agents.

Sentries guarded neutral freighters and fishing boats lying off Grimsby and Hull. No members of the crews were permitted to go ashore and no visitors were allowed aboard.

The British Press Association explained that the restrictions were applied "largely to prevent contact with enemy agents."

It was suggested in some quarters that Hull be made a "forbidden" zone for foreigners. It was understood that authorities there are planning to examine carefully the cases of all foreigners living in the district.

Freedom of Foreigners Criticized.

The freedom permitted foreigners was criticized last week by Colonel Henry Walter, Conservative Member of Parliament, who today charged that information regarding sailing is immediately communicated to the enemy. He said a number of vessels have been attacked shortly after weighing anchor from Hull. There have been too many cases, he said, to believe they constituted a mere coincidence.

Hereafter the only persons to be permitted aboard neutral vessels in eastern Scottish ports will be government officials and shipping agents. The restrictions will apply at Leith, Methil, Grangemouth and Burntisland.

Action Faced By War.

The restrictions were described by authorities as "a regrettable measure which the war has forced us to impose."

"It is so much the more regrettable for really neutral ships which regularly arrive at these ports during the war," they added, "but it is inevitable and will apply to all."

The Daily Telegraph had reported that, under a Home Office ordinance, all sailors attached to ships of European neutrals anchoring at Hull were forbidden as of yesterday to go ashore. The Press Association later issued the following explanation:

"The restriction which has been placed on shore leave for foreign seamen arriving at important British ports is not the result of any new order. The ban has been in operation for a considerable time. Even in peace time foreign sailors had to get permission from immigration authorities before they could come ashore and now for 'obvious reasons' that permission is not being granted.

"In the ordinary way seamen are allowed to land for a specified period, usually for shopping in town, but, since the war, control has been tightened at all important ports and shipping centres.

"Access to foreign ships in British ports is also under control. Restrictions are imposed largely to prevent contact with enemy agents."

Election Date In Three Rivers Set for April 22

Three Rivers, Que., March 28.—(CP)—Returning Officer J. A. Villeneuve today set Monday, April 22, as election day in Three Rivers constituency where voting was deferred in the Dominion election Tuesday because of the death of Willie Poisson, the Liberal candidate. Nominations will take place Monday, April 8.

Poisson, who died Monday night, was running against Wilfrid Garlepy, the former member and Independent Liberal candidate, and Leon Methot, National Government Standard-bearer. A fourth candidate, H. A. Poissant, an Independent Liberal, had withdrawn.

Ottawa, March 28.—(CP)—Jules Castonguay, chief electoral officer, said today he was working out the details for taking the Active Service vote in the Federal constituency of Three Rivers where voting has been set for April 22.

While the rest of Canada voted Tuesday in the Dominion elections, voting in Three Rivers was deferred because of the death of a candidate.

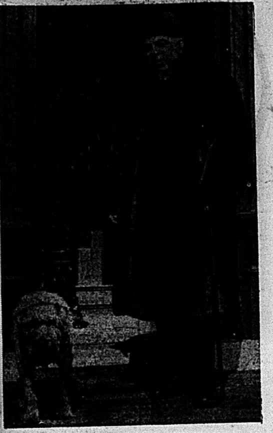
SNEAK THIEVES TAKE BRASS PLATE

Meanest sneak thieves stole a brass door plate from the office of O. R. Butler, local barrister, on East Bridge Street some time last night. The metal mail box of C. E. Argue's adpoining office was also removed and taken away. Detective Fred Izard investigated the thefts and was also informed that entrance had been made into Mr. Argue's adjoining office was also of forcing a door, and a quantity of cigars stolen from the office desk. The brass metal plate, bearing Mr. Butler's name and profession, was some 12 inches square and quite valuable, as it was made of brass.

PRIME MINISTER'S PET ACCOMPANIES HIM TO POLLS FOR HIS FIFTH GENERAL ELECTION

Mr. King arrived at the polling booth in east Ottawa promptly at 11 o'clock and while Pat proceeded to make friends with everybody the prime minister cast his ballot.

Upon leaving the polling booth Mr. King was besieged by a score of children with pages pulled out of their school scribblers for the prime minister's autograph.



Confident of the victory that was shortly afterwards proved to be his, Prime Minister King is pictured here with his Irish Terrier Pat, as he left his Ottawa home to cast his vote in the general election. Pat, in his 17th year, has accompanied his master to the same polling booth in every general election since 1925 and has been the prime minister's companion during five campaigns.

GERMAN PLANE IS SHOT DOWN

Air Ministry Announces Extensive Reconnaissance Flights Over Germany

London, March 28 —(CP)— The Royal Air Force today shot down a German warplane off the northeast coast of Scotland.

The Air Ministry at the same time announced extensive R.A.F. reconnaissance flights over northwest Germany last night in which two planes failed to return. One was shot down by Netherlands planes and the other by the Germans over Heligoland Bight.

A statement by the Air Ministry said:

"During last night aircraft of the R.A.F. carried out extensive reconnaissance flights over northwest Germany.

"Two of these aircraft have failed to return.

"Shortly after mid-day today an enemy aircraft which approached the northeast coast of Scotland was shot down by R.A.F. fighters."

Earlier unofficial advices said R.A.F. fighter planes chased a plane believed to be German which flew over the Shetland Islands, north of Scotland. An air raid alarm was in force for 22 minutes.

Mabel Tessier, Killed in Crash On First Ride In an Airplane

Leamington, Ont., March 28 (CP)—The first airplane ride of Mabel Tessier, 20 year old clerk in a general store at North Ridge near here, was her last. She was killed with two other persons when the Pelee Island mail plane crashed yesterday on Lake Erie ice. Today, her sweetheart, Jim Sherratt, aided in bringing the body to the mainland.

Sherratt, mechanic for the pilot of the plane, Tom Higgins, yielded to pleas of Miss Tessier that she be given a ride in the plane. Next Sunday was to be the last flight to the island this winter so Miss Tessier's ride was arranged for yesterday.

Sherratt spent a night-long vigil on the shore here before going to the crash scene today. He had planned going with Miss Tessier in the plane but arrival of unexpected passengers to Pelee Island prevented him doing so. The plane was on the return trip when it crashed in a blinding snowstorm.

FIRE DAMAGES FARM HOME AT HASTINGS

Hastings, Ont., March 28 (CP)—Damage of $1,000 was caused today at the farm home of Fred Barry when the bedding in an upstairs room took fire.

Donald Gratton, 18 year old farm hand, was credited by Mr. Barry with saving the home from total destruction. He crawled on his stomach to the flaming room and put several pails of water on the bedding. He had to be told to leave the room and save himself.

The fire was believed to have started when bed clothing came into contact with a stove pipe.

MAPLE SYRUP SCARCE

Albany, N.Y., March 28 —(AP)—New York's Easter snows and low spring temperatures promise a scarcer, costlier maple syrup crop this year. At best, the outlook is uncertain at a date when the "harvest" should be well underway.

North country and southeastern New York sugar bush farmers are using skiis, snowshoes, toboggans and horse-drawn sleds to begin tapping trees in woods under several feet of snow, but work has been postponed indefinitely in many sections.

Supper and Fine Program Enjoyed By Large Crowd at Spring Festival

The third annual Spring Festival of St. Michael's parish opened auspiciously Wednesday evening in the Academy Auditorium when a full program of entertainment for old and young was presented to the keen enjoyment of the many visitors who thronged the Academy. All societies of the parish had united their efforts for the success of the three-day event and the attendance, far in advance of opening night last year, was most encouraging to those in charge.

Cafeteria Supper

At five-thirty a cafeteria supper was served under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League. A spacious dining room had been arranged in one half of the auditorium and small tables were grouped about, behind the long serving counter. Spring flowers made an effective setting for the supper and the ladies were most attentive in caring for the guests. The supper was very appetizing and the hostesses were highly complimented on the menu.

Following supper the visitors enjoyed an hour of games, and the many booths were well patronized. The Children of Mary were in charge of a booth at which tickets were sold on a Hope Chest and the lucky winner will be drawn for at the conclusion of the Festival.

Stage Show

At eight o'clock a stage show was presented, opened by selections by the Royal Canadian Air Force Orchestra of twelve pieces, this smart musical unit being present through the kind permission of the Commanding Officer.

Mr. Harold Barrett very capably acted as Master of Ceremonies for the interesting program. Mr. Bruce Sills contributed a splendid accordian solo, and Mr. Edward Brown was heard in a fine solo. Under the direction of Mr. Jack Doran, boys of St. Michael's Academy in white uniforms, with green stripes, took part in a smart athletic demonstration that was enthusiastically applauded. This was followed by a solo tap dance by Margaret Corkell to the music of "The Sidewalks of New York".

A musical quartet from members of St. Michael's Band was given in finished style by the young musicians. Joan Marsh and Joyce Woodhouse in a tap number proved a clever dance team. An unusual number was the piano accordian trio by Bruce Sills and the Pigeon Sisters that received high praise from the audience. A song by the talented soloist George Sheppard and a dance by Mr. and Mrs. Joe Samain concluded a most interesting program, with the R.C.A.F. orchestra contributing the final musical item.

Dancing

The visiting orchestra provided an exceptionally fine musical program for dancing which was enjoyed by a large crowd. The Festival continues tonight and Friday night with cafeteria supper tonight and an entire change of program. On Friday there will be no supper but an interesting program, and dancing will be featured.

ICE, SNOW REMOVED FROM CITY CURBS

Workmen from the city Department of Public Works, have been busied the past two days digging the ice and snow away from the curbs along the streets in the downtown areas in an effort to permit the surface water on the streets to drain away through the storm sewers, City Engineer Chas. A. Mott stated this morning. The continued warm sunshine of yesterday and today saw surface snow melting rapidly and city streets covered with water before the curbs were cleared and the excess muddy water allowed to drain into the sewers. Controversy regarding the possibilities of the Moira River overflowing its banks began as citizens viewed with alarm the in-

AT THE CAPITOL

"Knights of The Range"

As that two-fisted, high-powered outdoor action romance, Zane Grey's "Knights of the Range," exploded this afternoon on the screen of the Capitol theatre, it was clearly evident that Harry Sherman, producer of the popular "Hopalong Cassidy" westerns, has scored another triumph in bringing this type of entertainment to the screen.

Russell "Lucky" Hayden, Victor Jory, Jean Parker, J. Farrell MacDonald and Britt Wood go through their paces, rustling horses and cattle, shooting it out in desperate encounters while mounted on horses and pounding along on thrill-chases.

The fast-paced thread of the story winds into an impressive skein of exciting events as Miss Parker, daughter of a rancher falls in love with a gambler, Victory Jory, then deserts him after her father is killed by a rustler. Shortly after taking over the ranch, she falls in with Hayden, a rustler, and sets about converting him to the side of the law.

Her efforts to reform him and Hayden's encounters with Jory who is determined to win Miss Parker, even if he has to resort to unscrupulous means, leads the story to a tense, taut denouement.

"Society Lawyer," the added attraction gives motion picture fans who like their murder mysteries baffling have something to outguess them. "Society Lawyer," featuring Walter Pidgeon, Virginia Bruce and Leo Carrillo.

This laugh-provoking and thrilling murder mystery is superbly cast both in its major featured players as well as in its supporting cast. Walter Pidgeon was never seen to better advantage than in his role of lawyer-detective in this film. Virginia Bruce sparkles with engaging vivacity and even discloses one of her hidden talents when she sings as a night-club entertainer. And Leo Carrillo is at his topmost form in a warmly human characterization as a reformed gangster.

The story reveals the efforts of Pidgeon, Miss Bruce and Carrillo to save the life of a client of Pidgeon's from the chair on a framed murder charge. Miss Bruce and Carrillo, her night-club employer, assist Pidgeon in finding the real murderer, setting a trap for him in which they themselves threaten to be caught. Carrillo loses his life in seeing the ingenious plan carried through but the murderer is brought to justice.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Blondie on a Budget"

The new "Blondie" laugh hit is here, "Blondie on a Budget" is now playing at the McCarthy theatre, with the entire Bumstead family again bringing down the rafters with their unequalled quality of humor. Penny Singleton, is again "Blondie" who is the only one capable so it seems of looking after the family welfare. Arthur Lake, is "Dagwood" a good soul but a man without a mind of his own, Larry Simms, or Baby Dumpling the darling of his parents (mischief maker to you) and Daisy, the pooch all are back to bring you one of the best feature-comedy presentations they have ever appeared in. Rita Hayworth a new member of the supporting cast is a real pleasant surprise package and talk about Mae West if you like, but just wait until you see her do her vamping, it's got "Oomph" folks! It's got "Oomph."

"The Man From Sundown"

Everyone is also going to be delighted with the co-feature presentation at the McCarthy theatre, Charles Starrett in "The Man From Sundown" an exciting outdoor adventure story of early Texas Ranger days. Iris Meredith and the Sons of the Pioneers, popular radio singers have important featured roles opposite Charles Starrett who always is dependable for bringing the kind of action and adventure to the screen which is wholesome entertainment for every member of the family.

"The Shadow"

You do not have to wait any longer to see "The Shadow" famous radio and magazine hero, he also is on the screen and the McCarthy theatre takes pleasure in announcing that the first in the weekly series that is to be presented is now on the screen in addition to "Blondie on a Budget" and "Man From Sundown." "The Shadow" is the greatest "Crime Does not Pay" chapter play ever filmed, be sure and enjoy its thrills and mystery—commence now, follow "The Shadow" which features Victor Jory, in the title role and—as the Black Tiger."

British Ministers In East Europe Called to London

London, March 28—(CP)— The British Ambassador to Turkey and the Ministers to Bulgaria, Greece, Rumania, Hungary and Yugoslavia have been called to London for consultation with Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax.

The move, which was interpreted as foreshadowing a British diplomatic offensive in the Balkans, was announced by the Foreign News Department as coming from "authoritative" sources.

The Envoys are expected to arrive in England early next month when Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador to Italy, also is expected in London.

Authoritative sources said "the only thing possible to infer at the moment" from the announcement is that Lord Halifax wishes to confer with men on the spot about German and Russian "economic and diplomatic offensives in the Balkans."

They asserted it is impossible to enlarge on the statement at the present time.

Finland to Hold Olympics This Summer 'If World Proves Ready to Uphold Olympic Ideals'

But 'Final Decision is Not Up to Finns,' Says Chairman Frenkell,' Everything Depends on International Situation in Near Future'—Decision Will be Made in April

Helsinki, March 28 (AP)—Erik Von Frenckell, chairman of the Helsinki Olympic Games Committee, said today Finland would hold the Olympic Games this summer "if the world at large gave proof that it is ready to uphold the Olympic ideal of peace and brotherhood among nations."

"The final decision is not up to the Finns," he said. "Everything depends on the international situation in the near future."

Von Frenckell said he knew of no rule that the organizing committee must announce its final decision by April 1.

New York, March 28 (AP) —Jas. F. Simms, assistant secretary of the American Olympic Committee, announced today Finland had advised it would decide definitely some time in April whether it would hold the Olympic Games.

Simms added that, pending word from the Finns, Avery Brundage, president of the American Olympic Committee, had asked postponement of the April 10 meeting in Buenos Aires to consider holding of Olympic Games for the western hemisphere.

SYRUP MAKERS BUSY IN BUSH

Season Week Later Than Last Year but Run Not Expected to be Affected

The first string of frosty nights, followed by bright warm days, occurring in the month of March always starts the sap coursing upward through the trunks of the maples and likewise marks the beginning of another syrup season. Yesterday, bright and mild was followed by a hoar frost last night, and today, continuing bright and warm, has sent the farmers to the sugar-bush armed with buckets, spiles, and other syrup-making equipment for the start of another season of bustling activity.

Syrup appeared on the Belleville market on Saturday, March 25th., last year, but even granting favorable conditions, Bellevillians will have to wait almost one week longer this year before tasting syrup of the current season. An exceptionally early Easter season has sort of upset the usual order of things this year as Easter Sunday has been always considered by veteran sugar makers as marking the best sap run of the season. This year, however, thoughts were far from the sugar bush on Easter Sunday, as nature pulled a fast one and upset all traditional custom pertaining to syrup making.

Earl 'Sonny' Green Reinstated by Softball Association

Guelph, Ont., March 28 (CP) — Two reinstatements were announced here today by the Ontario Amateur Softball Association.

Player Earl Green, of Belleville, who was suspended last fall for an alleged attack on an umpire during an eastern Ontario playoff game with Peterborough, has been placed in good standing again.

Gordon Gregory, of London, non-playing Manager of the Manor Park Club, who was suspended in 1938 along with seven players who were alleged to have given fictitious addresses on their playing certificates, has also been reinstated. The players were all restored to good standing last fall, when Gregory took full responsibility for the offense.

Ontario Sports Federation has been advised of the reinstatement, and asked to concur in the reinstatements.

DISCLOSES GUNMEN PLANNED TO KILL TWO PRIZE INFORMERS

New York, March 28—(AP) — District Attorney William O'Dwyer disclosed today that gunmen seeking to silence two prize informers in the investigation of Murder, Inc., intended to assassinate them in their Manhattan hotel hideaway.

The Kings County prosecutor said the mobsters had taken a room directly across the courtyard from the quarters where Abraham (Pretty Boy) Levine and Tony (The Duke) Maffetore had been sequestered for questioning, and planned to shoot them through the window.

O'Dwyer withheld further details of the plot, adding only that Levine and Maffetore, whose waggin tongues originally "broke" the case against the death-on-the dotted-line syndicate, had been removed to another hide-away.

In addition, it said, 44 German planes were reported so badly damaged they probably failed to reach home.

The news agency said its figures do not include warplanes shot down by French and Polish forces.

Aldershot, England, March 28 (C.P.)—Dominions Secretary Anthony Eden today inspected an anti-tank battery of New Zealanders in training here. Recalling his recent visit to New Zealand troops in Egypt, he said: "I know they would want me to give you a message of good cheer. I can assure you that they look as fit and cheerful as you do."

Stockholm, March 28 (AP)—Sweden established a special commission today to administer all matters pertaining to supply and manufacture of munitions as part of the national defence program.

Tokyo, March 28 (AP)—A Domei, Japanese news agency, report from Hsinking, capital of Manchoukuo, said that Russian warplanes had made two separate reconnoitring flights over Eastern Manchoukuo near the border with Siberia about 100 miles north of Possiet Bay.

The Hague, March 28 (AP) —G. W. F. Van Heeven, formerly a high official in the Netherlands ministry of economic affairs, was sentenced today to two years and eight months in prison for espionage for Germany. His wife was sentenced to 18 months and W. B. J. Buve, a former employee of the ministry, to two years.

Belfast, Northern Ireland, Mar. 28 (CP)—Leslie Burgin, Minister of Supply, told a luncheon club audience today that the Harland and Wolff shipyard in Belfast, largest in the world, is going at full capacity with a ship under construction in "every slip in the yard."

Bristol, England, March 28 (CP)—A young customs employee, Phillip Webb, 22, today told the conscientious objectors' tribunal here that "the recent policy of the British government has made me ashamed of being an Englishman."

"I regard this war," said Webb, "as either a suicide pact in which Germany is an unwilling partner or deliberate murder in which Britain as the murderer will surely pay the price for her sins.' The tribunal reserved decision.

Hong Kong, March 28 (AP)—Drowning of 700 Japanese soldiers who attempted to cross the Ula River in a counter offensive against the city of Wuyuan in Suiyuan province was reported today by the Central News, official Chinese agency.

The 700 drownings resulted from sinking of several boats by Chinese fire, the agency reported, adding that a renegade Chinese divisional commander and four of his Japanese advisers had been captured.

London, March 28 (C.P.-Reuters)—The Australian parliament will receive the new budget on April 17, it was announced here today. Considerable increases in income and other taxes are expected and a loan may be floated in London to cover Australian war expenditures.

Sydney, Australia, March 28 (C.P. Reuters)—Five thousand men of the Second Australian Imperial force marched through the streets of Sydney. About 100 mechanized units were included in the parade.

Hong Kong, March 28 (AP)—Chinese pirates armed with swords, and halberds were reported today to have boarded the Panama freighter San Antonio, 6,000 tons, as she lay aground on the Kwangtung province coast of China but fled at the approach of Japanese warships.

Domei, Japanese news agency, said the warship attempted to refloat the freighter in heavy seas after the pirates escaped, without booty, in six junks.

Rome, March 28 (AP)—Count Paul Teleki, Hungary's premier, conferred with Pope Pius XII today during a private audience. The meeting concluded a week's visit to Rome during which Teleki agreed anew with Premier Mussolini to help keep war out of southeastern Europe.

North Bay, Ont., March 28—(CP)—Word reached here today of the death of premature triplets in the Red Cross Hospital at Callander Tuesday night.

The triplets were born to Mrs. Herbert Yerkie of Latchford. One was born dead and the others died soon after birth despite efforts of Dr. R. H. Dillane of Powassan. The babies were premature by four months and weighed a total of six pounds.

Two of the triplets were male, the other, female. Mrs. Yerkie, 25, is confined to hospital and is "doing well."

FORMER WIFE OF COL. JOHN J. ASTOR DIES IN FLORIDA

Heart Attack Ends Career of Socially Prominent Woman

MARRIED 3 TIMES

Palm Beach, Fla., Mar. 28 (AP).—Socially prominent Mrs. Adeline Force Astor Dick Fiermonte, whose marriage to an Italian prize fighter in 1933 created a sensation, died last night of heart attack.

Mrs. Fiermonte's first husband was Col. John Jacob Astor, who was lost in the Titanic sinking of 1912. She bore a son by him, named John Jacob Astor in August, 1912.

In 1916, Mrs. Astor was married to William K. Dick, multi-millionaire New York banker. This union ended in divorce in 1933.

She was married to Enzo Fiermonte, an Italian pugilist, in November, 1933, the marriage ceremony taking place in a New York hospital, where she was a patient.

They were divorced in Florida in June, 1938, and Mrs. Fiermonte agreed to a $17,000 settlement on her fomer boxer-husband. At that time Fiermonte was in Europe.

Obtained Nevada Divorce.

Fiermonte was 26 and his wife 40. He had obtained a Nevada divorce after his wife in Rome had refused to divorce him.

Mrs. Fiermonte's first two marriages both were sensational. Her first husband was old enoug hto be her father and by the terms of his divorce by his first wife, Mrs. Ava Willing Astor, had been forbidden to marry again.

At the time, Mrs. Fiermonte—she was Miss Madeleine Force—had been only recently graduated from a New York finishing school. They were married at Astor's home at Newport, R.I.

Astor's will left her a $5,000,000 trust fund, to be hers so long as she remained his widow.

Mrs. Fiermonte and her second husband were childhood friends in Brooklyn. His fortune, before their marriage, was estimated at $4,500,000.

Mrs. Fiermonte had two children by Dick, William Jr., and J. H. Dick.

SUMNER WELLES RETURNS HOME

"Fact-Finding" Delegate of President Refuses to Comment on Trip Abroad

New York, March 28—(AP)—Sumner Welles, sent to Europe on a fact-fniding tour by President Roosevelt, returned today to report in person to the chief executive on conditions in that war-torn continent. Affable, but silent as usual on his highly confidential mission, Welles was to entrain immediately for Washington.

The Under-Secretary of State, guarding closely the tremendously important information gathered in conferences in Italy, Germany, France and Great Britain, arrived in the liner Conte Di Savoia.

These conferences contributed the basic facts in his possession:

An hour and a half talk with Chancellor Hitler. It had been nearly two years since an American ambassador had last seen him. A discussion with Premier Mussolini in Rome.; long and private discussions with former Premier Daladier in Paris and with Prime Minister Chamberlain in London.

Welles' first words to newspapermen who went down the bay to meet him were:

"I can give you some real news."

Some 25 reporters waited expectantly.

Smiling, Welles continued, "I am mighty glad to see you, and I am glad to be home."

His answer to virtually every question was, however: "No comment."

NEUTRAL NATIONS

ular and efficient functioning of the British patrol of the seas.

"They must not, of course, depart from their neutrality to the extent of active collaboration, nor are they asked to do so.

"But they have every reason of self-interest to view the actions of British officers in the most favorable light, and while steadfastly doing their legal duty as neutrals, to refrain from straining the law to unnecessary hindrance of operations from which they benefit so greatly.

"A fair fighter in mortal combat with a foul fighter is already at a sufficient disadvantage: and there must be a limit to the further handicap he imposes on himself by deference to the susceptibilities of the spectators."

Germany Watchful

Berlin, March 28—(AP)—The Allies' attitude toward the neutrality of Norway and Denmark, whose territorial waters provide Germany with a sea-lane from the north, is being watched with "the most profound attention," authorized German spokesmen declared today.

They said the Reich is reckoning with the possibility the western powers may "assume the right to police territorial waters" of the northern nations, in view of a statement issued in Paris last night.

(A semi-official French statement outlining the Allied attitude toward neutrals made a sharp distinction between active and passive neutral nations. It said recent activity of British warships off Jutland was due to "the passive attitude" of "certain neutral governments" permitting Germany to carry on a regular "war traffic." The Allies intend to police "doubtful" neutral waters, the statement declared.)

The German press echoed a statement today in Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter that the western powers "probably still hope in this wise, after the failure of intrigues in Finland, to make a battlefield of the whole north."

The press insisted the purpose of the Allies' interest in neutrals is to gain means for "blocking legitimate German imports of ores from the northern states and ultimately obtaining new bases for the British fleet."

STEAL SLEEPING POWDERS

Atlantic City, N.J., Mar. 28 (AP).—Detective Captain George Scheerer reported thieves had taken "fifty pounds of sleeping powders" from a loading platform. Captain Scheerer said the drugs, consigned to the county hospital in Northfield, were sufficient to "put half of Atlantic City (pop. 58,000) to sleep."

BLIND FATHER, SOLDIER SON MEET

Young Man Who Left England 16 Years Ago Discovers He's 7 Years Older Than He Thought

London, March 28—(CP Cable)—Samuel Hailey of Montreal is on leave from Aldershot in London today with his blind, 60-year-old father, whom he discovered as a result of a broadcast plea for information. It is their first reunion since the son went to Canada 16 years ago and lost touch with his family.

The father, when they met, said: "Why, son, I can see you. My sight has gone but nothing can deceive me. Sammy, you're my lost boy."

Sammy is in a bit of a spot, though. He has learned he is seven years older than he thought. He told his married sister, Mrs. Mary Sweeney:

"I'm in a mess now. My girl friend over in Montreal thinks I'm 22. Now father tells me I am 29. What will she say?

"I must write and tell her. She's a French-Canadian. I call her 'Baby' and she's just swell. It's five years since we started walking out together. I guess she'll take the right sort of view of this age business. Baby's only 18."

Hailey, attached to the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps, said he knew it would mean a lot to his father if he could see him.

"Now that I've found him after a week's search and inquiry, I shall not lose touch with him again," he said.

CANADA HONORS POLISH CITIZENS

2 Ambulances Presented by Mr. R. B. Bennett for Red Cross to Polish Ambassador

By HAROLD FAIR
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, March 28—(CP Cable)—Canada paid tribute to her Polish citizens today when Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, on behalf of the Canadian Red Cross, presented Count Edward Raczynski, Polish Ambassador to Great Britain, with two olive-green ambulances as "a token of our continued sympathy."

The ceremony was held at the Polish Embassy in the presence of Lord Moyne, head of the Polish Relief Committee, and other guests, after a Polish priest had blessed the ambulances outside.

Bearing a silver Polish eagle on a red shield, the unit will be under the command of Miss Pat Tuckett of Toronto and will be used with the Polish Legion in France.

Miss Tuckett, who was a nurse in the first Great War, serving in the hospital ship Egypt at the Dardanelles, was "caught in the jam" here when war broke out. She volunteered for any service the Red Cross desired and went to Glasgow where she cared for survivors of the torpedoed, Montreal-bound liner Athenia. She is a graduate of Toronto Western Hospital.

Mr. Bennett said the Canadian Red Cross realized it was under some obligation to assist the Poles because Canada had a number of "very fine" Polish citizens. The Ambassador expressed thanks for the gift.

Each ambulance takes four stretchers. The Red Cross paid for the equipment as well as for a year's maintenance. It is possible that Miss Tuckett will be joined by a second Canadian, yet to be named.

Bay of Quinte Conference Givings Reach $118,944

Toronto, March 28 (CP)—Givings of pastoral charges and individuals to the Missionary and Maintenance Fund of the United Church of Canada totalled $1,466,300, it is indicated in a preliminary statement from the Treasury Department, released today. Certain deferred gifts are expected in the next month or so which, it is believed, will make up a sum sufficient to balance expenditures, which totalled $1,477,453 during the past year.

There are 11 conferences in Canada. The Toronto conference gave $345,140; Montreal and Ottawa, $211,891; Bay of Quinte, $118,944; Hamilton, $179,443, and London, $163,226.

Two Members of the Crew Thrown Into Icy Waters by Shock of Collision Picked Up by Freighter—Ship Did Not Dock and it is Believed Was Not Seriously Damaged

(By Jack Tracy, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, March 29—(CP)—Nine men, pilots and apprentice pilots, were drowned today in outer Halifax harbor when their pilot schooner was rammed by an inbound freighter and sent plunging to the bottom within a few minutes.

Three companions aboard the vessel, of which not the slightest trace was found after the midnight collision, were saved. Three others had just put off in a tender to board the freighter. They also were picked up.

Two survivors were taken to hospital and the others, undaunted by the fate of their comrades, went back to work on a relief ship three hours after the sinking.

The dead were pilots Carl and Lorne Dempsey, brothers; James Dempsey, their first cousin; Claude Martin, James Renner, Lionel Pel-

RUSSIAN SHIPS ARE BEING TURNED OVER TO FRENCH

Two Freighters Seized for Contraband Released to French for 'Administrative Reasons'

LOADED WITH METALS

London, March 29—(CP)—The Ministry of Economic Warfare announced today that two Soviet ships seized in far eastern waters on suspicion of carrying contraband destined for Germany are being turned over to French authorities "for administrative reasons."

The ships are the Selenga, 2,492 tons, and the Vladimir Mayakovsky, 2,261 tons. Both had been taken into the port of Hong Kong.

Although Reuters News Agency had reported from Hong Kong the release of the Selenga, the official statement said neither of the two vessels had been freed.

Both freighters had been stopped while en route to Vladivostok, Russian Pacific port, because it was suspected they were carrying cargoes for Germany. The Selenga carried tin, antimony and wolfram and the Vladimir Mayakovsky was reported laden with copper from the United States and more metal from Mexico.

Ivan Maisky, Soviet ambassador here, had protested to Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax on Wednesday against the detention of the two vessels. He argued that they were government-owned and therefore not subject to contraband control. This thesis was rejected by the British, however.

The announcement said:

"The Soviet ships Selenga and

WANG CHING-WEI IS DENOUNCED BY PRESIDENT LIN SEN

Chungking, March 29—(CP — Havas)—Lin Sen, President of the Chinese Republic, in a broadcast today denounced Wang Ching-Wei, President-Designate of the "legitimate" Chinese Government, who is to take office in Nanking tomorrow. Wang is a traitor, Lin charged, who was sponsored by Japanese only because they failed to conquer China by force of arms.

"The aggressor, in fact, is nearly exhausted, while China is progressively organizing its resistance and is now stronger than ever," Lin said.

Air interchange! As long as one place on the earth is warmer than some other place, there will be wind. Air blows from the colder to the warmer place at the surface, and is the reverse direction aloft. Warm air is raised up by the colder, heavier air, hence there are upward currents. Downward currents are also maintained. These vertical currents are not generally thought of as very strong, but their speeds are very high, high enough to carry up heavy hailstones in the case of thunderstorms, and from 100 to 200 miles an hour in the case of some tornadoes. Therefore the winds and vertical currents are the means for a very thorough interchange of air from one place to another.

Amsterdam Report Says Ships Being Loaded in Dutch East Indies

By GUY RHOADES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Two news items, one from London, the other from Amsterdam, today shifted attention of war observers from Europe to the Far East where Russia is helping Germany's efforts to circumvent the Allied blockade.

The Amsterdam story said at least twenty German merchantmen, refugees in the Netherlands East Indies since the war started, were loading and preparing for an apparent attempt to slip through the blockade, presumably for Vladivostok where their cargoes could be transhipped and sent overland to Germany.

In London the Ministry of Economic warfare announced it was turning over to French authorities "for administrative reasons" two Russian freighters it had been holding at Hong Kong on suspicion they were carrying contraband destined for Germany.

WELLES' FINDINGS LIKELY TO REMAIN SECRET FOR TIME

The President, Hull and Welles Hold Conference on Confidential Report on European Conditions

PRESS CONFIDENCE

Washington, March 29—(AP) — President Roosevelt scheduled another conference today with Sumner Welles and State Secretary Cordell Hull to discuss European conditions as Welles found them on a visit to the British, French, Italian and German capitals.

The White House indicated that the rigid rule of secrecy announced during the Roosevelt-Welles-Hull meeting yesterday still would apply unless Mr. Roosevelt consented to discuss the conversations at a press conference late today.

Welles, Under-Secretary of State, and Hull were on the Presidential calling list for noon, EST.

The President arranged to preside at a cabinet meeting after that and then see the press.

Strongest indication that the information given the President would remain secret was a statement by Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's Secretary, to reporters. Early said:—

"I've been authorized to offer you a word of friendly advice, to wit: not to write yourselves out on the end of a limb or to attribute what you assume the President, Mr. Hull and Mr. Welles are discussing to any allegedly authorized or unimpeachable or reliable sources, or to friends close to the President or to the Secretary of State or the Undersecretary of State."

Keystone Cops, on Comeback Trail, Believe There is a Place for Slapstick

Hollywood, March 29 —(AP) — "We think folks still like slapstick. We sure hope we're guessing right," says Chester Conklin, one of the funniest men the screen has ever seen.

As he spoke three blue-uniformed figures jumped to their feet. In the process one of them was knocked flat on his face. The Keystone Kops, hot on the comeback trail, went through a final rehearsal with the same enthusiasm as of old.

Twenty-eight years ago, Conklin was Chief of the Keystone Kops. He had a force of all shapes and sizes—Hank Mann with the dutch bob, red-nosed Al St. John, Snub-Pollard with the drooping mustache, cross-eyed Ben Turpin, moon-faced Edgar Kennedy, gangling Slim Summerville.

They became, under Mack Sennett, ex-Canadian blacksmith, kings of the flicks and ruled until Sennett's bathing beauties took over with Gloria Swanson among them.

They're not youngsters any more, but they go through the motions with a vigor that belies their years. (Conklin is 54, Mann 52, Pollard 48, St. John 47).

Allied Front Firmer After Supreme Council Meeting Says the Mail

London, March 29—(CP)—Great Britain and France, newly bound in a firmer alliance for war and peace were determined today to seize the initiative from Germany on every front, particularly in the related fields of diplomacy and economic strangulation.

The war of bombs and bullets continued on the comparatively minor scale of aerial duels and attacks on shipping but informed quarters said the Allied Supreme War Council planned more frequent sessions similar to that of yesterday.

First fruit of the conference came in the summoning home for consultations of the British and French envoys in southeastern Europe, foreshadowing a strong drive for diplomatic ascendancy over Germany in the vital Balkan area.

The consultations are scheduled for early April, and Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador to Italy, is due to attend.

A friend of Germany, Italy is keenly interested on her own account in the Balkans, which British observers see as the next "double spot."

These observers said the Allies did not intend to be caught napping by any German attempt to thwart the blockade of diplomatic penetrations, particularly in Rumania.

Scandinavia Discussed

Allied attention also was directed toward Scandinavia—Germany's northern door—and toward means of dealing with Soviet Russia. With Spring thaws in the Baltic, Germany was believed likely to try to increase her imports via Scandinavian routes. The Allies are concerned over reports that German freighters are nullifying the far-flung blockade by edging down the Norwegian coast regularly.

Britain is sharpening her aerial weapons to help the fleet tighten its blockade of this zone.

Both Britain and France were described as inclined to preserve diplomatic relations with Russia on at least the present status, despite a French squabble over the Soviet Ambassador and British detention of Russian ships in the Pacific.

TRAIN DOCTORS TO LOOK AFTER R.C.A.F. TROOPS

Will be Equipped to Meet Health Problems Created by High Altitudes

20 ALREADY SIGNED

Ottawa, March 29—(CP)—Men in white from quiet hospital wards are being trained here to look after the health of the empire's men in blue, who fly the roaring battle planes.

They are doctors of the first medical unit to be attached to the Royal Canadian Air Force and the British Commonwealth Air Training Plan. Their instruction will equip them to meet health problems created by high altitudes and the terrific speed of new fighting aircraft.

Twenty young medicos from many parts of Canada will study a special syllabus of aviation medicine to help maintain physical well-being of the airmen of Canada and the other dominions who will train in this country.

The Air Force medical unit remains connected with the Royal Canadian Army Medical Corps but

HOUSEMEN HAVE TALKING POINT

Advocate Reduction in Aircraft Defence Program After Sale to Allies Ratified

Washington, March 29—(AP)—Release of the most advanced type of United States war planes to the Allies gave Congressmen a talking point today in advocating a reduction in the big aircraft defence program.

The fact that both army and navy espoused the decision to give France and Britain the right-of-way in aviation purchases was seized upon by some as proof that necessity no longer existed for speedy construction of a huge United States air armada.

Senator Bennet Clark (Dem.-Missouri) said he thought the two fighting services had "stated themselves clear out of court" on the subject of large immediate expenditures.

Barring a change of policy, he added, he and others would demand appropriation reductions to cover only the number of planes which experts estimate would be delivered to the army and navy by July 1, 1941.

The army's original $300,000,000 program was to expand the air corps to 5,500 planes by that date, but General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, said yesterday the objective might be reduced to 3,500 because allied buying would obviate the immediate need for accumulating a reserve. He looked for a possible saving of $27,000,000 for the next year.

MAJORITY REDUCED

Ottawa, March 29—(CP)—With smoke of the Dominion election fight clearing away, the capital settled down today to preparations for the wartime session of the new parliament. Final returns trickled in to upset elections in some constituencies and the National Government Party reverted to its former name of National Conservative.

The huge Liberal following in the Commons was reduced from 178 to 176 last night when belated turn-overs in two seats elected one Conservative candidate, on the basis of civilian returns, and put another in the doubtful list.

Percy Black, Conservative, who ran as a National Government candidate, gained victory over his Liberal opponent, K. J. Cochrane, in Cumberland, N.S., by margin of one vote.

NAZIS FEEL BLOCKADE

London Naval Authorities Expressed Hope That Reports That Germans Are Coming Out Are True

Paris, Mar. 29 (CP-Havas). — Crediting his information to Copenhagen sources, Henry Bidou, military writer for L'Intransigeant, reported today that a fleet of German destroyers is en route to give battle to British naval units lying in wait off the Norwegian coast for German freighters. The writer said an engagement seemed "inevitable".

Bidou, emphasizing Germany's dependency on Scandinavian ore, said Berlin is alarmed by the British blockade along the Norwegian coast. Two German freighters already have been torpedoed, he pointed out, and another ran aground and was wrecked while attempting to hug the coast.

"Information from Copenhagen says that the German Admiralty has sent destroyers to clear these dangerous waters," he added. "Under these conditions a meeting in force between the advance units of the high seas fleets seems inevitable."

London, Mar. 29 (CP).—Danish reports of German fleet movements in the Skagerrak, which divides Denmark and Norway, lack confirmation here, but naval authorities expressed hope today that they are true.

Alleged Mix-up of Babies in Hospital Brings Suit From Distracted Mother

Los Angeles, March 29—(AP) — Eighteen months after she gave birth to a son in a hospital here, Mrs. Frances Mahoney, 19, declares she still does not know which of three infants she claims were given her to nurse is her own.

She is suing the Lutherna Hospital Society of Southern California for $16,000 damages as a result of the alleged baby mix-up.

Between outbursts of sobs that finally caused a court recess, Mrs. Mahoney testified:

On Sept. 13, 1938, the day following the birth of her child, a nurse brought her a light complexioned baby with a large mouth "like Joe E. Brown's."

Later that day she was given another baby of dark complexion and a small mouth. The nurse explaine dthat infants at that age change rapidly. She nursed that baby for 10 days.

On the day of her departure from the hospital, she was given "a different baby—a baby that had carrot-colored hair."

"I don't want it," the girl-mother screamed. "Bring my baby back."

She was given sedatives to keep her quiet and later was strapped in bed.

Upon leaving the hospital, Mrs. Mahoney took the red-haired baby but she still does not know if it actually is her own. Resultant mental anguish caused her to institute the suit.

CANADIAN TROOPS INSPECTED UNDER FIELD CONDITIONS

General Gamelin and Sir Edmund Ironsides Were the Inspecting Officers

SPEAKS IN FRENCH

By SAM ROBERTSON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Aldershot, England, Mar. 29 (CP).—Combat units of the First Division of the Canadian Active Service Force were inspected at field manoeuvres under wartime conditions and on the parade square today by Gneral Gamelin, Commander-in-chief of the Allied armies, and General Sir Edmund Ironside, Chief of the Imperial General Staff.

In the martial swing of such airs as the "Maple Leafs" and the British Grenadiers, they reviewed the first and second field regiments of the Royal Canadian Artillery and the Royal 22nd Regiment on the drill square. They also plodded over a wooded hillside that had been converted into a veritable no man's land by machine-gun fighters of the Toronto Scottish.

The French general spoke in his native tongue to the French Canadians of the Royal 22nd and left with them a message for the whole division.

"When finally you leave France to return to your homes," he said into a microphone that boomed his voice over the broad parade grounds, "you will leave as men who have assured freedom and peace to the whole world."

SNOW-PACKED ROADS HOLD UP BALLOT-BOXES

Hamilton, Ont., Mar. 29 (CP).—With roads in Haldimand County still packde fence-high with snow, some not even being negotiable by sleighs, eight ballot boxes used in Tuesday's election today had yet to reach Peter Gloyd, returning officer. Reached by telephone today, Mr. Gloyd said he expected the missing ballot boxes would be delivered to him sometime before nightfall. He said there was no reason to expect any change in his estimated result of Wednesday, when he reported that Mark Senn, National Government candidate appeared to have a majority of 769 over Dr. N. B. Macaulay, Liberal.

Re-election of Mr. Senn had been determined from reports phoned to Mr. Gloyd by Deputy Returning Officers who, because of the condition of roads, had been unable to deliver their ballot boxes.

Air interchange! As long as one place on the earth is warmer than some other place, there will be wind. Air blows from the colder to the warmer place at the surface, and is the reverse direction aloft. Warm air is raised up by the colder, heavier air, hence there are upward currents. Downward currents are also maintained. These vertical currents are not generally thought of as very strong, but their speeds are very high, high enough to carry up heavy hailstones in the case of thunderstorms, and from 100 to 200 miles an hour in the case of some tornadoes. Therefore the winds and vertical currents are the means for a very thorough interchange of air from one place to another.

RUSSIAN SHIPS ARE BEING TURNED OVER TO FRENCH

Two Freighters Seized for Contraband Released to French for 'Administrative Reasons'

LOADED WITH METALS

London, March 29—(CP)—The Ministry of Economic Warfare announced today that two Soviet ships seized in far eastern waters on suspicion of carrying contraband destined for Germany are being turned over to French authorities "for administrative reasons."

The ships are the Selenga, 2,492 tons, and the Vladimir Mayakovsky, 2,261 tons. Both had been taken into the port of Hong Kong.

Although Reuters News Agency had reported from Hong Kong the release of the Selenga, the official statement said neither of the two vessels had been freed.

Both freighters had been stopped while en route to Vladivostok, Russian Pacific port, because it was suspected they were carrying cargoes for Germany. The Selenga carried tin, antimony and wolfram and the Vladimir Mayakovsky was reported laden with copper from the United States and more metal from Mexico.

Ivan Maisky, Soviet ambassador here, had protested to Foreign Secretary Lord Halifax on Wednesday against the detention of the two vessels. He argued that they were government-owned and therefore not subject to contraband control. This thesis was rejected by the British, however.

The announcement said:

"The Soviet ships Selenga and

WANG CHING-WEI IS DENOUNCED BY PRESIDENT LIN SEN

Chungking, March 29—(CP — Havas)—Lin Sen, President of the Chinese Republic, in a broadcast today denounced Wang Ching-Wei, President-Designate of the "legitimate" Chinese Government, who is to take office in Nanking tomorrow. Wang is a traitor, Lin charged, who was sponsored by Japanese only because they failed to conquer China by force of arms.

"The aggressor, in fact, is nearly exhausted, while China is progressively organizing its resistance and is now stronger than ever," Lin said.

Keystone Cops, on Comeback Trail, Believe There is a Place for Slapstick

Hollywood, March 29 —(AP) — "We think folks still like slapstick. We sure hope we're guessing right," says Chester Conklin, one of the funniest men the screen has ever seen.

As he spoke three blue-uniformed figures jumped to their feet. In the process one of them was knocked flat on his face. The Keystone Kops, hot on the comeback trail, went through a final rehearsal with the same enthusiasm as of old.

Twenty-eight years ago, Conklin was Chief of the Keystone Kops. He had a force of all shapes and sizes—Hank Mann with the dutch bob, red-nosed Al St. John, Snub Pollard with the drooping mustache, cross-eyed Ben Turpin, moon-faced Edgar Kennedy, gangling Slim Summerville.

They became, under Mack Sennett, ex-Canadian blacksmith, kings of the flicks and ruled until Sennett's bathing beauties took over with Gloria Swanson among them.

They're not youngsters any more, but they go through the motions with a vigor that belies their years. (Conklin is 54, Mann 52, Pollard 48, St. John 47).

Amsterdam Report Says Ships Being Loaded in Dutch East Indies

By GUY RHOADES

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Two news items, one from London, the other from Amsterdam, today shifted attention of war observers from Europe to the Far East where Russia is helping Germany's efforts to circumvent the Allied blockade.

The Amsterdam story said at least twenty German merchantmen, refugees in the Netherlands East Indies since the war started, were loading and preparing for an apparent attempt to slip through the blockade, presumably for Vladivostok where their cargoes could be transshipped and sent overland to Germany.

In London the Ministry of Economic warfare announced it was turning over to French authorities "for administrative reasons" two Russian freighters it had been holding at Hong Kong on suspicion they were carrying contraband destined for Germany.

WELLES' FINDINGS LIKELY TO REMAIN SECRET FOR TIME

The President, Hull and Welles Hold Conference on Confidential Report on European Conditions

PRESS CONFIDENCE

Washington, March 29—(AP) — President Roosevelt scheduled another conference today with Sumner Welles and State Secretary Cordell Hull to discuss European conditions as Welles found them on a visit to the British, French, Italian and German capitals.

The White House indicated that the rigid rule of secrecy announced during the Roosevelt-Welles-Hull meeting yesterday still would apply unless Mr. Roosevelt consented to discuss the conversations at a press conference late today.

Welles, Under-Secretary of State, and Hull were on the Presidential calling list for noon, EST.

The President arranged to preside at a cabinet meeting after that and then see the press.

Strongest indication that the information given the President would remain secret was a statement by Stephen Early, President Roosevelt's Secretary, to reporters. Early said:—

"I've been authorized to offer you a word of friendly advice, to wit: not to write yourselves out on the end of a limb or to attribute what you assume the President, Mr. Hull and Mr. Welles are discussing to any allegedly authorized or unimpeachable or reliable sources, or to friends close to the President or to the Secretary of State or the Undersecretary of State."

Allied Front Firmer After Supreme Council Meeting Says the Mail

London, March 29—(CP)—Great Britain and France, newly bound in a firmer alliance for war and peace were determined today to seize the initiative from Germany on every front, particularly in the related fields of diplomacy and economic strangulation.

The war of bombs and bullets continued on the comparatively minor scale of aerial duels and attacks on shipping but informed quarters said the Allied Supreme War Council planned more frequent sessions similar to that of yesterday.

First fruit of the conference came in the summoning home for consultations of the British and French envoys in southeastern Europe, foreshadowing a strong drive for diplomatic ascendancy over Germany in the vital Balkan area.

The consultations are scheduled for early April, and Sir Percy Loraine, British Ambassador to Italy, is due to attend.

A friend of Germany, Italy is keenly interested on her own account in the Balkans, which British observers see as the next "double spot."

These observers said the Allies did not intend to be caught napping by any German attempt to thwart the blockade of diplomatic penetrations, particularly in Rumania.

Scandinavia Discussed

Allied attention also was directed toward Scandinavia—Germany's northern door—and toward means of dealing with Soviet Russia. With Spring thaws in the Baltic, Germany was believed likely to try to increase her imports via Scandinavian routes. The Allies are concerned over reports that German freighters are nullifying the far-flung blockade by edging down the Norwegian coast regularly.

Britain is sharpening her aerial weapons to help the fleet tighten its blockade of this zone.

Both Britain and France were described as inclined to preserve diplomatic relations with Russia on at least the present status, despite a French squabble over the Soviet Ambassador and British detention of Russian ships in the Pacific.

HOUSEMEN HAVE TALKING POINT

Advocate Reduction in Aircraft Defence Program After Sale to Allies Ratified

Washington, March 29—(AP)—Release of the most advanced type of United States war planes to the Allies gave Congressmen a talking point today in advocating a reduction in the big aircraft defence program.

The fact that both army and navy espoused the decision to give France and Britain the right-of-way in aviation purchases was seized upon by some as proof that necessity no longer existed for speedy construction of a huge United States air armada.

Senator Bennet Clark (Dem.-Missouri) said he thought the two fighting services had "stated themselves clear out of court" on the subject of large immediate expenditures.

Barring a change of policy, he added, he and others would demand appropriation reductions to cover only the number of planes which experts estimate would be delivered to the army and navy by July 1, 1941.

The army's original $300,000,000 program was to expand the air corps to 5,500 planes by that date, but General George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, said yesterday the objective might be reduced to 3,500 because allied buying would obviate the immediate need for accumulating a reserve. He looked for a possible saving of $27,000,000 for the next year.

Hamilton, Ont., Mar. 29 (CP).—With roads in Haldimand County still packde fence-high with snow, some not even being negotiable by sleighs, eight ballot boxes used in Tuesday's election today had yet to reach Peter Gloyd, returning officer. Reached by telephone today, Mr. Gloyd said he expected the missing ballot boxes would be delivered to him sometime before nightfall. He said there was no reason to expect any change in his estimated result of Wednesday, when he reported that Mark Senn, National Government candidate appeared to have a majority of 769 over Dr. N. B. Macaulay, Liberal.

Re-election of Mr. Senn had been determined from reports phoned to Mr. Gloyd by Deputy Returning Officers who, because of the condition of roads, had been unable to deliver their ballot boxes.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

LAST-MINUTE RUSH TO OBTAIN MARKERS

The last-minute rush by motorists to obtain markers before the deadline of March 31st was in evidence today as automobile owners stood in line at the office of Mr. E. Vermilyea, local issuer of motor vehicle licences, waiting to purchase their licences before the first of April when 1939 markers will have become useless. "The rush was fully expected however as it is customary for many motorists to wait until the last minute before purchasing their markers," said Mr. Vermilyea this morning, adding that tomorrow will see the biggest rush as it is the last day upon which markers may be purchased before the deadline.

SCOUT HANDICRAFT DISPLAYED IN WINDOW

Featuring a large window display of big rosy apples as an appropriate means of advertising their "Apple Day" which is scheduled for tomorrow the Boy Scouts of Belleville are very much in the public eye today as pedestrians take note of their window display in a vacant Front Street store front. Conspicuously set up in the opposite window is an example of Scout handicraft as replicas of almost every conceivable knot are tacked up on a display board.

FARMHAND SAVES HOME FROM FIRE

Considerable damage resulted to the home of Fred Barry, four miles south of Hastings, yesterday. It is believed that the turned-down covers of an upstairs bed came in contact with an over-heated stove pipe, which ignited the bed clothing and started the fire. Donald Gratton, 18-year-old farmhand, was credited with having saved the home from destruction. Gratton crawled into the smoke-filled bedroom and tossed pails of water on the smouldering bed and finally had to be dragged from the room. Damage amounting to at least $1,000.00 resulted due to smoke and water. A volunteer brigade of fire-fighters from all parts of the neighborhood assisted in extinguishing the blaze.

MOST CONCESSION ROADS ARE STILL IMPASSABLE FOR CARS

County workmen are still busy clearing concession roads of heavily packed snow in Thurlow, Tyendinaga and Sidney townships today. Motorised traffic is still impossible along the majority of concession and side roads throughout the county. The fourth concession of Thurlow was opened early today, but otherwise motor vehicles can not be used in the outlying area.

"Following Monday's snow and blow farmers throughout the district had to use horses and cutters to get to the polls on Tuesday to vote. This mode of travel resulted in the snows being solidly packed down and it is impossible for the small county snow plow to make an impression on these high solid drifts along the side roads," related William Reynolds, well known Cannifton general storekeeper today.

County employees are endeavouring to dig these congested concession roads clear by hand, but the process is exceedingly slow and farmers attending Saturday's local market will doubtless have to use old dobbin and resurrect the family cutter or bob-sleigh.

WAR BRIEFS

London, March 29—(CP)— Official credit for the sinking of the German freighter Heddernheim March 23 was given today to His Majesty's submarine Ursula.

The Heddernheim, first German merchantman torpedoed by a British submarine since the start of the war, went down off the coast of Denmark. The Ursula some week ago sank a German cruiser at the mouth of the Elbe River.

H. M. Submarine Truant, it was revealed, was the one which stopped and sank the German ship Edmund Hugo Stinnes off the Danish coast March 23.

H. M. Submarine Unity rescued eight survivors of the Dutch trawler Protinus, which was bombed and sunk by a German plane.

Sydney, Australia, March 29 — (CP—Reuters)—A resounding rebuff was administered to supporters of the extreme left wing of New South Wales Labor today when all Labor members of the Federal House of Representatives and Senate from that State met and repudiated the "hands off Russia" resolution passed at the State Labor Conference by 195 votes to 88 on March 23.

The Parliamentary group unanimously endorsed the statement of John Curtin, Opposition Labor leader in the Federal Parliament, that Labor is pledged to maintain Australia as an integral part of the Empire.

London, March 29—(CP) — George Hicks, Labor Member of Parliament and President of the National Federation of Building Trades Operatives, declared today that government "mismanagement and inefficiency" were responsible for "disgraceful and wasteful" unemployment.

Addressing a London Trades Union meeting, he said that 1,500,000 persons now were unemployed and that additional millions would be thrown out of work when the war ends. He urged preparation now "for that inevitable state of affairs."

Tokyo, March 29—(AP)— Japan announced today she is sending Setomatsu Kato, former Minister to Canada, to Latin America in a new move in her worldwide trade expansion drive intended to offset possible losses from the United States' termination of the American-Japanese trade treaty.

The Foreign Office also announced a new trade agreement with Spain providing for a possible 10-fold increase in Japanese exports of raw silk, rayon yarn, camphor and menthol and imports of Spanish industrial salts, potassium and mercury on a barter basis.

Corporation to Furnish Double Room in New Wing of the Hospital

The City of Belleville will contribute the sum of $600 to furnish one double room in the new wing of the Belleville General Hospital, that will soon be ready for occupancy, according to a recommendation passed at the committee meeting of the City Council held at the City Hall last evening. This recommendation will be ratified at the regular Council meeting on Monday evening. The recommendation to make this expenditure was made by Aldermen Cooper and Logan.

It was also recommended by Ald. McLean Haig, Chairman of Executive, "that the City Treasurer be authorized to issue a cheque for $10,000 to the Belleville General Hospital in full settlement of all 1939 indigent accounts payable by the City of Belleville, this settlement having been approved by the Board of Governors of the said hospital."

In future all delegations to appear before Council will be heard on regular sessions of the City Council instead of at committee meetings according to a recommendation submitted by Alderman Eddie Logan. This will give the council more time in committee to devote to the business of the corporation.

Ald. Harry Rollins submitted a recommendation, that Mayor Glencoe E. Thompson be chairman of Welfare and Relief for the ensuing year. The recommendation was approved in committee and will be ratified at Monday night's meeting. Other routine business was conducted by the members in committee.

New Roadway Along East Bank Of River is Almost Completed

Extends From Footbridge to Gangway North of Belvedere Hotel

SURFACING NEEDED

A new thoroughfare for vehicular traffic, one that when completed will fill a long felt need, has been opened in the city of Belleville. Only recently a loaded transport had the distinction of being the first truck to travel the length of a new roadway running along the east bank of the Moira River and to the rear of the business blocks on Front Street.

Leaving Front Street by way of a wide gangway north of the Belvedere Hotel, the truck proceedel vedefe Hotel, the truck proceeded ing lot immediately north of the footbridge and there discharged its load. It was the first time that a truck had entered that particular parking lot without travelling through one of the narrow alleyways leading from downtown Front street.

And thus, the dream of a former Belleville council that some day there would be an esplanade running up the east bank of the Moira river, from Bridge Street to a point on Upper Front Street, to the relief of traffic congestion in downtown sections, has at least, in part, been realized.

It looked like an impossible task which confronted the city council a decade or so ago, when the esplanade was first suggested, and the project was shelved because of financial reasons. Of late years however, the need for increased parking space led to the demolition of old unused livery barns and vacant storage houses at the rear of Front Street business blocks, with the vacant lots being turned into parking space.

Relieves Street Congestion

Through the use of these parking lots, congestion on Front Street has been lessened considerably, but because of the necessity of motorists having to use the narrow alleyways the result has not been what was expected. Gradually, however, the lots have become interconnected and only an open raceway near the rear of Boyce's Garage prevented motorists getting into the parking lots from a point on Upper Front St.

City garbage has been used as a fill for this old raceway and with a surface of gravel or other material to be graded in, the completed roadway will take more and more traffic off Front St. as trucks start using the new thoroughfare for servicing Front Street business houses.

REV. A. S. CONNELL AND FAMILY BID FOND FAREWELL

GIVEN PURSE

Climaxing nearly six years faithful service as rector of St. John's Parish, Stirling, Rev. A. S. McConnell and his family will leave next week for Brockville, Ontario, where he will begin his ministerial duties as rector of Trinity Church. During their residence in Stirling, Mr. and Mrs. McConnell have been active in every constructive movement undertaken by the community and have endeared themselves to all with whom they worked. Within the parish at St. John's Anglican church there has been a steady movement forward in all branches of the work under his able direction. The erection of St. John's Memorial Hall, is one of the projects for which he was largely responsible and upon its completion St. John's Anglican church became proud possessors of the finest Parish Hall of the entire district.

Served Overseas

Rev. A. S. McConnell served overseas during the last great war and after returning to Canada completed his academic training at Trinity College, Toronto. After serving with marked success in two other parishes he came to Stirling, about six years ago, succeeding the late Rev. Byers. Upon their arrival in Stirling both Mr. and Mrs. McConnell became active citizens of the village and their departure will be looked upon with a measure of regret by a host of friends within the St. John's Parish and also those of other denominations, who were frank in their admiration of the popular minister.

In conjunction with a Sunday School Concert held last night in the Parish Hall all members of the various organisation within the church joined in honoring their departing minister. Dr. E. A. Carleton and Mr. J. B. Belshaw addressed the honored couple as they took their place on the platform and the presentation of a purse of gold was made. Both Mr. and Mrs. McConnell expressed their gratitude for the kindly gesture and also spoke of the happiness provided them in their years of service in Stirling.

The Address

To Rev. and Mrs. McConnell,

There are occasions on which we are unable to find suitable words to express our innermost thoughts and feelings, indeed the present seems to be one of these and as a consequence you are asked to receive and accept this little reminder of your good friends and parishers in St. John's Church, Stirling.

We do this because we are not unmindful of the genuine leadership and guidance of you both in the activities of our church. During your stay with us which seems to have been all too short much has been accomplished.

We trust that By the Grace of God you will be spared in mind and body long to continue in the furtherance of Christ's work in your allotted fields of labour.

(Signed)

Mrs. H. Rodgers, President W.A., Mrs. H. Conley, President of Guild, F. W. Houchin, Supt. of Sunday School; J. E. Salisbury, President of Men's Club, J. B. Belshaw and E. A. Carleton, Wardens.

Program Presented

Preceding the presentation the children of the Sunday School under the capable direction of their teachers presented an excellent program with Mr. F. W. Houchin, acting as chairman for the evening. The program included the following numbers—Opening chorus; instrumental solo by Catherine Wright, one act play "Organizing a Society" with the following girls in the cast of characters, Misses Betty Lucas, Lee Conley, Marion Gravers, Marie Ackers, June Conley, Alita Conley, Lorraine Gravers; piano solo by Beverley Ingram and a second play "Studying for a Test" with the following cast Misses Ethel Richardson Lois Groves, Beverley Groves Joyce Groves. Monologue by Jimmy Wright. Musical drill directed by Mrs. A. E. Strickland with the following children taking part Eileen Ackers, Roy Strickland, Grace Carleton, Ronald Strickland, Shirley Ackers, Marie McCrory, Leah Lowery, Johnny Smith, Jack Skillicorn, Jack Bailey, David Bailey. A song by Harry Conley "South of the Border". Instrumental duet, Catherine Wright and Phyllis Vance. The final number was another play "Campfire Girls" including Marion Gravers, June Conley, Marie Ackers and Harry Conley. This part of the program closed with a chorus and the singing of the National Anthem. Luncheon was served by the ladies of the congregation at the close of the program and a social hour enjoyed.

its doctors will be assigned to depots, air training stations, schools and recruiting centres and also will serve with R.C.A.F. squadrons when they go into action in Europe.

Necessitated by Expansion

Previously all medical work in Canada for the air force was handled by army doctors, who had no special knowledge of aviation problems. The new unit was necessitated by expansion of the R.C.A.F. and the Air Training plan.

The first group is receiving elementary military training at Lansdowne Park Military Camp and later will take instruction in air force organization as well as medical studies. They have been posted as second lieutenants and later will be appointed captains.

Twenty more doctors will start training here soon and new groups will be brought into the scheme as the air training plan gains momentum.

Officials at National Defence Headquarters believe this new development marks the first time in the history of military flying in the empire that an air force has had a specially-trained medical unit assigned it.

Most of the doctors are young and unmarried, some have just completed their internship while others are experienced specialists in various branches of medical science.

A group of small boys on the roadside, recognizing the French War Lord and the British General as they drove by, snapped smartly to salute.

Three Flags Broken

As they reached the drill ground of the artillery units, the battle flag of the C.A.S.F. senior formation, honoring Canada, Britain and France side by side, was broken from the staff at the reviewing base. General Gamelin raised his eyes to inspect the standard bearing the Union Jack, Maple Leaves and Fleur de Lys, flown in his honor.

After the military brass band had played a general salute, the compact French general and the massive British chief of staff, who dwarfed him and all others, walked between the ranks to inspect the Canadians. Then the field regiments, with Brigadier J. C. Stewart at their head, swung past the reviewing base in troop formation as the visiting generals took the salute.

Toronto Scottish At Work.

The Toronto Scottish, their steel helmets camouflaged with sprigs from trees, were conducting a manoeuvre against an imaginary enemy attack when the distinguished soldiers pulled up at the roadside.

Lieut.-Colonel C. C. Thompson conducted the party over the hillside, piloting members safely between communication trenches and machine-gun emplacements covered over with grasses and spruce branches. So effective was the camouflage that the pits from which machine guns poked were hidden until a person was upon them. Unwary photographers scurrying for news pictures had many close calls.

The Royal 22nd Regiment were drawn up on parade when the motorcade drew up, to be met by a guard of honor.

After the regiment had presented arms, Generals Gamelin, Ironside and McNaughton and others of the official party walked between the khaki ranks as a band played the Maple Leaf. Then the group took their places at the saluting base while General Gamelin spoke to his "camarades de l'armee Canadienne".

Preserved Tradition Well.

"French - speaking Canadians!" the Allied commander began. "It is not without emotion that we hear you speak our language, the tradition of which you have preserved so well. We have not forgotten your predecessors who came to fight in France and we are happy to see how you are training yourselves to follow in their footsteps.

"When you land on French soil you will discover that behind the political pacts which bind us, the heart of France beats in unison with yours and you will find also who, like you, want not only to defend their fatherland but also to assure all peoples the right to be free."

As General Gamelin finished, Lieut.-Colonel Percy Flynn ordered the Royal 22nd to give three cheers for the Commander-in-Chief of the Allied armies. General Ironside removed his cap with the others and joined in the cheers.

The visit ended in historic Wellesley House, where General McNaughton was host at luncheon.

U-BOAT CAMPAIGN NO PUZZLE TO KRUSCHEN

Despite loss of 50,000 packages

The recent loss of 50,000 Giant Packages of Kruschen Salts at sea has interfered only slightly with Canadian supplies. Other shipments have been landed and distributed thinly but evenly among drug stores across Canada.

Those who suffer from rheumatic pains, headaches, blotchy skin, indigestion and other troubles usually caused by constipation—and those who know and like to enjoy "that Kruschen feeling" are urged, under the circumstances, to get their Gaint Packages at once while they last. It is not known when they will again be made available to the Canadian public.

The Kruschen Giant Package is a bargain. It contains a regular bottle plus a free trial size bottle. You may use the trial size bottle first and if not satisfied return the regular bottle unopened and get your money back. But act quickly. Your druggist has a limited supply.

OWEN DULMAGE FRACTURES LEG

Necessary to Convey Aged Man on Sleigh to Road Where Ambulance Could be Used

Picton, March 29 —(Special)—Owen Dulmage, well known Athol Township farmer, suffered a dislocated leg on Wednesday when he fell while walking near his home. In order to get him to Prince Edward County Hospital in Picton it was necessary to convey him a mile on a sleigh owing to road conditions. An ambulance met the sleigh and brought Mr. Dulmage, who is nearly 80 years of age but active to Picton.

Mrs. Manuel Deline of West Lake had the misfortune to fall on Thursday at her home at West Lake. She slipped on a rug on a floor which had just been waxed. In falling she suffered cuts on both sides of her lips and three stitches were taken to close the wound. She also suffered internal injury of the ear. Medical attention was given by Dr. McQueen at Bloomfield.

The Wellington War Emergency Committee held a successful dance and card party in the Consolidated School there Thursday night. Several from Picton were in attendance.

Snow plows are still busy endeavoring to open county roads but there are many still blocked. Mail couriers out of Picton post office are using both horses and sleighs and cars but even then are not able to reach all box holders.

A supply of softball bats and balls is being sent to members of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment now overseas. This is in response to a cable which stated they could not get a sufficient supply there. In a letter home, Sgt. W. Biddle states that "D" Company of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment is leading in softball and also doing well in soccer. In softball they have the hardball stars of last year and two Belleville softball stars are also on the team. The games are looked forward to with much interest, Sgt. Biddle states.

BAND CONCERT AT STIRLING MUCH ENJOYED

Belleville Municipal Band Assist Stirling Band in Enterprise

ELECTION RETURNS

Stirling, March 29 —(Special)—Sponsored by the Stirling Citizens Band and featuring Belleville Municipal Band under the leadership of Bandleader Jobson the musical concert presented on election night at the Stirling theatre was thoroughly enjoyed by over four hundred people who filled the theatre for the special program and election returns and also the community hall for games and dancing later in the evening. Lovers of band music were thrilled at the performance of the well known Belleville Band in renditions of stirring marches, overtures and specialty numbers. Added to the fine music was the splendid work of Mr. Fred Stone, who has recently gained fame in radio in unusual feats with the violin. Mr. Stone who advanced to the finals in the famous Ken Soble Amateur Trials proved popular with the Stirling audience.

Variety was added to the program by the dancing pupils of Miss Mary Forester of Belleville with these talented youngsters performing in soft shoe and tap dancing as well as acrobatic displays. Dancers included Madeline Walden, Mary Lou Pigden, Ruth Hagerman, Joyce Cooper, Mary and Gerald Bongard and others all proving themselves popular performers of high rating. Summaries of the general election returns were received periodically from the C.N.R. Telegraph wires and announced over the public address system especially installed for the event and operated by Messrs Colin Fox and Jack Ormiston.

Hall Filled With Dancers

Later in the evening the community hall was filled with dancers and merrimakers of all ages, who danced to the fine music provided by the Serenaders orchestra and took part in the games of chance which included the popular bingo circles.

Committee Workers

The event will be registered as one of the most successful in the history of the Stirling Citizens Band and its success can be contributed largely to the fine spirit of co-operation and willingness displayed by the members of the band who worked ceasely in organizing every detail. The committees in charge included the following bandmaster, with bandleader Maurice Bell actively associated with all groups: Luncheon Committee, James Ward, N. Rosebush, S. Murhpy, J. McGowan and Chas. Mitchell; Finance Committee, Ken Stapley and Carl Conley; Games Committee, Geo. Duffin, H. Moore, N. Potts; Music Committee, Geo. Ketcheson. With all these workers carrying out duties to which they were assigned every detail was taken care of without the slightest confusion or delay and the large crowd entered into the spirit of the evening as guests at a huge party.

Stirling Citizens Band have during the past few years made rapid progress under the leadership of Maurice Bell and each year sponsors one such gala event for the purpose of raising funds to meet their expenses. The public realizing the value of a good band in the community respond willingly in support and the Band is grateful.

TRENTON and DISTRICT

Trenton, March 29 (Special)—In an effort to raise funds for the Salvation Army war cause Trent Masonic Lodge No. 38 will sponsor a dance at the Masonic Temple in the near future. The Army drive in this community to collect $2,500, has been most successful but more money is needed if the objective is reached before the campaign closes early in April. The canvassers are collecting by personal contact under the direction of Captain Hewitt.

Eastern Star Dance

A smart crowd of formal dancers attended the annual Eastern Star dancing party in the Masonic Temple here last night. The affair, considered the swankiest Trenton function of the season, attracted old and young alike and the ball room was alive with activity from nine until? The Commodores orchestra of Belleville pleased the dancers with a varied programme.

Soldier's Good Cheer Club Formed Here

An organization with a purpose of conveying good cheer to Trentonians in active service was formed in Trenton recently and the executive met for the first time last Wednesday night. All organizations in the town have a representative belonging to the club. Good cheer will be conveyed to the Trenton troops in the form of necessities at three different occasions in the year. Club officers are as follows: L. D. Foster, president; J. C. Gillan, vice-president; J. M. Gallacher, secretary; R. H. Hunter, treasurer; Finance Committee, E. A. Simmons, chairman; B. F. Joyce, W. J. Finley, Geo. Shoniker, E. H. Behan, O. W. Pearce, Geo. Sprentall; Names and Address Committee: W. G. Spencer, chairman; Frank Sherbert, C. A. Norsworthy; Purchasing Committee: S. O. Graham, chairman; K. Juby, C. M. Foster; Shipping Committee: S. McEwen, chairman; H. Gray, T. Cain, Miss M. Haffey, Mrs. Lewis, Capt. Hewitt, Rev. Mr. Hutchinson, J. Redick, L. Hearts.

Hockey Banquet

A banquet in honor of Trenton's Junior "C" O.H.A. semi-finalists will be held in the Gilbert Hotel on Monday evening next when the Rotary Club will play hosts to the local pucksters. The Trenton Association team was partially sponsored by the Rotarians this season and carried the Trenton Rotary colors through the district play-offs to the semi-finals which they lost to Cobourg. It is understood, that the Rotary Club has prepared a fine evening's entertainment for their guests—fifteen promising hockeyists who easily surprised the best experts when they banished Lansdowne to reach the second round of the Ontario playdowns. Among the guests will be Manager Art Black and Coach Bill Burt, whose efforts had much to do with Trenton's fine showing.

Stunned Silence And Bewilderment Over Pilot House

Halifax, March 29 — (CP)—An atmosphere of stunned silence and bewilderment hung over the pilot office in the old Halifax customs building today.

From Captain D. A. Reside, superintendent of pilots, down, the men in the pilot office weren't talking much. When they did answer questions it was in an abstract sort of way.

"How could it have, happened?" was the question being asked.

Freighters approaching Halifax harbor at night are required to show a special light, meaning "I want a pilot." Then, in the regular course of events, the pilot boat comes within a quarter of a mile of the ship, and sends a pilot aboard in a tender.

The telephone in the pilot office rang incessantly all morning. Some called with messages of sympathy; others wanted to know about relatives; some others to apply for the vacancies as harbor pilots.

Two Pilot Boats in Service

There were two pilot boats serving Halifax harbor before today's disaster—the ill-fated Hebredian and the Nauphila. Both were Nova Scotia built schooners of 98 tons, 92 feet in length. The Hebredian was built in 1928.

Before the war, 20 pilots manned these boats in two shifts. Six pilots had been added to aid in handling wartime traffic, but the list is now back to its pre-war status.

The system was for one boat to lay off the harbor-mouth for a week, the other remaining ashore. Then the positions would revert for a week. Pilots on the "out" boat handled incoming traffic and those ashore handled outgoing.

The remaining pilot boat was sent out today three hours after her sister ship went to the bottom. She will remain outside the harbor until a suitable ship can be found to relieve her.

Fliers Tell of Fight With Dornier Bomber

London, March 29—(CP)—Three British airmen brought their bullet-riddled Hudson patrol plane to a safe landing and told how they damaged one of two German Dorniers they attacked over the North Sea yesterday afternoon.

They believed the damaged German plane was unable to get home.

"We were on a normal patrol about noon," the pilot said. "About 160 miles over the sea, I turned to the pilot sergeant and said 'There are two planes.'

"We climbed into the sun in order to take them by surprise. They were two Dornier machines, flying in single formation toward Germany.

"We were much faster and attacked at about 3,000 feet. We dived toward them at an angle, and when they saw us attack they dropped toward the water and flew low over the sea, which provides the best camouflage.

"For half an hour we attacked and flew off to get into position. The Dorniers replied to our fire but made no attempt to pursue us and kept on their course."

The sergeant who served as second pilot took up the story: "As we approached we saw the rear gunner in the hindmost Dornier climbing into his gunpit. It was an open pit, and we saw he was a young fellow with fair hair.

"The pilot opened fire, and we got him. He fell forward and we saw him hanging over the edge."

The British gunner, who was the third member of the Hudson's crew continued: "When we left the fight smoke was pouring from the Dornier, and I doubt whether it could get home.

"It was, I think, during the sixth attack we made that they hit us."

The British pilot resumed: "We were in a steep climb when a burst of fire caught our port engine and so we immediately turned back.

"At first I thought two tanks were hit, but we learned we had 200 gallons of petrol and we knew then that it would be a cakewalk to get home."

LITTLE ACTIVITY ON THE W. FRONT

Bad Weather Stalls Fighting—Two British Planes Shot Down Over Germany

By Axel De Holstein
Havas Staff Writer

Paris, March 29 —(CP—Havas)—Bad weather again stalled fighting on the western front in the past 24 hours, military authorities said today.

German artillery continued to comb the woods between the Sarre river and the Vosges mountains, but no infantry clashes occurred.

Few airplanes took off, and of those that did, one German Dornier-17 crashed accidentally in northeastern France, killing its crew. The accident was attributed to motor failure.

The Dornier was one of a number of German planes that carried out two reconnaissance flights over northern and eastern France.

Two British planes were shot down during operations over northwestern Germany.

The French high command's communique this morning said: "Nothing to report."

Nazis Report Attack on Convoy

Berlin, March 29 —(AP)— The German high command's communique today said:

"In the west, no special events. "German fighting planes in the evening hours of March 28, under severest weather conditions, successfully attacked a British convoy in the Shetlands region.

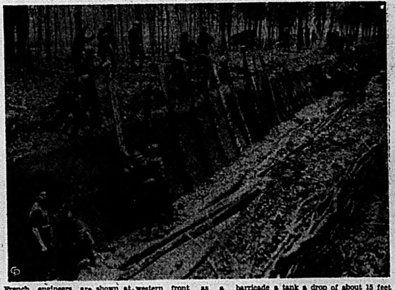
"The convoy was dispersed. Six large merchant ships were hit and one ship caught fire. A patrol boat sank. All participating planes returned safely.

"During the day reconnaissance was increased over the North Sea, Great Britain and France. Flights extended to the Orkney and Shetland Islands. Valuable results were obtained despite hectic defence. Two reconnaissance planes failed to return from the flight against the enemy."

In amplification of the communique, DNB, official German news agency, said British pursuit planes shot down a German reconnaissance plane off Scotland's north coast while another failed to return from a flight over France.

(The French communique reported that a German plane on a scouting mission crashed due to an accident.)

FRENCH POI LUS MAKE IT TOUGH FOR NAZI TANKS



French engineers are shown at work on one of the gigantic ditches they have constructed along the western front as a barricade against German tanks. The ditches are dug with steep walls that give a tank a drop of about 15 feet and make them easy prey for the anti-tank guns.

UNITED IN SPIRIT TO VICTORY

The Supreme War Council at London in a solemn declaration yesterday affirmed that the French and British Governments "mutually undertake that during the present war they will neither negotiate nor conclude an armistice or treaty of peace except by mutual agreement." They went to the extent of pledging not to discuss "peace terms before reaching complete agreement on the conditions necessary to ensure to each of them an effective and lasting guarantee of their security."

These are momentous words as they mean the complete unity of spirit of the two great Powers to carry on the war until the peace they desire is secured with all guarantees for each and for the world as well. They intend that nothing shall be done by one without the knowledge and consent of the other as regards any armistice or peace and not even to discuss the terms until both are satisfied that the security of both is amply guarded.

This means as has been often stated that France and Britain will not enter a peace which is incomplete, for it is realized that an incomplete peace would be merely the deferring of the war which would return upon them with all its fury at some future time. It has been said that France will never take the chance of demobilizing what has taken her so long and strenuously to set up, that defence which holds back the Bosch or the Hun until Germany is no longer a world menace. Neither will Britain lower her guards. These defences are to remain until Nazism has crumbled. Both Powers together fight and then when the time comes both powers as a unit will enter a peace conference. As the leaders of the two Governments and others have declared, that will be only when Hitler and Hitlerism or Nazism have been wiped out of international politics and when the enemy can never again become a menace to the freedom of the free nations and world democracy, which includes the smaller peoples.

So this war becomes an effort that will not end until the curse of Nazism and violence of force are removed.

Beyond the victory these Allies intend by every resource of which they are possessed to use peace to open a brighter era. In the words of the solemn declaration of the War Council "they undertake to maintain after the conclusion of peace a community of action in all spheres so long as may be necessary to safeguard their security and to effect the reconstruction, with the assistance of other nations, of an international order which will assure the liberty of peoples, respect for law and maintenance of peace in Europe."

Britain and France can go a long way in introducing that era through their vast experience throughout history by the slow developments which have brought the two of them to the stage of liberty they have attained. They are eminently fitted for that task, having passed through the furnace of sacrifice and effort for the sake of the freedom of the world and they will have the cooperation of the rest of the world.

Adolf Hitler has run against the spirit of liberty and the sense of security which is the wall against which he will beat himself and Nazism into defeat.

HIS MAJESTY THE KING INSPECTS PASSES

King George recently "filled in" at a south coast port as he looked at the passes of members of the B.E.F. on their way home on leave from France.

Britain's King and Queen have always shown a deep interest in what is going on in their realm and in what their subjects are doing. This evidence of intense interest in the lives of their people is one of the great factors making for the popularity of the Royal Family.

His Majesty delights to be among those who are defenders of the Empire and what the Empire symbolizes. There is abundant evidence of the fact that he likes to be meeting his people. The same love of humanity is shown by Her Majesty.

Such is the mark of true greatness. Greatest figures in history have always shown this intense interest in humanity. British history shows how King Henry Fifth was of this type for he loved to be with his army and through him the great English poet Shakespeare has spoken some of the most democratic words ever penned by man.

Their Majesties know what the routine of a monarch's life means to the ruler and they appreciate that in the same way the people live and are usually happy in their work. This desire for acquaintance with human life is a sign of the cosmopolitan character of the King and Queen. They feel that this enriches their own lives and everyone who has met Their Majesties in just such situations as above or as on their Canadian tour know how their own lives expanded through the evidences of the Sovereigns' sympathies.

MAGNETIC STORM ON THE SUN

A huge magnetic storm or tornado on the sun is blamed for the disturbance which afflicted the earth a few days ago, when radio and telegraph and teletype were helplessly confused. New York Times speaking of it says:

"A colossal tornado whirls on the sun, 93,000,000 miles away. Out of that dizzy mass of gas electrons are sprayed. Like drops of water the sprays fall. In a day and a half the chasm between the sun and the earth is bridged. We human beings feel nothing yet we are wrapped in a terrific magnetic storm that manifests itself in a strange tension to which the inanimate earth, itself a magnet, responds.

"Far in the upper reaches of the atmosphere the aurora glows with a more eerie light. There the electrons have torn bits from the few atoms in the air, and the atoms glow in a kind of electrical agony. Compass needles quiver and go wild. It is as futile to talk over a telephone circuit or to send a cablegram to Europe as it is to shout in a gale across the street. There are only electromagnetic sputters. D VL WMLOOO' is all that the teletype apparatus in 10,000 offices can record. The senseless letters symbolize our dense ignorance of what is happening twixt earth and sun and in that far-away sunspot. In forty magnetic observatories on the earth delicate instruments twitch and cry 'D VL WMLOOO' in their way, too. Whatever the cry may mean, the scientists on watch note it and correlate it with others uttered in past years. Everywhere helplessness — helplessness in the telegraph, telephone and radio offices, in the observatories. That dynamo of a spot 93,000,000 miles away, so colossal that the earth could be dropped into it like a seed in a washtub, has more power in it than Niagara, Zambesi, all the waterfalls in the world.

"Ever since men gazed at the sky and wondered at what they beheld, there have been mystics trying to prove that the sun not only gives life but controls it. Students of natural rhythms—astrologers disguised in modern business clothes instead of star-spangled gowns and conical hats — have spent a lifetime in correlating sunspots with the rise and fall in the price of wheat and other earthly phenomena. In the freakish magnetic storms that break forth whenever huge sunspots appear they have something more than coincidence."

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Why the Emotions Can Start a Cold

Practically every physician has had cases where the wife nursed the husband through an illness, in addition to having other work and other responsibilities on her shoulders. The patient recovered but the wife was stricken and in a few days died of the same ailment, usually pneumonia.

What happens in these cases? The physical effort is always great—climbing stairs, cooking special dishes, being "on call" during the whole twenty-four hours—but it is the mental, emotional or nervous effort that breaks down the resistance to infection. It was believed that the emotional upsetment, the worry about the patient, was the only factor that put a strain on the heart and caused it to fail.

There is, however, another factor that causes the loss of resistance to infection in those under emotional disturbances. We have all experienced the dryness of nose and throat which occurs when we are excited, worried, in suspense, or "worked up" about something. It is now known that this emotional disturbance so affects the lining of the nose that it loses its natural moisture or "protective" moist coating that prevents harmful organisms getting a "hold" on the body.

Dr. J. Kent Leasure, Indianapolis, at the last session of the American Academy of Eye, Ear, Nose and Throat specialists, in Chicago, stated:

"When the nose and throat feel dry as a result of emotional or physical strain, the body's first line of defence against dangerous and troublesome colds is being smashed. The thin moist coating of mucous in the nose is the body's barrier to or defence against the organisms causing colds. Let the glands manufacturing this mucous be put out of action for as short a time as half an hour, and the cold causing organisms can get into the human system and produce their unpleasant and dangerous effects".

If, then, you are tired physically, upset mentally, carrying a mental and physical strain, you should try to remember that you may be opening the door to these organisms always in the air and often in the nose itself, which just need the "drying" effect on the nose and throat of these emotional disturbances, to start what might finally end in pneumonia.

I realize that taking hold of ourselves, gaining self control, is not easy for most of us.

TESTS DEADLY BOMB

While U.S. naval and military experts remained coolly out of the picture, Inventor Lester Barlow is shown setting the charge in his liquid oxygen-carbon bomb preparatory to the demonstration on the proving grounds of the Glenn L. Martin airplane plant in Baltimore. Barlow claims that his bomb is the deadliest yet invented and that it is safer to handle than TNT. Pointing out that the bomb spreads death and destruction over a radius of 1,000 feet, Barlow says that enemy warships could be kept 1,000 miles from American shores by pro-

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The calling of six British ambassadors in the Balkan States to London for conferences with Viscount Halifax the Foreign Secretary, is symptomatic of the more aggressive diplomacy being pursued by the Allies in recent weeks.

It may be the prelude to some positive Allied action or it may be a question of preparing for some action by Germany with or without the direct collaboration of Russia and perhaps Italy.

The Allies by this action and in other ways are letting it be known they will not permit any Balkan state to suffer the fate of Finland at the hands of an aggressor.

Germany has everything to gain by a peaceful accomplishment of whatever revisions of influence and jurisdiction it may desire in the Balkans. War there would mean the opening of a second front and the Germans want no fighting on two fronts. It would also carry with it a grave risk of closing off Germany's economic gateway to the southeast through which Rumanian oil and foodstuffs now come to the Reich.

Any Allied diplomatic move in the Balkan area probably would be directed towards closing that gateway and the risk of war arising from such a move would not be such a serious factor for Great Britain and France.

So the meeting of the British ambassadors to Turkey, Bulgaria, Greece, Rumania, Hungary and Yugoslovia with Viscount Halifax may well be an important assembly.

STREET NAME UNCHANGED

Ottawa, March 29—(CP)— Controversy over the suggestion that Wurtemberg Street be changed to Finland Avenue ended last night when Board of Control decided to leave the name unchanged.

Pre-War Orders In Graf Spee Diary

Notes Taken by German Officer Give Detail of Raider's Activities at Sea

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Leaves from the war diary of an officer aboard the Admiral Graf Spee disclose that Germany's ill-fated pocket battleship put to sea on Aug. 21 two weeks before the start of hostilities, with instructions to campaign against merchant shipping in the Atlantic if there should be war.

The diary says the Graf Spee went to sea with the World War record of the raiding cruiser Emden as its example, and with an assignment direct from "the Fuehrer" to destroy British shipping on the Atlantic.

The account breaks off abruptly on October 26, seven weeks before three British cruisers forced the Graf Spee into Montevideo harbor, there to be scuttled by its own crew.

It describes, however, with graphic simplicity, operations of the warship against belligerent commerce. As translated from the German, some of the entries read:

"Aug. 21—We left Wilhelmshaven for the North Sea.

"Aug. 22—The captain assigns duties to the entire crew. He points out to all the seriousness of the situation and also says the Fuehrer has assigned us to the task of carrying out war on commerce in the Atlantic if war breaks out. He cites the cruiser Emden as an example and then tells us our immediate course.

"We sail northwest along the coast of Norway and Denmark and then between Latitude 60 Degrees North' and the Arctic Circle, passing both islands of Iceland and Faroes to make the Atlantic.

"Aug. 24—Today our ship goes full speed to reach our zone of operation.

Seaman Swept Overboard

"Aug. 26—Heavy storm is raging. . . . the bosun's mate, Matzke, was swept overboard by an enormous wave. As boats could not be lowered, he could not be saved; after an unsuccessful search of three hours we resumed our voyage.

"Sept. 8—At 11 hours we crossed the Equator for the first time. The baptism of the Equator could not be carried out on account of the seriousness of the situation. During these days we met the Altmark (an armed supply and prison ship which accompanied the Graf Spee), from which we took oil and provisions. After we had reached the Altmark we received the Fuehrer's orders to begin war on commerce. We left the Altmark and made for the South American coast.

"Sept. 30—We are off the east coast of South America, about fifty miles from Pernambuco. Two p.m., alarm. British steamer in sight. Every one goes to his battle station. The ship's airplane takes off and compels the steamer to stop. When it lay alongside, the boarding party examines the steamer. The crew takes to the boats and abandons the ship to us. The captain gives the order to sink her by torpedo. Two torpedoes missed the mark and then the vessel was sunk with 'M. A' and 'S. A.' (apparently shellfire of two types.) The steamer's name was the Clement, built in 1934, of 5,051 British tons register. The cargo consisted of 500 tons of paraffin oil, 500 tons of miscellaneous and 750 tons of coal for her own use. The wireless station at Pernambuco was informed by wireless in order than the crew might be picked up by a steamer.

Greek Vessel is Spared

"On the same day we sighted a Greek vessel, at 17:00 hours. After it had been searched, it was allowed to continue its voyage.

"Oct. 1—We are on our way to the west coast of Africa in order to destroy commerce on the trade route between the Cape and Freetown.

"Oct. 5—Seven hours, alarm. Steamer sighted and is discovered to be English and is stopped. She carries a gun on board. A boarding party searches her. She is the Newton Beech of 4,600 tons and is loaded with 7,000 tons of maize. On the captain's orders this steamer is taken with us as a prize. The prize crew is placed on board and the journey continues.

"Oct. 7—We again sight an enemy vessel. It is the Ashlea.

"Oct. 8—The crews of the Newton Beech and of the Ashlea were brought on board our ship at about 16 hours. The Newton, Beech and Ashlea were sunk.

"Oct. 10—18:00, alarm! Again an English freighter falls into our hands. Ship is taken with us as a prize since she is worth twenty-two millions.

"Oct. 12—We leave our prize (Huntsman) in order to meet the Altmark.

"Oct. 14—We meet the Altmark and hurriedly take on oil. When we have oiled we sail toward the prize.

"Oct. 16—In the morning we meet the prize, whereupon we take in a large quantity of provisions of which the most valuable are transported from the Huntsman to the Altmark and the Spee. The principal articles taken over are tea, hides, carpets, white shoes and tropical helmets.

"Oct. 17—The transferring of provisions is finished. The crew is placed upon the Altmark; thereafter the Huntsman is sunk.

Seek New Operation Zone

"Oct. 21—We have reached our new zone of operations. As we have to reckon with enemy warships, a full war-watch is kept.

"Oct. 22—In the morning the airplane goes reconnoitering and again discovers a steamer. We at once head for our new victim. About 14 we reach and stop her. Since she does not obey our instructions not to wireless she is fired upon with the 'Fla. M. W. 2CM.' The boarding party searches the ship. She is the 5200 ton English freighted Trevanion, laden with 6,000 tons of ore. The crew was taken on board our ship and she was sunk at 16 hours. Despite orders not to use her wireless, she had succeeded in giving her position.

"Oct. 23—The airplane goes out and again finds a vessel. We shape our course towards it, but could not reach it. In the afternoon at 21 hours, an alarm. An enemy ship is sighted. It cannot be ascertained whether it is a warship or merchant ship. As things were getting too hot for us in this zone of operation, the captain was compelled to allow this ship to go its way.

"Oct. 24—We go at high speed in order to disappear from this zone of operation. As we have been warned of enemy warships, a full war watch is kept. Any one who sees an enemy airplane receives a reward of 50 marks from the captain.

"Oct. 25—We sail at high speed toward the east coast of South America."

How An Air Raid Looks From A German Bomber

Today's task was a pretty hard nut to crack. An armed convoy escorted by warships was to be attacked, and that in the proximity of the coast! Facing the whole lot of them! Coastal batteries, ships' anti-aircraft fire, fighters—and in addition to that perhaps a long search, giving the British outlook vessels the most marvellous chance to send unhindered the news of the approach of German bombers.

Here was the Moray Firth already in sight. Our formations thundered in the direction of Aberdeen, the machine-gunners keeping a sharp look-out from the stern, ready to ward off any attack. But still there was not a sign of anything! Neither of the expected convoy nor of fighters—good and ill-luck in the same breath. Now they thundered along the coast at the level of Edinburgh, and a wild chase began—nine British fighters.

• •

Now then! They came on at breakneck speed; there was no evading them. Already the first bullets were rattling against the planes. The German bombers sprayed the enemy with shot from every machine gun; now they had passed us, flown off, and formed up for a new attack. Ah, what was that? The left machine in the second formation was losing speed at a great rate, and the fighters were pouncing on it. Something had certainly happened to the motor.

The two other machines of the formation turned sharply at once and defended their comrade from the concentrated attack of the fighters as they rushed up. The Rhombus (presumably the machine in which the correspondent was flying) also turned back to the rescue, but a passing Briton sent a whole volley through its motor.

The machine guns rattled furiously after the struck machine — and now a cloud came hissing from the right motor; the cooler and the oil supply pipe had been hit! The oil dribbled out at a disturbing rate; the machine would soon go on strike. Resolutely the pilot switched the right motor entirely off—we must go on with a single one!

• •

Once more the Tommies' nickel-plated shot scored hits with sickening clatter against planes and fuselage. The cockpit had been riddled and close behind the pilot's neck, a shot coming forward through the fuselage had penetrated the metal casing, come smack against the pilot's leather helmet—and dropped helplessly from it.

Thank God, its long passage through one metal surface after another had spent its energy. It might have been serious for us.—no pilot, and only one motor in action, in the midst of a swarm of enemy fighters—but there was no time for thinking about it. If only the first formation could keep on—the seconds seemed eternities—did they not see?—yes, they grasped the situation; the group must keep in close formation if they were not to be scattered by the fighters now roaring up again.

They came past us a third and fourth time, each time received with a hail from all the machine-guns. Already the first of them had abandoned the pursuit, and we could breathe a little more freely. Perhaps they had begun to run short of spirit; the chase had carried friend and foe far out to sea.

• •

We breathed again; the worst seemed to be over. But a couple of obstinate fellows were still snapping at our second formation. The first formation turned and hurried to the aid of their comrades, while Rhombus, hampered by the failure of its right motor, flew on with all the speed its remaining motor would allow. The pilot had trimmed the craft, restoring the equilibrium upset by the falling out of the right motor.

Now came the next surprise. The main tank had only a few hundred litres of spirit left, nothing like enough for the homeward flight. The precious juice was running out merrily through the shot pipe. "The reserve tank," wrote the observer "must be emptied into the inner tank."

A small hand-pump, with a ridiculously small lift, close by the pilot's seat, must do the work. Each of us had now but one thought—keep it up. "Fritz, come up here, you must carry on with the pumping," the sergeant-major, observer and commander of the craft, phoned to his mechanic.

We were still hundreds of kilometres from home. Fritz pumped indefatigably. The beast of a hand-pump did precious little, but it had its effect—slowly litre after litre flowed into the inner tank; the motor was getting its spirit! It was working steadily and safely. The wireless operator tirelessly took his bearings, while the observer watched the course. By now it had grown dark. Then came a shout of joy—the home port came in sight, the flares blazing; at last, at last the grand machine as taxiing, after a perfect landing, to its resting-place.—(Article by a Nazi correspondent in Berliner Boersen-Zeitung.)

Berlin Claims 16 Documents Shed Light on Part U.S. Policy 'Played in Bringing on War'

Documents, Said to Have Been Found in Polish Archives in Warsaw and Released by German Foreign Office, Are Alleged to Include Confidential Report by Polish Ambassador Potocki in Washington Dated Nov. 21, 1938, in Which U. S. Ambassador Bullitt is Mentioned as Saying in Answer to Potocki's Question if the U. S. Would Participate "in Such a War," "Undoubtedly, Yes, But Only After England and France Bestirred Themselves First" — Ambassador Bullitt is Also Mentioned as Saying Attitude in the United States Was Adverse to Nazism and Hitlerism

(By Louis P. Lochner, Associated Press Staff Writer)

Berlin, March 29—(AP)—Sixteen documents which German authorities said were found in the archives of the Polish Foreign Office in Warsaw were handed to the Press by the Berlin Foreign Office tonight with the authorized comment that they shed "a most interesing light on the part which American policy played in bringing about the present war."

President Roosevelt and Joseph P. Kennedy and William C. Bullitt, United States ambassadors to London and Paris, were named in the documents. Some of them were represented as confidential reports by the Polish ambassadors to Washington, London and Paris and the Polish minister to Stockholm.

Purported to be Letters to Statesmen

Among them are what are represented as a letter by Anthony Eden former. British secretary; a letter by the Polish general staff; a report by the Polish commercial attache in London on a chat with Ambassador Kennedy.

All the documents were accompanied by photographic reproductions of the alleged originals.

One of the papers was labelled a confidential report by Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish ambassador in Washington, dated Nov. 21, 1938.

It said that Bullitt hoped that during the ensuing two years Germany would engage in conflict with Russia, thereby giving the western powers an opportunity to get ready.

Alleged Report to Beck

"Bullitt's reports to President Roosevelt and the State Department are always studied with attention," the alleged report—to Jozef Beck, Polish foreign Minister — read.

"Bullitt spoke with the greatest vehemence and strong hatred of Germany and Chancellor Hitler," this alleged report said. "He opined that only strength applied at the close of war could in the future put an end to Germany's mad expansion. To my question how he viewed this coming war, he replied that the United States, France and Britain must arm up tremendously in order to defy German power.

"To my question whether the United States would participate in such a war he (Bullitt) replied: 'Undoubtedly, yes, but only after England and France bestirred themselves first.' The attitude n the United States, he said, was so adverse to Nazism and Hitlerism that even today there is a psychosis among Americans similar to that before America's declaration of war on Germany in 1917."

All chefs of bureau of Amercan News Associations and newspapers were summoned to the Foreign Office at 6 p.m. (noon EST) to receive the documents.

The collection was supplemented with what were said to be photographic reproductions of the originals.

The correspondents were told that no elucidations were necessary — they should read for themselves.

Roosevelt's Alleged Attitude

President Roosevelt's alleged attitude and opinions figure for the first time in what was represented as a report by Potocki dated Washington, Jan. 12, 1939. After asserting that hatred in the United States against all forms of Fascism is growing and is being incited by Jewish propaganda which, the document said, controls the radio, press, films and magazines nearly 100 per cent, the alleged Potocki report continued:

"President Roosevelt was first to give expression to this hatred for Fasicsm. He thereby pursued a twofold object: First, he wanted to district the attention of the American public from difficult and complicated domestic problems, especially between capital and labor.

"Second, by conjuring up a war psychosis and conjuring up danger in Europe, he wanted to persuade the American people to accept America's enormous preparedness program, a program which goes beyond defence needs. Roosevelt soon succeeded in creating interest in his foreign policy. The way chosen was quite simple: On the one hand the danger of war hanging over the world on account of Chancellor Hitler had to be set in a scene cleverly.

"On the other hand a ghost had to be invited which would jabber about an attack by totalitarian states on the United States.

"The Munich Pact came in very handy for Roosevelt in that connection. He represented it as capitulation by France and England to pugnacious German militarism."

Potocki then expressed the opinion that the Jews were using President Roosevelt to bring about a world war.

Crowds Throng Academy For Second Evening of Annual Spring Festival

Excellent Program Provided by Societies of St. Michael's Parish

St. Michael's auditorium was crowded last evening for the second night of the annual Spring Festival and the excellence of the program provided was thoroughly appreciated by those present. Opening with a cafeteria supper, which drew an unusually large number of patrons the Festival continued until a late hour with games, program, and dancing to make a full round of entertainment. Tonight a similar program will conclude the Festival, the only change being that there will be no supper served. The handsome prizes a feature of the Festival will be drawn for following the stage program.

Supper last evening was served until almost eight o'clock, so large was the crowd, and the guests were unanimous in their admiration of the delicious meal, faultlessly served by the ladies of the parish.

Games For Spectators

Games for the enjoyment of young and old were conducted by the various societies of the church, while the junior members of the congregation, the Boy Scouts and the Girl Guides were most attentive in looking after the convenience of the guests.

Under the chairmanship of Mr. Allan Meagher, who acted as master of ceremonies last evening, a splendid program by guest artists has been provided each evening on the stage. In all, two hundred people have taken part and the large audiences have warmly commended those in charge for the exceptional array of talent presented. Mr. Maurice Callaghan, as stage manager, was responsible for the smooth "behind scenes" effects which added greatly to the success of the program.

Little Mona Hartley, a pupil of Miss Lillian Marsh, gave an excellent tap number which won prolonged applause, on Wednesday evening. Her name was inadvertently omitted in the list of performers in Thursday's write-up.

For last evening's concert, St. Michael's Band provided the musical setting which started the program off, on a brilliant note. With Miss Barbara Forhan conducting the band played "Anchors' Aweigh," "Dream Castles," "Scatterbrain," "O Johnny" and "Melody in F." A song and dance by Roney Donavon, and a song by Genevieve Tracey, were features of this part of the program. Last evening saw the introduction of St. Michael's orchestra, composed of ten or twelve members of the band. This group provided the accompaniment for four fine numbers, a song by Joe Barrett, a dance by Mary Grant, a bell solo by Helen Grant, and a tap dance by Barbara Donavon.

Following the contribution by these junior musicians of the Academy the stage presentation continued with a splendid exhibition of tap dancing by the three Bongards, Mary, Gerald and George, pupils of Miss Mary Forster. A reading by Miss M. Walden, pupil of Miss Joan Maraskas, was very well done while a drum tap by Miss Forster's pupils, Ruth Hagerman, Mary Lou Pigden, Inez Forster, Madeline Walden and Marguerite Garvin, brought down the house. St. Michael's boys, under the direction of Mr. Jack Doran, gave an excellent gymnastic exhibition. Miss Mary Alice Rogers was heard in a vocal solo which was enthusiastically received by the audience; Mr. Leo Riggs acted as accompanist.

Concluding the program, there was music by Nobby Jones orchestra with special violin numbers by the talented performer Fred Stone who has been heard over CFRB. This same orchestra provided the music for modern and old-time dancing which brought to a close the evening's entertainment.

3 Officials of Mining Company Arraigned On Charge of Fraud

Montreal, March 29—(CP)—Three officials of Stadacona Rouyn Mines Limited were arraigned today on a $2,429,404 fraud charge, a fourth man was arrested in Ottawa and police said still another company official would be placed under arrest later.

The three arraigned today were President Roy Anderson, Secretary-Treasurer A. C. Trew of Ottawa, and R. P. Pattee of Montreal, a director. They appeared before Judge F. T. Enright, pleaded not guilty and were remanded in $20,000 bail for preliminary hearing April 4.

Superintendent Louis Jargaille of the Quebec Provincial Police said that Fred Graham, described as a 36-year-old salesman of Ottawa, had been arrested in Ottawa and would be brought here for arraignment, probably tomorrow morning, with the fifth man involved in the case.

A warrant also has been issued fore the arrest of J. Barton Niver of Montreal, a Stadacona Rouyn director, and Attorney James Crankshaw appeared in court and told Judge Enright he was representing Niver who, he said, would surrender to the police sometime today.

Seven Counts Listed

Seven counts against the men are listed in the two-page complaint and President Anderson is named in all of them. Trew and Pattee are named in five.

The first count in the complaint accuses all five of having conspired to defraud the company shareholders, noteholders and the public between January 1, 1935, and December 4, 1939, in the district of Montreal and in the provinces of Quebec and Ontario.

In other counts the company officials are charged with having issued false shares and in two counts Anderson is charged with forgery.

Warrants for Arrest

Warrants for arrest of men were issued by the Attorney-General's department late yesterday after an investigation by the Quebec Securities Commission and other bodies. Anderson, Trew and Pattee were arrested last night by Provincial Police.

Securities Commission officials at Quebec said today the probe was continuing. It was not known when the inquiry would be completed.)

Shares of Stadacona Rouyn Mines were delisted from the Toronto Stock Exchange Nov. 29, 1939, pending completion of an investigation into the financial position of the company. The stock was suspended by the Montreal Curb Market January 25 last. The stock had been traded on the unlisted section here.

The company was declared in bankruptcy December 4, 1939, with George Duclos of Montreal appointed provisional liquidator.

MOLOTOFF CLAIMS INSTANCES OF ALLIED HOSTILITY

Soviet Premier Presents Report on Foreign Policy Before Supreme Soviet

LOSSES IN FINLAND

Premier Says Soviet-German Relations Were Firmly Proved in Polish Campaign

Moscow, March 29—(AP)—Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff tonight declared before Soviet Russia's "parliament" that "our position is neutrality in the war" and "the safeguarding of our land."

Molotoff announced this policy at the end of a review of foreign affairs in which he charged that "the hopes of the British and French rulers to use the Soviet Union in war against Germany have been frustrated."

He assetted the conflict with Finland "was a welcome opportunity for a number of imperialist states to embark on war against the Soviet Union" and mentioned the United States and Italy among "other imperialist countries" besides the Allies who sent "military aid" to Finland.

"The policy pursued by the Soviet Union," he said, "is obviously not palatable to the British and French whose nerves are not in good order."

Molotoff claimed that "during the past five months there have been many instances of Franco-British hostility toward the Soviet Union."

The Premier-Foreign Commissar spoke at a joint session of the two houses of the Supreme Soviet, the Russian "legislature," which today began a session to ratify the peace treaty with Finland, create a "Karelian-Finnish Union Republic" in territory gained from Finland, and to hear the 1940 budget.

"Soviet-German relations," Molotoff said at the outset, "were firmly proved in the Polish campaign."

He said Russian losses in the conflict with Finland were 48,645 killed and 158,863 wounded while Finnish losses were much greater.

Claims Finnish Losses High

He stated Finnish losses were no less than 60,000 killed and 250,000 wounded.

(At the end of the conflict, Finland's Field Marshal Baron Mannerheim estimated the Russian dead at 200,000 and the Finnish dead at 15,000. Scandinavian military observers at the same time estimated Russian casualties were approximately 250,000 dead and 250,000 wounded and Finnish casualties were 30,000 dead and 35,000 wounded.)

Joseph Stalin, War Commissar Klementi Voroshiloff and Molotoff were given an ovation at the beginning of the session.

Molotoff charged that "inimical" action of Britain and France had been damaging to relations with Russia.

"Britain stopped our ships going to Vladivostok" while France "organized police raids on our trade representatives in Paris," he said.

Audience Laughs

Molotoff's audience laughed when in his review of the Russo-Finnish conflict, he said aid was sent to Finland "even by the peace-loving United States."

He said "the war in the west has been confined to casual clashes mainly on the sea and in the air."

"It is known that Germany's effort to negotiate peace was brushed aside by Britain and France," he continued.

"It was said it was to fulfil their obligation toward Poland that Britain and France declared war.

"Now it is perfectly clear how far removed the real aims of these powers were from defending the interests of Poland. Their aims are complete defeat and dismemberment of Germany.

Lays Charge Against Britain

"Britain has refused to fulfil long-standing Soviet orders and eventually this hostile attitude has culminated in the seizing of two Soviet ships. The British government has endeavored to justify these acts on the ground their goods were destined for Germany.

"The war in Finland was not simply a clash with Finnish troops. The matter was more complicated. We were fighting not merely Finnish troops but the combined forces of the Imperialists of a number of countries, including Britain and France.

"Chamberlain in the House of Commons on March 19 expressed malicious regret at the failure to prevent the end of the Finnish war, thus turning his 'peace-living' Imperialist soul inside out to the whole world.

"Chamberlain without the least embarrassment related that preparations for the dispatch of an expeditionary force comprising 100,000 men were completed by March 2—two months earlier than the date set by Mannerheim".

Molotoff asserted that one fifth of Sweden's air force was placed at the disposal of Finland.

"Military aid for Finland did not come only from the Allies", he went on, "but also from certain other Imperialist countries, including Italy and even the United States.

"The Finnish war indeed was a welcome opportunity for a number of Imperialist states to embark on war against the Soviet Union.

"Despite all these efforts the strength and determination of the Red Army converted the war into a glorious victory".

ARMYPOSTALBASE IS QUITE ACTIVE

373,000 Letters, 80 Tons of Parcels and 27 Tons of Newsprint Handled in March

Ottawa, March 29—(CP)— The Canadian army postal base here handled 373,000 letters, weighing more than five tons, 80 tons of parcels and 27 tons of newsprint for Canada's soldiers overseas to date during March, figures released by Major G. W. Ross, officer commanding the Canadian Postal Corps showed today.

All letters and parcels sent to Canada's enlisted men in England pass through the postal base here. They are sorted according to regiments, then divided into units of regiments, then bundled and returned to mail bags to await an overseas mail boat.

After reaching England, regimental mail goes to a rail head there to be placed on a ration train. Regimental postal orderlies assume responsibility for delivery upon arrival of trains.

Black-out Accidents Greatly Reduced In Great Britain

London, March 29—(CP)—Statistics on British traffic accidents published today disclosed that government efforts to reduce the toll of dead and injured from black-out accidents were meeting with some success.

From Sept. 1, 1939, to Jan. 31, 1940, a total of 4,769 persons were killed in accidents with the high for the five-month period in December, when 1,155 were killed. Starting in January a regular decline was shown in the figures. During January 619 were killed, 536 less than in December but 134 more than January 1939. In February the total dropped to 416, about 40 less than in February 1939 and 200 less than January this year.

Traffic experts attribute the decrease to government measures reducing the automobile speed limit and to the use of daylight saving time in February.

London, March 29 — (CP-Cable) —The old Ross rifle has come into its own again after being stacked up in British armouries since the early days of the first Great War.

Hundreds of the Canadian-made rifles have been distributed to merchant and naval vessels as a defensive weapon and as a target rifle for exploding mines.

FOOD RESERVES GREATER

London, Mar 29 (CP). — British food reserves are greater than before the war as a result of rationing, government monopoly buying and efforts of the merchant fleet, the food ministry announced today.

It said about $3,300,000 was being spent weekly to peg meat, milk and flour prices against undue rises. The general cost of food has risen 16 to 17 per cent since war began last September. The ministry stressed co-operation with France in food buying to prevent competition in foreign markets.

Letters From the Troops

Excerpts from person letter to J. E. Shortt, Y.M.C.A. Secretary from former member and Pin Boy—

Aldershot, Eng., March 8, 1940

I am writing you a few lines to tell you I was at the Y.M.C.A. last night and met an officer who knew you. . . We had a fine evening of entertainment and had a few pictures taken of the whole audience including myself. The officer I spoke to was a very nice chap and we shook hands because I also knew you. . . . Sometime when I get a chance I will send you my picture. . . . I well remember the Sunday you took me to church with you. . . . .

Although this is a nice country to see I would rather be in Canada as the weather is too damp and cold here also the tobacco and cigarettes are high in price and are not very good in quality. . . . I joined the Army in January and haven't much time to see much. We do a lot of marching. There isn't much more I can say at present except that if the Y.M.C.A. wasn't here I wouldn't know what to do as it is very lonely around the Camp. . . . In case you should like to write me I will be very pleased if you do so. Goodbye for the present.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

Heavy Rainfall May Cause Flood In Moira River

Today's probabilities indicated that Spring was definitely in the air. The weatherman predicted rain or a wet snow and an early afternoon clouded sky prompted local weather prognosticators to herald spring as a certainty. News dispatches from Toronto and Western Ontario stated that a wet rain-soaked snow fell early today, but melted as fast as it reached the ground. Later in the day it turned to rain and the temperature mounted as high as five degrees in some centres. Late this afternoon the wind shifted to the south and milder weather was immediately felt with rain seeming a certainty. Much controversay was heard in the city today regarding the possibilities of the Moira River over-flowing its banks in the event of a heavy rainfall.

Ice Breaks from Banks

One good warm rain and continued mild weather and nights without frost is all that is necessary to send the Moira River on its annual spring rampage, is the opinion of local river experts, who keep a weather eye on the Moira at this time of year, ever on the lookout for signs of the inevitable spring break-up. The ice at the banks is beginning to break and in some places, especially at the upper bridge open places are in evidence in mid-stream. The warm sun and balmy air of the past few days has sufficiently rotted the ice so that conditions are ripe for another flood, should any appreciable rise in the water level suddenly occur, it is pointed out.

Further indication that a flood is imminent should the present mild spell bring rain, is the fact that the depth of snow in the country to the north and in the watershed of the Moira, exceeds almost every known record. The warm sun of the past few days has settled the snow until it is loaded with water and only a rain is necessary to send it down through the river channel in a deluge.

BUSINESS GIRLS ENJOY SUPPER AT THE 'Y'

The regular monthly supper of the Business Girls section of the "Y" was held in the auditorium of the building last evening with a good attendance.

After a satisfactory meal served by the Women's Auxiliary and the business matters had received attention, the group were entertained. Miss Bernice Saunders with Miss Margaret Saunders at the piano rendered two vocal numbers which were appreciated by the audience.

Through the kindness of the Stewart-Warner Alemite Corporation, and with Mr. Jones of the company operating, the group had the pleasure of viewing a movie-talkie of the Royal Tour.

The girls then adjourned to the gym floor for class work under the direction of Miss Roberts and Miss Maclean.

Life Underwriters Hear Address on Thinking Professionally

The regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Life Underwriters Association was held Thursday at the New Queens Hotel. Mr. Jas. Barclay, District Supervisor of the London Life for the Belleville district and popular President of the association, graced the proceedings in the capacity of chairman.

Mr. Sandy Burrows, C.L.U., injected a spirit of good fellowship as leader of the community singing period.

Mr. Leo Riggs, the dean of musicians in this city, rendered a number of instrumental selections which were greatly appreciated.

Mr. Harry Phillips, district manager, London Life, Brockville, was introduced by the president and spoke from the subject, "Thinking Professionally." His talk on the necessity of a thorough preparation on the part of the agent before approaching a prospect was both timely and practical and his whole address was highly commended by all members of the association.

Mr. William Hurst of the Mutual Life extended a vote of thanks to Mr. Phillips for his interesting and educational address.

The Life Underwriters' Association is steadily forging ahead and although maintaining a creditable membership, new members are continually being added.

8-STATE ALARM SOUNDED FOR TWO 'TRIGGERMEN'

Described as "Likely to Shoot it Out Rather Than Surrender"

GANG'S KEY MEN

New York, March 29.—(AP)—An eight-state alarm for two desperate alleged triggermen of Brooklyn's Murder, Inc., described as "likely to shoot it out rather than surrender", was sent out today by District Attorney William O'Dwyer of Kings County.

The alarm called for the arrest of Louis (the Duke) Malone, an alleged lieutenant of the Death Syndicate, and Vito Gurino, said to be one of the gang's sharpshooters.

O'Dwyer said the two fugitives were wanted for questioning about a prison-hatched plot to assassinate an important eye-witness in the 1937 slaying of George Rudnick, a police informer stabbed 54 times in a Brooklyn garage as a warning to other "stool pigeons".

O'Dwyer said the target of the plot was Angelo Catalano, a Brooklyn house painter and bookmaker's agent.

The order for Catalano's execution, he said, was sent out from Tombs prison by a prisoner held in the investigation of Murder, Inc., the Brooklyn Killers-for-hire ring which has been linked with at least 35 gangland slayings.

O'Dwyer said Catalano was saved by his arrest as a material witness in the Rudnick murder.

Three of the men involved in the Rudnick slaying —Harry (Happy) Malone, Frank (the Dasher) Abbadando and Harry (Pittsburgh Phil) Strauss—were arraigned on first degree murder charges today. All pleaded not guilty.

Mrs. S. R. Cliburn of Kent, England, and Mrs. A. Ashelford of London, England, are the guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Randle, 93 Lingham St. After visiting in the city they expect to take up residence in Vancouver.

Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Mills, 16 Grove Street, are quietly observing to-day the fifty-third anniversary of their marriage. On March 29th, fifty-three years ago they were married in this city by the Rev. S. Daw, now of Hamilton, who at that time was rector of Christ Church here. The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Mills will be pleased to extend to them congratulations and good wishes.

WEDDINGS

WRIGHT—CONLEY

A quiet but pretty wedding was solemnized by Rev. H. D. McCuaig, of Gananoque, at the home of the bride's mother, Gananoque, of Lillian Margaret, daughter of the late John J. and Mrs. Conley to John James Wright, of Toronto, son of Mr. and Mrs. John Wright, Ivanhoe, Ontario.

The bride looked lovely in a street length dress of turquoise shell blue with shoulder length veil held with flowers of matching shade. Her accessories were of white and her corsage of Talisman roses.

Miss Lorna Wright, sister of the groom, was bridesmaid and wore a dress of mist blue with matching accessories and a corsage of Johanna Hill roses.

John Conley, brother of the bride, assisted the groom.

Following the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served after which the happy couple left for a short motor trip. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Wright will reside in Toronto.

FEARS TURN TO WRATH

Personality Can Be Cultivated

Is personality a wonderful something with which we are born or is it a trait we can acquire?

What do you think?

Personality is a broad term, a quality that includes many other characteristics. But to all of us it means about the same thing. People with personality stand out in a crowd, are highlighted in a small group, are likeable, have the power to make friends, have the power to influence people because they are genuinely interested in other people and in other people's interests. They mingle easily with people, socially and in business.

What is there to hinder our cultivation of these pleasant and pleasing qualities? I see no reason why we can't acquire them.

But we can't cultivate personality unless we believe in ourselves. And we must first hitch our wagon to a star, ascertain our ideal of what kind of person we want to be. We must be honest with ourselves, and we must be honestly interested in other people, fair to them, gracious to them. Our star must be a genuine star, not a tinsel one. We can't build a real personality on affectation, insincerity or artificiality.

I'm sure we'll all agree that people who have personality, whether they are born with it or have cultivated it, have a certain sense of drama. But it's healthy drama. They turn out toward people, not in on themselves. They aren't inhibited, aren't self-centred. They meet us at least half-way. They welcome human relationships because they know this is the way to develop their personality.

If they begin by being shy, by being afraid of themselves and of meeting other people, they make a conscious and tremendous effort to overcome this fear. They discard handicaps. They go on their straightforward way, liking people, and believing they can make themselves such "personable" people that other people will like them.

Personality can't be cultivated in one easy lesson. But it can be cultivated!

Name on Check

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

My name (let's say) is Mrs. William Fay. My first name is Caroline. I have just opened a checking account, for paying my household bills. I sign these checks Caroline Fay. Is this form of signature right or wrong? Shall I change it or use this form?

C. C.

When you signed your application for the checking account, this form was apparently the one you preferred to use. And it is a correct form, although not the usual form. Most women prefer to retain their maiden name as part of their informal name. . .Caroline Smith Fay. But Caroline Fay is correct, and so is Caroline S. Fay. Since you have registered this form of name with your bank, there is no reason for you to change it, unless you wish to.

Receiving Line

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

1—Is it proper for a club to have a receiving line at a formal evening reception and installation of officers?

2—Also is it correct for a concert artist to wear a formal gown when she performs at an afternoon recital in a large city, and can it be backless and sleeveless?

B. J.

1—Yes, a receiving line is always proper at a formal reception of this type. Heading the receiving line might be the club's president whose term of office is just ending, and next to her the president whose term of office is about to begin.

2—A concert artist with a sense of appropriate dressing would definitely not wear a backless, sleeveless dress at an afternoon concert. She would undoubtedly wear a long dress, but it would be of a late-afternoon type, perhaps an ensemble of long dress and short jacket.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A Wife's Problem With a Husband Who's a Rolling Stone

"Dear Miss Fairfax

"I have a marriage problem which is affecting the family welfare. My husband has a hobby to move every eight months to a year

"He can't seem to stay more than a year in any one place. We have four small children, and it's hard work to pack and unpack all by myself, and he won't give me a hand. This has been going on now for twelve years, and I'm fed up with it. He wants to move again, and I'm unwilling.

"I have told him I'm not going to move because the children and I like the apartment where we are. His only answer is: 'If you don't move, I will pack my things and go.'

"Now, Miss Fairfax, I've taken a liking to this apartment because we have been here longer than anywhere else, and it seems more like home. To make things more comfortable, I have suggested putting a stove in the living-room to make it warmer for the children. But no, he wants a steam-heated flat and I know we couldn't afford one. Besides we'd only be there for a few months and move again—

"He has bills to be paid, and do you think he will face them? Indeed, no, I have to do all the dirty work turning off bill collectors, etc. But to see him going down the street, anyone would think he was in the millions. Well-dressed, and the family don't come into the picture at all. Shall I move again, or stay where I am reasonably happy?

"I don't see why where we live should make any difference to him, as he comes home late at night, has his supper and goes to bed. And I who am here all day long, haven't a word to say against our home and its accommodations. At times I feel I should let him go, and 'keep on rolling along'.

Troubled."

The question is whether this lady, who finds herself married to the proverbial rolling stone, is depending on him for the maintenance of herself and her four children.

If she has an income or is able to earn sufficient to remain in the apartment which seems more like a home after all their comings and goings, there is no reason why she shouldn't stay. She need have no fear about his returning; her husband will come back whether he likes the apartment or not. That type of man always does.

It's not the apartment that he objects to, or any home, past or future. He is driven by his own restlessness and lack of adjustment to life. Perhaps a psychiatrist could cure him, or he might be able to cure himself if he could reason himself out of this fruitless moving.

It's obvious that unless he can take root somewhere, he will never be able to pay the bills with which he is constantly faced. People who are never contented anywhere are trying only to get away from themselves, though they never admit it. Innate restlessness abounds in the higher as well as the lower brackets.

Before the European war we used to meet this type of American on high-powered ships, rushing from their own country to Europe and never able to settle anywhere. They wander constantly in search of their promised land which no tourist folder ever revealed. The rich have the price of this inner restlessness.

But in the case of my correspondent, with the four children and all the packing to do, if she has any means of remaining in that apartment I hope she will continue to do so.

Goldilocks Needs Her Eggs

VIRGINIA VALE . . .takes good care of her pretty blonde tresses.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN THE pretty blonde has over-bleached her hair and gives her top-mop a shampoo, she has the surprise of her happy young life. Soap suds won't stick; they roll off her "haid" like water on a duck's back. Hair shafts have become like jute.

She will find solacement in the egg shampoo which will not only clean her glory crown perfectly but soften and relax the hair shafts. For the ordinary growth of hair at least seven eggs are necessary. Seems like a lot of uncooked omelet, but fewer will make a poor job of it.

Eggs should not be beaten much, just thrashed a little with a fork. Add two tablespoonfuls of cold water. Rinse the hair with a bath spray, have a current of water strong enough to stagger you. Apply half of the eggs, friction them in until they foam like lather. Get busy with the spray, use the rest of the eggs, give a final rinsing. After that a quart of water, to which the strained juice of two lemons have been added, should be poured over the head.

Many a Goldilocks uses eggs all the time instead of soap. They give the hair a live, glisteny look which makes it attractive and puts on the highlights.

When eggs are used as a shampoo medium for the white-haired lovely, only the whites are employed. The hair has a rinsing to remove surface dust and the whites of three eggs are frictioned into the scalp, after which they are removed with the bath spray. A second application of more egg whites brings them to a stiff broth. It is not necessary to have the rinsing water cool. If it is hot enough to make the eggs curdle, one need not worry. The brush removes these deposits.

Egg white, combined with a little lemon juice, makes an excellent bleaching-astringent pack. Spread on a clean surface, let it remain until it dries, rinse away with clear water. It's very grand for soft tissues and a complexion that has gone a bit dingy.

Magic in Ovalizing Long Face

By HELEN FOLLETT

GIRLS with long faces—we mean the kind one is born with; not the kind one makes when the world doesn't suit one—are ever seeking to attain the effect of a lovely oval contour. That this presto-change act can take place through the magic of hairdress and make-up has been demonstrated by the charming Joan Bennett.

No matter what the hair stylists recommend in the way of pomps and uppity rolls, Joan will have none of them. They make the face appear longer, so she clings to her naive centre parting. She is dead agin locks slapped down at the sides; hers fly free. She, like all wise women, believes in the charm of the coiffure that is soft and simple.

Placing Rouge

Placing of rouge is important. Don't bring it too close to the nose, not far out at the sides; Mama Nature never designed that pattern. Have the application triangular rather than round or elongated.

Miss Bennett has a number of "must do's" for ovalizing: Keep the facial lines horizontal, beginning with a coiffure that is flat on top and full behind the ears. Use the natural eyebrow line. (That rule goes for girls with all types of faces.) Eyebrows extended too far at the sides widen the forehead and make the chin appear small and thin by contrast, a state of affairs to be avoided by the ducky with the long phiz.

Start the eyebrow on a line directly above the inner corner of the eye, sweeping slightly upward, then descending at the far end to a delicate point. You must not be lavish with the crayon, sending the line too near the temple.

Upper Lid Only

On the subject of eye shadows, use only on the upper lid. Apply the pigment freely close to the lashes to give expression and brilliance to the eyes. Do not carry them close to the eyebrows. That's too much of a good thing and will make the long-faced lassie look lithographic rather than romantic and picturesque.

Miss Bennett suggests that the lipstick should follow the normal pattern, except at the ends of the lips, which should be given fullness. Full lips shorten the face.

Now then, my gentle readers, get busy and see what you can do.

An enjoyable evening is in store for lovers of music who attend the Band Concert which will be given in the Capitol Theatre on Sunday evening, March 31st., at 8.30 o'clock under the auspices of the members of the St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E.

With the kind permission of the Officer Comandant, the band of the R.C.A.F., Trenton Airport, under the direction of Flight Sergt. Hinchey. It is requested that only children accompanied by their parents attend the concert.

The members of the St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. are indefatigable in their war work and are deserving of the encouragement and financial assistance of the public. A silver collection will be taken at the concert and it is trusted that the response will be liberal.

Following is the program which will undoubtedly prove to be most entertaining:

God Save The King

Always a welcome for the well-styled casual frock, that can be worn right through the day. One such model is in black silk crepe, with pleats and tucks forming the square yoke, and with the lower section of the skirt also tucked and pleated.

The heavens appear frequently as the inspiration for print designs this Spring. A charming daytime dress is silk crepe in moonstone blue with crescent and full moons, stars and planets in dark blue, red and white. Pleated skirt and tucked surplice neckline.

Take a step in a wedge shoe for comfort. For dancing in a strap shoe in black satin with strips of gold and silver kid on the wedge heel and across toe. Strap is of silver kid edged with gilt kidskin.

Very kind to most types is the felt homburg, ribbon bound, with plenty of misty veiling. It is seen in all white, navy, pink, cocoa brown and black, and is an ideal choice for the suit.

DR. DAFOE'S COLUMN on the Quintuplets and the Care of Your Children

THYROID

As pointed out here a few days ago, a baby born with an abnormal thyroid that supplies him with no thyroid secretion, can grow up in normal fashion, if his condition is recognized early enough and the proper treatment carried out.

Today it is in order to consider another disease of the thyroid, which often makes its appearance in children between the age of ten and twelve. It is a disease called hyperthyroidism and occurs in girls more often than boys.

Usually the first symptom noticed is an increasing nervousness. The child loses ability to concentrate on any one game or problem. She tends to jump around in flighty fashion from one activity to another, easily bored and easily deterred if there is any problem confronting her. Such a child appears at times to be brighter than the average and frequently answers questions and makes remarks that seem years ahead of her age. In spite of this her teacher will complain that she doesn't do well in school and will complain of her inattention.

Such a child will be thinner than normal and although her appetite will be excellent she will continue to become thinner. Such children are often unstable emotionally and will suddenly show a tendency to cry over small disappointments that a year before wouldn't have bothered her at all.

Sooner or later she will show signs of heat intolerance. When others are comfortable in a room, she will complain of the heat. If her mother goes to her room in the middle of the night she will find that the child has thrown off most of the bed clothes. She may find it difficult to get to sleep, but once asleep, she sleeps soundly.

As her condition becomes worse, she grows more and more irritable and fussy. Her playmates will be mystified by her sudden outbursts of anger over trifles. She will tire easily and will no longer be able to keep up with the others in strenuous games.

Another symptom will be noticed in the eyes. These often take on a peculiar staring look. They often seem to be sticking farther out of the child's head.

One thing I have always found dangerous in connection with hyperthyroidism in a child is the threat to the heart. You always find that such a child has a very rapid pulse, meaning the little heart is working much harder than it normally should. This alone can do some injury, and if it is complicated with some other disease—rheumatism for instance, damage to the heart is quite apt to be serious and permanent.

Some children exhibit all the symptoms we have just discussed, some exhibit only a few, but in any case they usually point to an over active thyroid which is a serious disease in children.

Play Workshop—in Every Home!

By Garry Cleveland Myers, Ph.D.

FORTUNATE is the little child who, from the time he begins to scribble and put things together with a purpose, is encouraged to create. When he calls a mound of sand no higher than a walnut nor deeper than a cup, a mountain or a lake, he is encouraged to go on creating if his mother is able to see the mountain and the lake; so, also, if the mother can see the river, road, house, bridge or animal which the youngster symbolizes with a bit of paper, blocks or a mere mark.

Treated so at home, this little child, on entering kindergarten or first grade, is prepared to go on creating there. He makes things of paper, crayons, cardboard and wood. He cuts, pastes, colors, builds and fastens things together according to a plan in his head. Things begun at home he takes to school and things begun at school he carries home. His playmates come in to create with him. They work and play and talk together. As this little tyke creates at home and school, he not only gains new manual skills but also gains more urge to go on creating.

As I go about the country, visiting in many school, I am gratified to find here and there, in the upper grades, junior and senior high school, instruction in the crafts. Children there are learning to make things for fun, the kind of things they can keep on making for fun as long as they live.

To illustrate, I recently dropped into a classroom of the Academy High School of Erie, Pa. What I saw in the art room impelled me to entreat Miss Margaret Lord, the teacher, to write me some notes on what she is doing there and why.

Miss Lord believes that as children grow up, they should graduate into real craft work.

"Wood whittling should turn into wood carving," she states. "Making clothes for dolls should turn into weaving and leather work . . . All of us need to create things with our hands today. . . .

In Other Arts

"There are a great number of students who are not paper art-minded. Before this year they had to go on more and more discouraged. . . . Now they are working in clay, leather, plastics and metal. Not just the slow students, of course, but any one who wants to change from the regular art course may do so at any time."

Most of us will heartily endorse Miss Lord's enthusiasm for cultivating craftmanship at school as a means of preparing for permanent home enjoyments and promoting mental health. With the increasing hours of leisure facing our children, how fortunate they will be if they have learned to make many things just for fun. Good education prepares the whole family to make things at home, not to earn, but to enjoy. A workshop for play in every home!

Solving Parent Problems

Q.—Some children with ability to do college work reach the end of the senior year in high school before they discover that the courses they completed in high school won't supply them with sufficient credits to enter college. How might this be avoided?

A.—Through conferences of parents with home room teacher and principal when the youth's courses are planned for each term, beginning not later than the seventh or eighth grade. The school should assume responsibility for effecting such a conference.

The Stars Say

For Saturday, March 30

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

A DAY in which very definite progress is to be made in the way of stabilizing the affairs and marching on to security and success is indicated by the lunar aspects as well as mutual configurations. The latter suggest the employment of tact, diplomacy, strategy and intrigue rather than open and direct methods and technics. This is due to the possibility of the opposition of those in power and authority. In all, industry, perseverance, steadfastness, sound ideas and practical programs are assured enduring results.

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of opportunity for putting the affairs and the fortunes on a solid foundation, fidelity, sound plans and workable projects winning against possible opposition from superiors, employers or others whose support is desired. Strategy, cleverness, intrigue or subtlety are factors for enduring success and security.

A child born on this day may have all the solid and practical arts and skills and realize attainment of sound aims and ends by strategy, tact and diplomacy. Elders may be generous with gifts, bequests or other benefices.

The next chart is complimentary to the last one. It shows the low exports of butter in 1937 to 1930, the relatively high exports of cheese from 1927 to 1929, and also miscellaneous exports for the same period.

Cheese is chiefly responsible for our exports, and in 1934 constituted practically all our exports of butterfat from the country. In 1927 to 1931 our exports to the United States, particularly in milk and cream, as shown under "other exports", were relatively high.

Table No. 3, which follows, deals with our total exports in the form of butter, cheese and miscellaneous for the period 1927 to 1938 inclusive.

The "Levy Scheme", which I will now deal with, is well known, I think, to practically everybody in the dairy industry, or at least they have reason to know of it by this time as the matter has been frequently mentioned. However, some explanation is no doubt necessary before going into the retails of my study of the scheme.

The purpose of the levy scheme is to increase the returns to the producer for his butterfat, and the method of doing this is, briefly, as follows:

An assessment would be made on all butterfat produced. I do not know what method would be followed in collecting such an assessment.

From monies collected through the assessment a bonus would be paid on exports of butterfat. The amount of the bonus would be determined by the amount of the collections and the amount of exports.

The amount of the bonus would be made known and paid to the exporter on proof of export. This would mean, theoretically, that buyers for export would be in a position to add to their export price the amount of the bonus. Buyers for domestic purposes would have to compete with these prices, therefore the whole price structure would be raised, the raise being equivalent to the amount of the bonus, and the domestic price would be made equal to the world's price plus the bonus.

In studying the scheme I have asked myself, and tried to answer, the following questions:

(1) The object of the scheme being to raise the price of butterfat, will it, if successful, increase our production? I have answered this question in the affirmative, and estimated that fat production will increase at the minimum rate of 12½ per cent. per annum.

(2) Can we collect a levy on all butterfat produced If not, on how much can we collect? I have answered this by saying that we can probably collect on 66.66 per cent. of our production. I make this estimate on the assumption that collections are only practical on butterfat that goes through manufacturing establishments, which of course eliminates all fat used on farms.

(3) To work out a chart on this scheme, we must assume many things and work a great deal on theory. In doing this I have taken as a starting point the year 1938 and called it the "first year". The total production of butterfat in 1938 was 551,958,257 pounds, 66.6 per cent. of which is equivalent to 367,972,172 pounds. It we decide to collect one cent per pound on this 66.66 per cent. we should get $3,679,721.00. We decide to pay a bonus of two cents per pound butterfat on our exports (which is equivalent to between four and four and one half cents per pound on cheese) and as our exports for the year 1938 amounted to 38,139,652 pounds we pay $762,793.00. Collections of $3,679,721.00 minus bonus of $762,793.00 leaves a credit balance of $2,916,928.00 after our first year's operations.

We now proceed to our second year, and as already stated, we have an annual increase of 12½ per cent. on our production, which is equivalent to 12½ per cent. of 551,958,257, or 68,994,782 pounds. This increase of 68,994,782 pounds plus our first year's production of 551,958,257 pounds represents our second year's production amounting to 650,923,039 pounds. The procedure as outlined for the first year then follows right through year after year.

I have worked on the assumption that our domestic consumption remains at the first year's figure, consequently our exports each year increase in proportion to our increased production over that of the first year's production figures.

Alongside these figures of levy and bonus, however, should probably be set, if the scheme is to be effective as its proponents believe, the increase in returns to the producers for all butterfat they sell, by an amount equivalent to the bonus. In other words, you bonus exports of, say, 50,000,000 pounds and you increase the returns to the producer on all butterfat, including that sold on the domestic market as well as that exported. Taking, for illustration, domestic sales at 350,000,000 pounds and exports at 50,000,000 pounds, a total of 400,000,000 pounds, the gross benefit to the industry would represent $8,000,000.00 (400,000,000 lbs., at 2 cents). From this amount the levy of $4,000,000.00 would be deducted, leaving a net benefit of $4,000,000.00 to the industry in this hypothetical case.

If these theories actually worked out in practice the life of the scheme would be six years. Following it one more year, we would have $8,636,046.00 available for bonuses but our requirements for this purpose would be $13,103,178.00. Consequently there would be a deficit of $4,467,132.00.

I have not taken into consideration the expense of administrating the scheme because I have not the faintest idea of what it might cost.

It will be interesting at this point to quote from reports of the Australian Stabilization Scheme, which is exactly the same as his levy scheme:

(May 30, 1930) "As a result of the operations of the Scheme, there is greater confidence in the stability of the industry, and dairy famrers have been encouraged to devote greater attention to improvement of herds, conservation of fodder, and fertilizing pastures. In addition to this, other primary producers have extended their operations to dairying, and the result has been reflected in increased production in all states."

(June, 1931) "The bounty during the calendar year 1930 remained at 4½d. per pound and was reduced to 3½d. as from January 1, 1931 and then again reduced to 3d. per pound as from April 1, 1931. Owing to continued heavy production and export, coupled with considerable falling off in domestic consumption, the bounty was again reduced to 2½d. per pound as from April 11, 1931.

"For the year ended June 30, 1933 the levy was 1¾d. per pound making a total of £2,794,733-19-10. The bonus for the same period was at the rate of 3d. per pound, making a total bonus of £2,767,040-15-4.

"The year 1934 was never completed as the scheme was concluded in April 1934. It existed from January 1, 1926 to the end of 1933, — eight years."

There are undoubtedly many commendable features about this scheme and a study of the full report regarding the operations of the scheme in Australia would indicate that it was beneficial to the producers of that country. On the other hand, if the scheme should be put into practice and proves successful in that the price of butterfat is made attractive to producers, increased production can be expected, and consideration must be given to what the probable effect of increased production may mean when the scheme is discontinued.

CONCLUSION.

1. The potential production of butterfat in Canada is greatly in excess of our present production and the tendency is definitely towards increased production.

2. Domestic consumption of butterfat is at a high level but increased consumption appears reasonable in the form of whole milk and cheese.

3. The United Kingdom market has absorbed approximately 70,000,000 pounds of butterfat in the form of cheese in 1925. There is nothing to indicate that the quantity had the effect of lowering prices. It might be concluded we could increase this quantity without any detrimental effect. I would recommend that a board or committee representing the industry be set up to study this whole question. Something of this kind seems more imperative today than ever before, as production, because of war requirements, is likely to be increased, which may have the effect of aggravating our present difficulties when peace returns.

MR. J. F. SINGLETON:

"WEIGHING OF CHEESE" AND "THE CHEESE AND CHEESE FACTORY IMPROVEMENT ACT"

From 1914 to 1932 an officer of the staff of the Dairy Branch of the Department of Agriculture was engaged in investigating the weighing of butter and cheese. This officer passed away in 1932 and as his services were requested by producers and exporters to only a limited extent during the latter years of his service, the position was allowed to lapse. Between 1932 and 1937 only two requests for the services of such an officer were received by the Dairy Branch of the Department of Agriculture. In 1937, the Executive of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association requested that the position be revived, and a competent officer appointed thereto. Early in 1938, a member of the staff of the Division was signed to this work. The officers of the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association were advised that the services of this Investigator of Weighing of Butter and Cheese were available to the industry, and further publicity was given through the press and through the monthly Dairy News Letter, issued by the Department. Requests for the services of the Investigator were not numerous during 1938, and as a result, the information derived from his services was not as extensive or as valuable as it might have been.

In 1939, another officer of the Dairy Division was assigned to the work, and in order to facilitate the work he was provided with an automobile. During the past season this officer did not await requests from the factorymen for his services, but on his own initiative followed up cases of differences as between factory weights and weights of the Official Weigher at Montreal. He also visited country grading stations and cheese factories for the purpose of ascertaining just what the actual conditions were.

The Investigator checked the weighings of 388 shipments of Ontario cheese and, according to his reports, these 388 shipments showed an average loss of 4.13 pounds per 5 boxes. Thirty-two of these shipments of Ontario cheese, or slightly less than 10 per cent. of the shipments weighed, showed both losses and gains as between the weights marked on the boxes and the weights as determined by the Investigator. That is, 32 of the shipments of Ontario cheese checked had been weighed so inaccurately that some cheese in the shipments weighed more than the marked weights, while other cheese of the same shipments weighed less than the marked weights.

A feature of the work of the Investigator was to re-weigh at Montreal cheese which had already been weighed by the Official Weigher. Samples from 41 shipments of Ontario cheese which had been previously weighed at Montreal by the Official Weigher, were re-weighed by the Investigator of Weighing for purposes of verification, and in each case, the same samples from each shipment as weighed by the Official Weigher were re-weighed by the Investigator. In most, but not in all cases, the re-weighings by the Investigator were done on the same days as the cheese had been weighed by the Official Weigher, and the employees of the Official Weigher never had knowledge as to what days the Invstigator might be engaged in re-checking their work. The average loss as shown by the Official Weigher with respect to the 41 shipments of Ontario cheese was 7.2 pounds per 5 boxes, whereas the Investigator of Weighing showed an average loss of 7 pounds per 5 boxes. It is interesting to note, however, that while the Official Weigher showed an average loss on 114 shipments of Quebec cheese which were weighed, amounting to 5.77 pounds per 5 boxes, the Investigator showed an average loss of 5.85 pounds per 5 boxes on samples from the same 114 shipments. Combining the figures just given of Ontario and Quebec cheese which were re-weighed by the Investigator, the average loss shown by the Official Weigher on 155 shipments was 6.48 pounds per 5 boxes, whereas the average loss shown by the Investigator on the same 155 samples was 6.47 pounds per 5 boxes.

Of the Ontario cheese which were checked at Montreal by the Investigator after they had been weighed by the Official Weigher, 26 shipments or 63.4 per cent. of the total shipments of Ontario cheese re-weighed, were reported by both the Official Weigher and the Investigator as showing exactly the same losses. On 7 shipments of Ontario cheese, the Official Weigher showed less loss than the Investigator. In practically all these cases in which the two weighers differed in their reports, the Department's Investigator showed one cheese of the 5 checked to weigh 1 pound more or one pound less than the Official Weighr had shown.

319 shipments of Ontario cheese were weighed at country grading stations and factories. 125 Ontario factories were visited and cheese already boxed and marked by the cheesemakers as to weight, were re-wighed in the factories by the Investigator. Of the Ontario cheese weighed by the Investigator at the factories, 15 shipments were re-weighed by the Investigator in Montreal, and showed an average loss between the two weighings (first in the factories and later in Montreal) of 4.95 ounces per box.

Summarizing the comments of the Investigator of Weighing in reporting on his visits to cheese factories, the following information is obtained:

(a) one Ontario maker was weighing the cheese when removed from the press but was not re-weighing them when the cheese were boxed. The practice followed was to deduct one pound from the weight of the cheese as determined from the press;
(b) scales which were out of order, rusty and weighing heavy were reported as in use in 46 of the 125 Ontario factories visited;
(c) scales not properly balanced were reported as in use in six Ontario factories;
(d) 85 of the 125 Ontario factories visited were reported as making no allowance for the required over-weight at Montreal, which is ½-pound per cheese, nor for shrinkage in transit, which according to the shipments weighed averaged 4.95 ounces per box;
(e) 32 factories visited showed cheese in the same shipments which were overweight and others which were underweight;
(f) none of the scales used in the Ontario factories for weighing cheese were indicating weights which were too light;
(g) no Ontario makers were giving too liberal an allowance for shrinkage;
(h) one Ontario factory was using to weigh cheese, a scale which had been rejected by an Inspector of Weights and Measures, and
(i) one factory was using a weight which had been rejected by an Inspector of Weights and Measures and in this latter case, it was reported that the Inspector of Weights and Measures had broken the faulty weight so that it should not be any longer used, that the cheesemaker was still using the pieces of the broken weight.

To sum up the results of this year's investigation of weighing, nothing has been revealed which indicates that any improper practices exist in connection with verification of weights of cheese and butter at Montreal, but there is plenty of evidence to indicate

(a) that weighing of cheese in many factories is done on scales which are inaccurate;
(b) that many makers are careless in weighing cheese in the factories, and
(c) that many makers are allowing insufficient overweight to take care of shrinkage between the factory and Montreal, and to allow for the ½-pound overweight required when the weights are verified at Montreal. Since the rules governing the verification of weights at Montreal require that cheese weigh ½-pound over the marked weight, and since the Investigator's work shows an average shrinkage of 4.95 ounces between the factory and Montreal, makers should allow about 13 ounces per cheese over the marked weight if the cheese are to check out fairly accurately in Montreal.

It is anticipated that the services of the Investigator of Weighing will be available during the current year, and in all probability he will follow the same procedure as in 1939, that is, without special invitation from either seller or buyer, he will check weights of cheese in warehouses at Montreal, in country grading stations, and in cheese factories.

The use of inaccurate scales and the application of careless methods in weighing should be discontinued. It is anticipated that during the coming season Inspectors of Weights and Measures will require that scales in curing rooms be verified as to accuracy as well as scales used on the milk receiving platforms.

During the past year, reports of the Investigator of Weighing were, in many cases, mailed to the cheesemaker or factory owner. During the coming season, such reports will, as far as possible, be mailed to the salesmen or secretaries of the factories so that, as far as possible, the information obtained will be available to those primarily concerned, namely, the milk producers.

THE CHEESE AND CHEESE FACTORIES IMPROVEMENT ACT.

The Cheese and Cheese Factories Improvement Act was passed by Parliament and received the Royal Assent in May, 1939. Th Act provides for financial assistance to the Canadian cheese industry through payment of:

(a) part of the costs of amalgamation or consolidation of existing factories;
(b) part of the costs of standardization of cheese pressing equipment;
(c) part of the costs of insulation and/or refrigeration of cheese factory ripening rooms, and
(d) premiums on the production of cheese of high quality.

AMALGAMATION OR CONSOLIDATION OF FACTORIES.

Under authority of the Act, the Government pays half the cost of new material, new equipment and labour utilized in reconstructing an existing factory or in building and equipping a new factory, provided:

(a) that each reconstructed or new factory replaces two or more existing factories, and
(b) that the cheese ripening room in each factory so reconstructed or built is efficiently insulated and equipped with mechanical refrigeration to control the temperature of the ripening room.

It is also required that in such reconstructed or new factories, the cheese ripening room be equipped with shelves not more than four rows high, sufficient to receive the make of cheese during seventeen days at the peak of production, and that, in addition, there will be in the ripening room sufficient space to box and pile the cheese made during one week of the season of greatest production.

Amalgamations of existing factories are, and have been for some years, proceeding steadily in the Province of Quebec, but such amalgamations as occurred in that province during 1939 were already under way when the Act was passed, and since the Act is not retroactive, these amalgamations did not come within the provisions of the Act; neither has this provision of the Act yet been utilized in the Province of Ontario.

There is nothing in the Act to oblige owners of factories to consolidate two or more existing factories into one unit, but it is felt that in many instances, there would be definite advantages in such consolidation. The Act simply provides assistance which may be secured provided those primarily concerned decide to consolidate the business of two or more existing factories, into one.

STANDARDIZATION OF CHEESE PRESSING EQUIPMENT.

During 1938, a study was made of the United Kingdom market requirements with respect to dimensions and weights of Canadian cheese. Briefly, this study indicated that while cheese ranging in weights from 80 pounds to 100 pounds were desired by various buyers, there was a general feeling that the heavier cheese should be produced through increasing the height rather than the diameter of the cheese.

A survey of pressing equipment in use in Ontario and Quebec, made by provincial officers during the latter part of the season of 1938, indicated that about 75 per cent. of the pressing equipment in use in these two provinces was designed to produce cheese 15 inches in diameter, and that the remaining 25 per cent. of the equipment produced cheese of 15½ inches and 16 inches in diameter.

Provision was made in the Cheese and Cheese Factories Improvement Act and the regulations made thereunder, for financial assistance to the extent of one-half the cost of standardizing pressing equipment on a basis of not more than 15 inches in diameter. Consequently, a regulation was enacted last spring, under authority of the Dairy Industry Act, which reads as follows

> "Any cheese for export from Canada after the 30th day of April, 1942, shall have been pressed in hoops not more than fifteen (15) inches in diameter, at a height of twelve (12) inches above the bottom of the hoop, inside measurement."

It will be noted that this regulation allowed three years to make the necessary changes in pressing equipment, and it was felt that this length of time was reasonable, since the Government had arranged to bear one-half of the costs involved.

Approximately 50 applications for financial assistance on account of the cost of standardization of pressing equipment have been approved by the Department. The cost per factory varies with the number of presses to be altered and the number of hoops to be changed, but the average cost per factory is approximately $222.00, which is divided equally between the factory and the Department.

ASSISTANCE IN IMPROVING CHEESE RIPENING ROOMS.

For many years prior to 1937, there was a constant tendency on the part of many makers to shorten the length of time during which cheese were retained in the factories before being shipped. Legislation enacted in May, 1937, required that cheese for export to the United Kingdom, Northern Ireland, or Europe should not be placed in boxes for shipment before the tenth day after the cheese were made. Owing to the general adoption of the practice of holding cheese in the factory during a shorter period than now required, some of the newer factories had not adequate space in the ripening room to hold the cheese for the required length of time. The Act provides financial assistance towards the cost of enlarging such ripening rooms, to the extent of one-half the cost of such enlargement, and also provides for financial assistance to the extent of one-half the cost of efficiently insulating and refrigerating ripening rooms.

In order to secure such assistance, the ripneing room, as is required in connection with factories amalgamated under the provisions of the Act, must be provided with sufficient shelving—not more than four rows high, to receive the make of cheese during seventeen days at the peak of production, and there must be sufficient space in the ripening room to box and pile the cheese made during one week at the peak of production.

Application for financial assistance towards the cost of insulation and/or refrigeration of ripening rooms are being received in the Department practically every day. Approximately 85 applications for financial assistance towards the cost of insulation and refrigeration of factories have been approved by the Department, and by far the greater part of the applications for financial assistance on account of the installation of refrigeration units have been received from the Province of Ontario.

The cost of insulating and refrigerating the ripening rooms of factories depends largely on the size of the ripening room to be insulated and the extent to which the ripening room is already insulated. The ripening rooms of some factories have, in the past, been sufficiently well insulated that the required expenditure in improving such insulation is very limited. The cost of the refrigeration equipment varies, of course, with the size of the room to be cooled and the volume of cheese being made. That is, the larger the room and the more cheese which are put into it each day, the larger and the more expensive is the refrigeration unit required.

As already stated, financial assistance is provided towards the cost of enlarging existing ripening rooms of factories if such enlargement is necessary to comply with the requirements concerning the amount of shelving and floor space required. Excluding applications received in connection with which efficient enlargement could only be secured through building entire new rooms, the cost of enlarging where necessary, insulating and refrigerating existing rooms has varied from approximately $670.00 to $1440.00 per factory, with an average cost of approximately $1320.00 per factory. That is, the average cost of enlarging where necessary, efficiently insulating and refrigerating the ripening rooms has been approximately $660.00 to be borne by the factory and $660.00 by the Department.

BENEFITS TO BE DERIVED FROM REFRIGERATED RIPENING ROOMS.

Control of temperature in the ripening rooms, particularly during hot weather, will prevent deterioration of quality of cheese which results from holding them in temperatures which are too high. The quality of Canadian cheese has suffered, not only as a result of excessively high temperatures during the summer months, but also as a result of too low temperatures in the ripening rooms during the early spring and late fall. Proper insulation of the ripening room, as is required if the temperature is to be controlled during the hot weather, is equally advantageous in maintaining proper temperatures during seasons of the year when the outside temperature is lower than suitable for proper maturing of cheese. It is much easier and less expensive to keep the ripening room sufficiently warm during cold weather, if it is properly insulated. One factory ripening room which has been insulated has been maintained at a temperature of 60 degrees during the current winter by means of a 2000 watt electric heater used about twelve hours daily.

Owners or managers of factories improving the insulation of the ripening rooms and installing refrigeration units were asked to advise the Department of the dates on which the refrigeration units commenced to operate. Statistics concerning the cheese from such factories graded between the dates on which the refrigeration units commenced to operate and the 30th September, 1939, and for corresponding periods of 1938, were compiled. Some 32 factories of those which provided the Department with this information as to when the refrigeration units commenced to operate, had the units in operation a sufficient length of time before the 30th September to warrant their inclusion in a tabulation of the grading returns during these periods of the two years.

The following statement shows result of these comparisons of grading of cheese from a number of factories in which mechanical refrigeration units were installed:

Wild Fistic Battle Climaxes Victory of Toronto Leafs Who Defeat Red Wings 3-1

Leafs Enter Finals of Stanley Cup Series by Taking Two Games in Row From Detroit

SEVENTEEN FINED

(By Jack Calder, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Detroit, March 29—(CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs awaited an opponent for the Stanley Cup finals today for the third time in three years, but the National Hockey League never before witnessed a scene such as marked their entry to the last stage of the play-offs.

The Maple Leafs stepped through the semi-finals last night by defeating Detroit Red Wings 3-1 in a game that ended with what every authority in attendance called the wildest free-for-all in the league's history. The Leafs took the best of three rounds in straight games.

From the bitter battle of wrestling, fist-swinging and hockey, Hank Goldup of Toronto Club emerged as the hero with two goals. Robert (Red) Heron scored the other Toronto goal while Syd Howe got Detroit's counter with 40 seconds to play.

After Howe's goal the battle started, though there had been flare-ups all night. Gus Marker of the Leafs and Sid Abel of Detroit collided at the Toronto blue line.

"He high-sticked me and I gave him the butt end in the tummy," Marker said afterwards. "Then people piled in."

Players Drop Sticks

Players dropped their sticks to fight. Over the boards piled those who had been on the benches. Captain Red Horner of the Leafs and centre of much of the early scrapping, came off the penalty bench.

Paired off, the combatants slugged one another from one end of the ring to the other. Then melees of four, five and ten players would develop. A fresh fight would start and some of the duellists would drop what they were doing to rush to the new battle.

It stopped after 12 minutes because everybody got tired. Referee Teddy Graham, a former Red Wing player, wiped off the ice-chips his clothes had gathered while he sprawled in half a dozen melees. Then he conferred with Frank Calder, the league president, and the other official on the ice, linesman Donie McFayden.

Seventeen Fined $25.

Every player had come over the boards—there were 17—drew a $25 fine. Abel and Marker got misconduct sentences and Horner, for coming from the penalty bench where he had been serving a tripping term, got a $25 fine, another minor penalty and his second misconduct penalty of the night.

"Sure, I've fought with players all over the league and I've been cut open and I've led the league in penalties for years," Horner said. "But I've never seen anything like that before."

Coach Dick Irvin of Toronto said: "We were lucky that we didn't come out of that thing with a lot of serious injuries that would have put a tremendous handicap on us for the finals. The only decent thing that can be said about that free-for-all was the fact that no player swung a stick. They dropped their sticks and gauntlets and fought with bare fists."

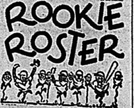
Started in Second Period

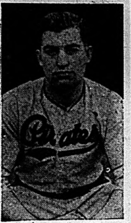
Trouble started in the second period. Alex Motter of Detroit and Horner came together early and Motter swung at the Toronto captain. They were pulled apart and given penalties.

At the penalty bench Motter harangued Horner and the red head dropped him with a right to the temple that raised a huge bump. Again they were pulled apart, but a woman spectator clouted Horner from behind with her hand bag and he had turned around to strike out again when he saw who his antagonist was.

Outstanding Rookie

Kilby MacDonald, 24-year-old native of Ottawa, has been named as the outstanding rookie of the year by the Canadian Press poll. He got fifteen goals and thirteen assists as a utility forward for the Rangers and was ranked twenty-first among the N.H.L. scorers and sixth among the Rangers.





MAURICE VAN ROBAYS, outfielder, Pittsburgh Pirates ...... came up late in 1939 from Montreal where he walloped the ball for a big .320 average...... one-time semi-pro star in Detroit, his home town ......begun his pro career with Ogdensburg in 1937 and belted 43 home runs....moved to Knoxville......stands six feet and weighs 190 pounds......bats and throws righthanded.

CALGARY TAKES SMOKE EATERS IN 3 STRAIGHT

First Time Team From Calgary Has Entered Western Senior Playdowns

PROTEST THROWN OUT

Trail Claimed One of Calgary's Players Was Ineligible to Play in Series

Winnipeg, March 29 (CP)—Calgary, which has never won a western senior hockey championship, is represented in the western final this year by a team strong enough to knock over the present holders of the world amateur title in three straight games.

Calgary Stampeders battled Trail Smoke Eaters down to 6-1 defeat at Calgary last night to sweep the best of five series. Smoke Eaters, who won the Allan Cup in 1938 and toured Europe last season, winning the world title in Switzerland, were outclassed by the Alberta champions who won the first game 3-0 at Trail and the second 5-2 in Calgary.

Trail's protest of the first game on grounds Calgary played an ineligible man was thrown out by the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association executive. It was ruled that Joe Shannon, was played a year ago in Nelson, B.C., made his home in Calgary and could not be regarded as an "import." Stampeders have four other "imports"—the limit permissible.

Reach Semi-Final

Port Arthur Bear Cats, 1939 cup champions, seem certain to be Stampeders' opposition for on home ice last night they scored a second consecutive 6-1 victory over the Saskatchewan titleholders. Third game of the best-of-five series will be played in Regina tomorrow.

Port Arthur juniors did not fare so well. Opening a best-of-three western junior semi-final series here with Kenora Thistles, Manitoba champions, the Ports lost 5-4 when Vin Jorgenson of Thistles broke a tie with just 11 seconds left to play. The second game will be here tomorrow.

The other western junior semi-final continues at Edmonton tomorrow with Edmonton Athletic Club, 1939 western champions, leading Regina Abbott-Generals 2-1 in a best of five series.

Pittsburgh Hornets Back in Running For In.-Am. Crown

(By the Canadian Press)

As scrappy a team as they come Pittsburgh Hornets are back in the running today for the International-American Hockey League championship.

The Hornets were beaten soundly by Hershey Bears in the first game of their semi-final playoff series, but they fought back last night for a 4-2 victory that forced a deciding game in the best-of-three series.

Winner of the third game will meet Providence Reds for the league crown. The Reds blanked Indianapolis Capitals 2-0 last night in the deciding game of their best-of-five round.

Little Sammy McManus and veteran Tony Aurie shared the glory in the Pittsburgh victory, both had a hand in three goals with identical records of a goal and two assists.

Lorne Duguid and Harry Currie were the other scorers for the Hornets who took a 2-1 lead in the first period and were never headed.

Harry Frost and Terry Reardon scored for Hershey.

Between the Lines

with
Ken J. Colling

Those who have headed the Belleville 'Quintes' for the past two years are getting rather itchy under foot and anxious to garner a strong junior "B" squad for next year's O.H.A. campaign, but from street rumours we hear the club executive is getting little sympathy or support from the O.H.A. or the C.A.H.A. Already members of the Quintes' executive have made scouting trips to Oshawa and Toronto seeking prospective junior "B" puck material for the 1940-'41 season, but the rules distinctly say that only two players may be transferred to one junior club as imports in the same playing season, a rule which is going to be strictly adhered to says Secretary Billie Hewitt.

Not satisfied with what they saw in the west, the heads of Belleville's junior pucksters are planning to take in the Perth "Blue Wing" - Qubec junior champion series at Ottawa next week. The Quintes need at least five players another year, if they entertain visions of reaching the junior "B" round robin series. The Cook-Yanover-Holway aggregation must remember that Coach Wally Elmer's Kingston Juniors of this year are all eligible to play junior in 1941, except one player. However, a goal-keeper, defenceman and one complete forward line would make the Quintes a strong contending squad in the junior ranks next year, but the O.H.A. says it is only permissible to import two players in one season. So what?

Belleville and district hockey fans would gladly welcome a strong junior hockey team into the sport realm of the Hume Arena, but what of the prospective players which were brought to light through the Belleville Juvenile Hockey Association this past winter? Actually this year's Belleville junior hockey club was a much better team than the average run of fans thought. Individually they were superior to Kingston's squad, but the lack of an adequate grouping left the Quintes over-confident when they met Kingston here. The local kids had not lost a single game all year, prior to their clash with Kingston here. They had come from behind to tie Kingston down in Kingston and took matters too lackadaisical here. The Oshawa kids, now in the provincial finals, had their work cut out to beat Kingston, so we contend the local team was a better squad than was shown on paper. Incidentally they only lost one game all season, but that loss proved the straw that broke the whole show and resulted in oblivion for the local kids.

With one exception the 1940 Quintes were the products of a local juvenile project and there are those in Belleville who still insist that with proper coaching and handling, Belleville can still produce as good hockey players as Kingston, Peterboro, or any other city along the line. Now that juvenile hockey has been established in Belleville additional executive strength is needed to bring the local teen-aged puck sponsorship up to the point where it will be a major sporting industry which will produce most prolifically the object of its intentions — Belleville hockey players. If four or five local business men would associate themselves in an active capacity with the Belleville Juvenile Hockey League, the future of hockey in Belleville would take on a much brighter hue and we would not have to bring in players from every part of the countryside to ice a strong team of either juniors or intermediates.

Do you remember when:—Australia's wonder horse, Phar Lap, died of colic at Menlo Park, Calif., eight years ago today. The big red gelding travelled 10,000 miles to win the $50,000 Agua Caliente handicap with a preliminary race, bringing his total earnings to $332,750. He was bought as a yearling for $800.

When two hockey teams from the Trenton and Camp Borden R.C.A.F. camps met in an exhibition game at the Hume Arena last night, there wasn't a single O.H.A. registered player on either club. The Trenton "Flyers" beat their Borden airmen contemporaries 5 to 3. The teams were composed of the personnel of groundmen from individual squadrons from each Air Port .

SPORT SPICE—In the wildest free-for-all ever seen in a hockey game, the Toronto Maple Leafs made it two straight over the Detroit Red Wings, to advance to the Stanley Cup finals. Radio fans sat in their accustomed comfort when the lid blew off in the wildest fight ever staged during a hockey game. . . . Seventeen fines of $25. each resulted from the melee, that resembled a ten-ring stampede, rather than a three-ring circus. Officials were helpless as the Leafs and Wings squared off with even the goalkeepers stepping into the fray . . . Black eyes, bloody noses and general bedlam featured with women fans even taking part and the fans today are still talking of the incident. . . While all this was going on the Rangers beat the Bruins 1-0 as Shibicky laid a ten-foot pass on Pratt's stick for the only goal. . . . The Bruins lost the services of Art Jackson, who sustained a broken ankle and now the Bruins must win in New York on Saturday night or they're dead pigeons. The Leafs meet the Bruin-Ranger winner.

Many Junior Teams Repeat Successes Of a Year Ago

(By the Canadian Press)

There's a note of similarity to this season's Memorial Cup playdowns in Eastern Canada and those of a year ago.

When Verdun Maple Leafs won the Quebec crown last night they became the third junior team in the east to retain their district title and there's a strong possibility that Oshawa Generals will make it four out of five.

The Maple Leafs, who beat Quebec Aces 5-1 last night and 7-5 in the two-game total goals series, joined Charlottetown Royals and Perth Blue Wings as repeat performers. Only the North Bay Trappers, dethroned as Northern Ontario champions by Dome Porcupines, are definitely non-repeaters.

Perth already has accounted for Charlottetown in the first round of Memorial Cup play, just as they did a year ago. They hope the coincidence won't go too far, however, for in the next round they meet the Maple Leafs who put them out last season.

The Quebec-Verdun game was the only one in the east last night either in junior or senior series. The senior playdowns continue tonight at Verdun where Sherbrooke Red Raiders meet Joliette Cyclones in the second game of the Quebec semi-final.

Raiders won the first game of the total goals round 11-6 and by winning, or protecting their margin tonight, will qualify to meet Montreal Royals in the Quebec final.

BABE PRATT OF RANGERS SCORES GAME'S ONLY GOAL

New York Team Secures Distinct Edge in Series With Boston Bruins

SCORE IS 1-0

Shibicky Fed Pratt 10-Foot Pass, Who Was Partially Unchecked Near Crease

Boston, March 29—(CP) — New York Rangers, individually, set down the value of Babe Pratt's latest goal today in the neighborhood of $800, by far the highest valued of the few the big baby-faced defenceman from Kenora, Ont., has scored in his few seasons as a professional hockey player.

The $800 is approximately the difference in playoff money for each player on a team in the Stanley Cup semi-final and the players on a club in the final. And there wasn't a Ranger around town who wasn't absolutely, positively certain the Blue-shirts would be in the final against Toronto Maple Leafs.

Pratt did for the Rangers last night what the betting men and thousands of fans thought wasn't possible. He smashed home a goal after four minutes and 27 seconds of the third period, giving the Rangers a 1-0 victory over the champion Boston Bruins on their home ice and a lead of three games to two in their best-of-seven semi-final.

The sixth game will be played Saturday night in New York where the Bruins have won only once in 11 games and have been shutout in their last three starts.

No Score for Two Periods

For two periods the teams, who had won two games each before the home fans, traded checks and rushes evenly. As usual the odd play burst past the defences at either end and, as usual, goalies Frank Brimsek and Dave Kerr had turned the opposition back. That went on for 44 minutes.

Then the Bruins made the mistake of leaving Pratt partially unchecked by the crease. Alex Shibicky fed him a 10-foot pass from the left boards and Pratt put it through Brimsek. It was the third straight shutout for Kerr in the series.

The Bruins came out of the fray, a thrilling, hard-bumping 60 minutes, in worse shape than when they went in with Desse Smith and Mel Hill so seriously injured they could not play. Before they were through, Art Jackson fractured two bones in his right ankle and Captain Dit Clapper wrenched his left ankle.

The Bruin management recalled centre Terry Reardon from Hershey Bears of the International-American League to replace Jackson for Saturday's game. It is probable that Clapper and Smith will play then but Hill, injured in the second game, will remain out of action because of an injured leg.

Louis Confident Of Beating Paychek In N. Y. Tonight

New York, March 29—(AP)—There's a reservation on the 11.45 p.m. train to Chicago tonight in the name of J. Louis.

The same J. Louis — the "J" stands for Joe—has a date to defend his heavyweight championship against Johnny Paycheck of Des Moines at 10 o'clock in Madison Square Garden for the entertainment of some 15,000 customers and the benefit of the Finns.

There were few boys and girls —if you could find any at all—willing to wager against Louis making his train connection. Yet there was a growing belief among the inner circles along cauliflower causeway in the last 24 hours that maybe Paychek might make enough trouble and delay the bomber enough to force him to cancel his compartment.

Promoter Mike Jacobs figures the fight will pay as well as the Godoy-Louis festivities Feb. 10, which drew less than $2,000 short of $90,000. Whatever the total take this time, the Finnish Relief Fund cuts in for 10 per cent of the gross. Then Louis, who draws down his usual 40 per cent, is going to turn over 7 1-2 per cent of that and Paychek will donate 2 1-2 per cent of his 20 per cent purse.

CHARLIE CONACHER TO WED ACTRESS THIS FALL

Charlie Conacher, who during the past season held down a position on the American's defence line, has confirmed the fact that he will wed beauteous Mary Dees, who rose to fame by standing in for the late Jean Harlow in that star's last picture Saratoga. Conacher has played for most of the teams in the N.H.L. during his hockey career, but has lost much of the spark with which he rose to fame when playing with Toronto Maple Leafs.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

(By The Associated Press)

Tampa, Fla., March 29 (AP) — Ival Goodman, Cincinnati Red's crack rightfielder, still is a target for injuries. The slugger, who was lost for a good part of last season as the result of an injury in the all-star game, was left behind when the Reds went to Havana recently for fear of something happening. So yesterday he was "pinked" on the back of his right hand by one of Cliff Melton's fast balls and will be on the shelf a few days.

Havana, Cuba—Lyn Lary is the latest player to get a chance at St. Louis Cardinals' wide-open third base slot and it is believed the veteran will get every break now that some of the rookies have been weeded out. Lory made his first appearance against the Cuban all-stars yesterday as Don Padgett also broke into the lineup as catcher.

Lakeland, Fla—Fears of certain young Detroit Tigers that they might be traded "down the river" to St. Louis Browns apparently were ill founded. Donald Barnes, President of the Browns, was in town, but not to buy or trade. He was reported seeking to lure the Tigers to San Antonio, Tex., for training next spring—to give the Browns big league competition at their home camp.

Sarasota, Fla.: Boston Red Sox will break camp today after playing their Louisville farm hands. After being rained out of two consecutive games, Manager Bucky Harris is eager to subject his pitching staff to another minor league test before the club heads northward in the company of the Cincinnati Reds.

RUSSIAN SHIPS

Vladimir Mayakovsky which were intercepted in far eastern waters and brought into Hong Kong on suspicion of carrying contraband destined for Germany are being handed over to French authorities.

"The Allied navies have always acted in close co-operation in contraband control and the present case is one of those where for administrative reasons, it has been found convenient to transfer the ships from the custody of one ally to that of the other.

"Neither of these ships has been released and examination for the purpose of contraband control has not yet been completed."

German Freighters Ready to Sail

Amsterdam, March 29—(AP) — At least 20 German merchantmen laid up in Netherlands East Indies ports since the outbreak of war have started loading cargo and making other preparations to sail.

Their plans are being kept secret but speculation is rife in the East Indies that they will attempt to run the Allied blockade and land their cargoes at Vladivostok for transport through Soviet Russia.

Germans were reported today to have made large purchases of rubber, copra, palm oil and other raw materials.

(A Reuters news agency dispatch from Batavia identified three of the German vessels as the Nordmark, 7,750 tons; the Rendsburg, 6,200, and the Vogtland, 6,608. The dispatch said the ships had been painted grey and their names obliterated.)

German ships are scattered at various East Indies ports in Sumatra, Java, Batavia and Celebes. Before being permitted to sail, the vessels must pay port fees and other charges.

Many of the ships have been attached by court order and a part of their machinery removed. The machinery would be restored by court order on payment of outstanding charges.

TRENTON FLYERS WIN EXHIBITION FROM BORDEN 5-3

Camp Borden "Airmen" No Match for Local "Birdmen" in Friendly Game

Squadron pucksters from units at the Trenton and Camp Borden R.C.A.F. bases played an exhibition hockey game at the Hume Arena last night, which resulted in a 5 to 3 win for the Trenton pucksters. No O.H.A. players appeared on the line-ups of either sextette, the game being purely a friendly affair between the ground crews of respective squadrons at the two camps. The game was played on rather soft ice, but following a first period attack the Trenton "Flyers" were never headed and period scores were 2-0 and 4-1.

Scores Early

Ladeau scored the first goal for Trenton on a pass from Hartman after four minutes of play. A few minutes later Dadswell scored the second goal for Trenton. In the second period Trenton scored twice while Camp Borden scored once. Borden made a rally in the third period to score twice and almost drew even with their Trenton rivals, but Gallant scored the fifth goal for the locals on a long shot from the blue line.

Senior Opponents To Work Out in Toronto Before Game

Toronto, March 29 (CP)—Railbirds at Maple Leaf Gardens will get an opportunity today to size up Sydney Millionaires and Kirkland Lake Blue Devils, who open their best of three game series in the Eastern Canada Senior Amateur Hockey semi-finals here Saturday night.

For Blue Devils, it will be merely a light work-out, as they already have had an opportunity to get the feel of the Gardens. They played the first two games of their all-Ontario championships against Toronto Goodyears there—and found the rink much to their liking.

Following Kirkland Lake, the Maritime champions will skate on the ice for a stiffer work-out as they have been idle since they ousted Hull Volants from the Allan Cup playdowns in three straight victories.

The possibility of brother-versus-brother act being staged in the first game faded as Manager Doc Ames of Kirkland Lake announced that Jo Jo Graboski would probably miss the first game of the series because of a shoulder injury that kept him out of the last two games his team played against Goodyears.

Graboski's brother, Tony, younger and huskier, has been the backbone of the Maritime team.

AT THE BELLE

"Northwest Passage"

Affording Spencer Tracy and Walter Brennan roles which are believed to be more colorful than those which have twice won the Academy Awards, and elevating Robert Young to the threshold of stardom, "Northwest Passage" opens next at the Belle theatre.

Filmed entirely in technicolor the picture is the result of two years' careful planning. To obtain the most picturesque and rugged backgrounds possible to duplicate those in Kenneth Roberts' best-selling historical adventure drama, the studio sent the entire troupe to Idaho for six weeks of location. It added a few early story sequences at the studio.

Superhuman Courage

The story is one of courage, fortitude and almost superhuman physical triumph. Tracy as Major Rogers takes his hardy Rangers, including Young and Brennan, on a secret mission to wipe out a village of marauding Indians. Thus starts a thrilling journey during which the men carry their heavy boats over a mountain, struggle for days through swamps, cross a river torrent by forming a human chain, stage a harrowing battle with the Indians and then better their way back home, starving, weakened and in tatters.

As Rogers, Tracy has the most rugged role of his career and as colorful as those which won him awards in "Captains Courageous" and "Boys Town." Brennan, twice winner of best supporting role awards, has a character role of opportunity, and Young's part as the young artist is by far the best ever given him.

King Vidor Directed

King Vidor directed and Hunt Stromberg produced, with a cast of more than 3,000 playing Rangers, Indians, British soldiers and other characters taken from Roberts' novel.

The feminine cast is headed by Ruth Hussey, as Young's sweetheart, and Isabel Jewell as a white girl captive of the Indians. Among the many outstanding roles in the story are those played by Nat Pendleton, Louis Hector, Robert Barrat, Lumsden Dare, Donald McBride, Douglas Walton, Addison Richards, Hugh Sothern, Regis Toomey, Montagu Love, Lester Matthews and Truman Bradley

The Belle British newsreel will be exhibited on the same program, on the week end matinee the first closing chapter of the popular serial "The Daredevils of the Red Circle" will be exhibited.

Smart Show

The combination of romance, adventure and action are revealed in "Congo Maisie" with Ann Sothern and John Carroll. It is a story of Africa up to date, and is one of two smart features now being presented at the Belle.

Granny Get Your Gun

That grand old lady of the screen who can intimidate desk Sergeant in the best "Apple Annie" manner or melt the heart with the sweet expression of Whistler's "mother," is a two-gun moll now.

In Warner Bros. "Granny Get Your Gun" which is the companion feature attraction, May Robson takes a one-woman stand against a group of assorted ruffians and gives a small western mining town a brief taste of what the old days must have been like. Miss Robson's correct role is a variation of her beloved gruff-but-tender roles.

"The Democratic Way," the much discussed topical film that has created much interest during its Canadian presentation will be exhibited on the same program.

Sex Fiend Slays 17-Year-Old Co-ed

State College, Pa., March 29 — (CP). (AP)—A sex-mad killer brutally assaulted a 17-year-old freshman co-ed of Pennsylvania State College and then beat her to death yesterday a few hours after she had returned from a happy Easter vacation at her home in Wildwood, N.J.

The torn, bruised body of Rachel Hutchinson Taylor was found in the driveway of the Lemont Consolidated School, about three miles east of the campus, by a school janitor reporting for work.

Police and physicians described the slayer as a "sex-fiend."

The girl's skull was smashed by a blow from a blunt instrument. Her clothes were ripped from the upper part of the body. Her face and body was scratched and lacerated. Coroner Charles Sheckler fixed the time of the slaying at around 3:30 a.m., some two hours after she arrived on a bus.

Two other co-eds who met a friend at the bus station recalled seeing Miss Taylor walking toward the spacious campus with her suitcase in hand. But she never arrived at the dormitory where she lived.

There was a possibility the girl was slain near the Shiloh Church, four miles from Lemont School and a scant mile from the State Motor Police barracks at Rockview State Prison. Her blood-stained handkerchief, the suitcase, a text-book and a notebook were picked up near the church.

BOY BURGLAR TRAPPED BY HIDDEN CAMERA

When a burglar alarm sounded in the office of Paul Cunze, theatre manager, of Plymouth, Mass., the janitor rushed upstairs only to find the intruder gone. There was a graphic record of intruder's presence, however, in the form of his self made portrait. Film from cunningly devised camera trap, which set off a flash bulb and rang a buzzer when disturbed, was developed and above photo resulted. Paul J. Dupuis, 18, allegedly confessed when confronted with the picture.

"Blondie on a Budget," featuring Blondie, Dagwood, Baby Dumpling and Daisy, the family pooch, is now at the McCarthy Theatre. Charles Starrett in "Man From Sundown" and "The Shadow," are also on the same program.

ROOM 731

By ESTA METCALF

In a quiet corner of the hotel lounge, Allan Hale, tall, slim-waisted and 40, was talking to a woman. His apparent interest in the person seemed a trifle incongruous.

Even an average man would realize her dress was a bit too fussy, her hair a little too curled, for one in her middle 30s; and Allan Hale was trimmer than the average man.

Hale was from the Winter's Detective bureau. A crook, named Joe Crunch—'Chicago Joe'—had pulled the injured-husband-of-a-marital-triangle once too often and the collections he had nade to soothe his outraged feelings had at last started the authorities on his trail.

Because Allan Hale was better than the average observer he also noticed the fine brown eyes and the sensitive mouth of the woman to whom he was talking, and they troubled him.

The trap was ready to spring but instead of the usual satisfaction there was a feeling of regret.

So, it was with a mental squaring of his shoulders that he plunged into the last act of the present drama.

"Dorothea," he said, "I'm going away tomorrow. Won't you let me see you just this once, alone?"

"But, my husband, if he should come back sooner than I expect—"

"You said he wouldn't be here until the tenth."

"Yes, I know, but—"

"Say you'll come—dear. I'm in Room 731. Come about nine."

While the woman hesitated, a man brushed by her shoulder.

It seemed to awaken her into replying a low "very well."

At a rooming house, not far away, Joe Crunch entered his room hurriedly. Throwing his hat aside, he walked nervously up and down.

His light gray eyes flashed to the door as it opened.

The woman, Dolly Wade—Dorothea Wade when occasion demanded—came in.

"Well," snapped the man, "how'd you make out?"

"You ought to know. You neard it all. You nearly knocked me off my feet when you bumped against me."

"Yeah, well I was afraid you was gettin' cold feet. You know I ain't knowed you very long, an' I ain't takin' any more chances'n I have to. You goin' to be there," anxiously, with a jerk of the head toward the direction of the hotel, "at nine o'clock?"

"Yes."

"Me 'n Jakell be there at 10. Snap the lock when you go in. Be sure about the lock.'

A distant clock was just striking nine when Dolly Wade, now Mrs. Dorothea Wade, left the elevator and walked with quick, alert step to the room numbered 731. Entering, she hesitated in the doorway a moment—an imperceptible click — then she closed the door.

"I'm glad you've come," said Hale as he lifted the wrap from her warm shoulders.

"Didn't you think I would come?" he asked.

"I hoped you would. Come over here and sit down." He indicated the large davenport drawn in front of the fire.

Fifteen minutes passed. The clock on the tower struck the half hour. The air in the room was warm and soft, drowsily comfortable.

"You spoke of your home by the river—Allan. Tell me more."

"Yes." He was musing. "I haven't been there for a good many years. I'm always promising myself that some day I'm going back there—to live. Probably I'll take it out in dreaming." His resonant voice continued the story of his hopes.

Nine-forty-five.

Two men in the rooming house of Joe Crunch and Dolly Wade were putting on their hats, getting ready; Joe, who would walk in at just the right moment to find his pseudo-wife in a rich man's arms, and Jake, the detective, gathering the evidence. Hale, whose appearance had marked him as a man who would shrink from unsavory publicity, was the quarry.

Nine-fifty-five.

The firelight in Room 731 was still as rosy and the air just as delightfully warm—but, a chill tenseness was there, too.

For the man and the woman, the zero hour was approaching.

It was funny, too.

Both had approached this crisis many times before, but this time something was different.

Hale was thinking of his men waiting down in the lobby for his signal; and Dolly Wade—the corners of her mouth were drooping.

A man like Hale would never forgive a woman the blow she was to deal him.

She sat up straight and faced him squarely:

"Allan," she said deliberately, "I'm going to tell you something."

The clock was striking 10.

The knob turned on the door.

"Dorothea," said Hale, taking her in his arms, "there's nothing you need tell me. I know. Remember this, no matter what comes, I shall see you again." He drew her closer to him and kissed her soberly. "I'm sorry," he whispered—and the door opened.

The formalities were soon over.

A check was signed.

Dolly said little, only nodding tearful affirmations to Joe's artfully wrathy interrogations.

As the trio left the room, Hale stepped quickly to the telephone and called the desk:

"Hello", he spoke, abruptly but distinctly, "this is Hale. There is a man standing by your desk. Name Connors. Put him on this line."

A second's pause.

"That you, Connors? They're coming now—Yes, Jake Snow, too.. Look out they don't split . . . The check is in his watch pocket . .

Well, that was that.

Hale turned from the telephone slowly.

Thoughtfully, he picked up a square of cardboard from the floor. He fingered it idly until the printed name of his agency attracted his attention. Winter's Detective Agency. When could he have dropped it? Turning it over he saw that something was scratched in pencil on the other side. "I'm sorry, too. I was going to tell you."

Now what did that mean and who wrote it on one of his cards?

The jangle of the telephone interrupted his thinking.

"Yes? — What!" explosively. "Brown's Agency made the pinch! The girl—yes, of course, I know she was from them—but, I thought her bunch would be waiting outside. In the elevator, huh? — damn! Say, Connors, where is she now?—Asked you to call a taxi for her — That's great! Tell her to wait a minute and there'll be one there right away."

"Now, what," said the mystified Connors on the other end of the line, "is there 'great' about having a rival outfit get the jump on us like that!"

Little Benny's Note Book

We were eating supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and I said, Hay pop, hay ma, I've decided not to ask you to give me a air rifle for my birthday after all, so you might as well stop thinking about it.

Well for land sakes I never have thought about it in anything but the most negative way ma said. But I must say I'm filled with pleased relief to hear that you've given up the idea, because in these gassly times of wholesale slawter the least we can do is to keep our childerns thought as far as possible away from anything that remotely smacks of a military angle, so at least the coming generation will be peace minded with no false misconceptions about the so called glory of war, she said, and pop said, Those are my sentiments too, a hundred percent in the shade.

Sure, pop G, ma, what's a use of me having anything like a air rifle that I could hurt innocent people with even by axsident when I didn't mean to? I said. Holey smokes I might even hurt an innocent bird if one happened to get in the way while I was shooting up in the air, so that's why I wouldn't take a air rifle even if you tried to force one on me, I said, and ma said, There's not much chance of that for goodness sakes, and pop said, The possibility is so remote as to be practically non existent. The important thing is, a realistic way, he said.

Sure, pop, it would be different if it was something I could only hurt myself with, I said. For instants why couldn't I have a pair of flying rings like I saw the advertizement for in The Boys Universal Companion? You hang them up in the cellar or some place by ropes, and there's a little book comes with them discribing the different tricks you can do on them just like in a circus, so how about that, pop, how about that, ma?

Their answer both meaning no but taking longer to say.

Police Search For Missing Man

Mystery surrounds the disappearance of Norman Yull, 7 Railway Terrace, in this city, police learned late yesterday. According to his family Mr. Yull left his home to vote during Tuesday's Dominion election, but failed to return. A check-up made by Mrs. Yull yesterday, through the Returning Officer's files, revealed that Mr. Yull had not arrived at the community polling booth nor had he voted at all. Detective Fred Isard was then notified of the mysterious disappearance and last night and today extensive searches were made for the missing man. However, at noon today police learned that on a previous occasion Yull left home in a similar manner, but returned some days later without an explanation of his whereabouts. A wife and two children are at home.

Fresh Egg Receipts Cause Price Drop

Toronto, March 29 — Trading showed no improvement on the quiet pace of the last few days on the Toronto open produce market yesterday. More pronounced weakness was evident in egg prices, but butter held steady.

Slightly increased fresh receipts were responsible for the decline on the egg market. Demand was reported as fair, with Government inspected lots of graded eggs moving at ½-cent per dozen premium. Prices dropped a full cent on all grades in the graded division, while the three top grades eased ½ cent in the retail section.

Prices held to former levels for butter despite the prevailing slow dealings. Current supplies were still light, although there was some pick up in deliveries, and offerings generally were not heavy.

BUFFALO BULLS BATTLE FOR LEADERSHIP

Allentown, Pa., March 29—(AP)— An annual battle is on among young bulls for leadership of the buffalo herd at Trexler-Lehigh Game Preserve. Gamekeeper Harry Freey said the first was an 800-pound bull, found gored to death. The herd leader is determined at the start of the mating season and reigns for a year.

ENVOY RECALLED

Franco-Russian relations have become more strained as Soviet envoy to France Jacob Suritz has been recalled to Moscow and "relieved of his duties as Soviet Ambassador to France." Semi-official despatches from Moscow stated that the ambassador was recalled at the request of the French government. French officials refused to deny or confirm the reports.

ALLIED FRONT

In this connection, significance was seen by many onlookers in the release by Britain of the Russian freighter Selenga yesterday after a talk between Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax and Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky. The ship, loaded with metals and ores, had been held at Hong Kong since Jan. thirteen.

(Later reports said the Selenga was seized by a French warship. It was announced officially that the Vladimir Mayakovsky, another Russian merchantman detained by the British, will be handed over to French authorities.)

Three Ready for Dash

It was noted also that Sir Robert Leslie Craigie, British Ambassador to Tokyo, told an audience of important Japanese figures yesterday that constructive statesmanship could bring the aims of British and Japanese policy into "full harmony."

A clue to the importance of the Orient in the blockade against Germany was supplied in a Reuters, British News Agency, dispatch from Batavia, Dutch East Indies. It said three German steamers, the 7,750-ton Nordmark, 6,200-ton Rendsburg and 6,606-ton Vogtland had loaded full cargoes of produce, and were being painted gray in the expectation that they would dash for Vladivostock, Russia's important Pacific port.

The Admiralty announced that a German plane dropped five bombs on a convoy in the North Sea last night but did no damage. The German News Agency, DNB, had declared that the attack dispersed the convoy with a number of bomb hits and that a French destroyer was "successfully" attacked in the English Channel.

Air Chief Marshal Sir Edgar R. Ludlow-Hewitt, who organized the spectacular British air raid on the German island of Sylt last week was promoted to Inspector-General of the Royal Air Force.

London, March 29 (CP)—Yesterday's meeting of the Allied Supreme War Council was "a final reply to all attempts to sow discord" between Great Britain and France, The Daily Mail said today.

"The Allied front becomes firmer" the newspaper said. "In war they fight as one nation. After the war they will work together. There will be no separate peace with Germany on the part of either Allies. The two nations will not even discuss peace terms until the questions of security and guarantees have been settled.

"This clause is of unprecedented importance. It means that the months of long differences and bickerings of Versailles will not be repeated. To reconcile British and French ideas of security in advance may prove difficult, but not half so difficult as it was the last time after the armistice.

"The Allies have no intention of imposing their will upon Europe when the war is over. They must and will co-operate in reconstruction but their unity will not be exclusive. Other nations will be invited to assist in evolving a new order.

"Here is a peace aim of incalculable value to a free Germany. It is a pledge that the new Europe will be built upon a democratic foundation."

"M. Reynaud," said the Times, "cannot have been left in any doubt that the desire for more active conduct of the war which has been expressed so unequivocally in France is shared to the full on this side of the channel.

Points to Balkans

"As an example of the need for action he pointed to the Balkans. In this spirit the War Council decided in the first place to make clear to the whole world that the unity of the Allies is now so firmly established that nothing can shake it. That is not merely a contribution towards winning the war but will constitute, after the war has been won, a sure and stable foundation of lasting peace.

"It is in this atmosphere of assured and confident unity that the Supreme War Council must have discussed questions which have been made urgent by recent developments, such as the position created by the set-back to Finland, the Allies' relations with Russia and with Italy and with other neutrals, the need for more effective application of the blockade in order to prevent Germany from continuing to draw supplies through neutral countries, and, as a particular case, the necessity of checking what seems to be illegitimate use of Norwegian territorial waters by German shipping.

"On all these matters the decisions of the Supreme War Council will likely reflect the popular conviction that the time has come to wage the war with the utmost energy and determination. The recent political crisis in France was an outcome of this conviction. Fortunately it has passed without the disintegrating effects upon which Germany had counted. M. Reynaud's position has grown much stronger since the Chamber of Deputies gave his Government such a discouraging reception last Friday.

SPEED LIMIT RAISED BY PRANKSTER

Indianapolis, March 29 (AP)— Motorcycle policeman Charles Haine telephoned headquarters to ask if the speed limit had been changed. He was told it was still 30 miles an hour. "Well," he said, "there's a sign out here that says 80 miles an hour." Two traffic department policemen hurried there with a new sign. Some jokester with a paint brush had shangeti the "3" on the old sign to an "8".

CONSERVATIVES TO DROP LABEL

In Gaspe, Quebec, where election of Maurice Brasset, Liberal, had been indicated, the result was changed to "doubtful" when the returns from Magdalen Island came in and put J. S. Roy, Independent Conservative, in a slight lead. Other doubtful seats were Maple Creek in Saskatchewan, Jasper Edson and Acadia in Alberta.

To Drop Party Label

Hon. R. J. Manion, National Government party leader said here that the party label will be dropped and National Conservative used again by those followers who sit in the next parliament.

"The National Government was proposed to meet an emergency situation," he said here. "But the people didn't want it. I said in my campaign speeches that once the emergency was over the National Conservative party would emerge united and unashamed."

Dr. Manion likely will take a short holiday before making any plans about his political future. Prime Minister Mackenzie King also might take a short vacation before meeting parliament early in May.

The first cabinet session since the election was held yesterday but only a bare quorum of ministers were able to attend and the next council will be next week. There were no announcements. Before the meeting, the Prime Minister received Sir William Glasgow, new Australian High Commissioner.

SINKS TO BOTTOM

ham, Lawrence Thomas, cook aboard the schooner, Matthew Power, engineer and Roy Purcell, boatman or apprentice pilot. All were from the Halifax district.

Three Pilots Saved

Pilots Roy Sullivan and Carl Himmelman and apprentice Edward Renner were saved. How they escaped remained unknown and doctors who attended Sullivan and Himmelman in hospital said their stories were incoherent but that apparently they had been hurled from their bunks or chairs and had managed to reach deck.

Visitors were barred from seeing Sullivan and Himmelman in hospital. One was said to be suffering from shock and immersion and the other was running a rising temperature of 102.

The tragedy was probably the worst to overtake an Atlantic coast pilot ship. Because it occurred about midnight, most of the men were believed to have been asleep below decks.

All Well Known

Nearly all of the men—most of them were related—were married, some with large families. They were known all over the Atlantic coast.

Cause of the ramming probably will not be explained until an investigation is completed in several days. It was believed, though, that the pilot vessel, an auxiliary schooner, had drawn close to the incoming freighter to allow her to pick up a pilot. A sudden puff of wind might have huffed her directly into the freighter's path.

Three Had Cast Off

Hayes and the two boatmen had cast off from the Hebridean to meet the freighter when she crashed into the pilot vessel. Sullivan and Himmelman, who were believed to be asleep, were either thrown into the water or managed to make their way to deck and jumped before their vessel went down.

But just what happened remained unclear. Doctors said neither was in condition to talk. One had a temperature of 102—and rising—and the other was suffering greatly from shock.

Hospital officials and others who had been in touch with the men said it was doubtful if the men could add anything even if reporters were allowed to see them.

Hayes, Power and McLaughlin, all of whom were some distance from the pilot ship when the freighter tore a gaping hole in her, had gone back to duty on another pilot vessel.

They, with Sullivan and Himmelman, were picked up by the freighter whose identity was not disclosed because of wartime regulations. She cruised around the spot for awhile notified shore officials at Halifax and then headed up the harbor to an anchorage.

Refuse to Discuss Collision

Its crew refused to discuss the collision other than to state they had known nothing about it until they heard the shouts of the men in the water.

Captain John Holland, coxswain of the Duncan's Cove lifeboat crew, said he had put to sea with nine men after being ordered to the disaster scene by the Department of Transport.

"It was a perfect night," he said, "visibility was remarkable and the sea was calm."

The lifeboat arrived on the scene to find a naval craft already engaged in the search.

"We hunted for more than two hours," said Captain Holland, "but couldn't find even a chip of wood. It seemed impossible that a disaster had occurred only a few minutes before."

He said the spot where the ships collided was about three miles southwest of the mouth of inner Halifax Harbor and three miles northeast of Chebucto Head.

Meanwhile, doctors from Halifax were hurried to naval and other vessels ordered out to search in the faint hope one or more of those aboard the Aberdeen might be found struggling in the water. One of the physicians, Dr. Kenneth Hayes, whose father had been a pilot, was related closely or remotely to practically every man aboard the pilot boat.

Pelham was his brother-in-law. Several others were cousins.

Nearly All Married

Majority of the men aboard the Hebridean were married and had families. The Dempseys alone had 32 persons in the three families.

The Hebridean was one of two pilot boats which maintain in turn a steady vigil at the entrance to the harbor, in storm or calm. The vessels, auxiliary schooners, beat in and out the harbor mouth awaiting incoming ships, all of which—with the exception of naval vessels whose tradition is to come in on their own—must take on a pilot.

Aged Pilot to Fill Breach

Halifax, March 29—(CP)—A sad, weatherbeaten old man prepared to take to sea today to help fill the breach caused by the tragic deaths of six of his comrades.

He was Frank Thomas, Dean of Halifax pilots. All six of the pilots who died in the Halifax harbor disaster early today served their apprenticeship with him. He has been in the pilot service in Halifax for 46 years, and is still active.

"I thought they were only joking when they told me about the tragedy," said Thomas. "My first reaction was one of thankfulness that my ship, Number One, was not on duty last night. I couldn't believe that so many of the boys were gone. Just about all of them were like younger brothers to me."

He said seven new pilots had been taken on in Halifax since the outbreak of war, and there would be a shortage now. Thomas himself was called out for emergency duty today.

He is no relation of Lawrence Thomas, one of the missing.

Too Busy to Discuss Affair

Halifax, March 29—(CP)—Tupper Hayes, one of the five survivors of the ramming of the Pilot Boat Hebridean, was in too big a hurry to get back aboard another pilot boat today to tell his father of the tragedy which took nine lives in Halifax harbor this morning.

"I wasn't talking to him," Pat Hayes said, "but his boarding mistress told me he was pretty badly shook up. However, he went back aboard the other pilot boat."

Tupper Hayes has not been without his share of the experiences that are every-day occurrences in the life of a harbor pilot. Several times he has been carried across the Atlantic when heavy seas prevented him from returning to the pilot boat.

TIGHTENING SEEN

indicate a tightening in eastern waters of the allied stranglehold of German seaborne trade already effective in the Atlantic and the North Sea. It was assumed the Allies believe France, with a long coast line and numerous bases in French Indo-China, is in a more favorable position than Britain to administer contraband control in that area.

Reports from the Netherlands-owned islands said the German merchantmen were being painted grey and that their names were being obliterated.

The East Indies, source of vegetable and mineral oils, rubber and fibres, all essential to a nation at war, constitute an extremely wealthy part of the Netherlands empire.

Lull In Europe.

A lull developed in the west, pending arrival in London of envoys from all the Balkan countries, called home for consultations with the foreign office, probably on means to block German trade in that area.

All tendencies of the war were believed to indicate the allies hope to win by strangulation, avoiding, if possible, actions which would involve heavy losses of men.

A well-enforced blockade is an effective weapon in any war, chiefly because modern nations, dependent on each other for at least part of their essential raw materials, cannot make themselves self-supporting.

The first Great War demonstrated on both sides, that an isolated country cannot both feed itself and produce the manufactured goods it needs for war.

The Allies were able to maintain command of the seas from 1914 to 1918, although Britain came dangerously close to a serious food shortage in 1917 before she completely mastered the submarine menace. Germany in that war was bottled up and exhausted by her efforts to fight and feed herself.

On the face of things, Germany should be in a better position than in 1914-18 to obtain supplies, having the support of Russia which was her enemy in the first Great War.

However, many observers believe Russia is of doubtful value as a source of home-produced supplies, and the Allies apparently hope that by checking shipment of goods through the Soviet they can repeat their feat of wearing Germany to her knees.

NO TIME LOST

Des Moines, Ia., March 29—(AP) —Mrs. Hazel Jackson, 42, didn't have to wait a minute for an ambulance to rush her to a hospital after she was seriously injured here in a traffic accident. She was taken to the hospital in the ambulance which struck her.

Industrial Conditions Continue to Improve in Ont.

Shoe Factories, Steel and Textile Industries Operting at Top Speed

BOAT SEASON NEAR

Toronto, March 29—(CP)— Industrial conditions in Ontario continue to show improvement, according to the weekly labor report issued today by Hon. Norman Hipel, Minister of Labor. Fitting out has already started on lake boats, with expectations of a heavy transportation season on the Great Lakes. War orders are still reaching many centres, with consequent increase in employment.

Brantford reports that improvement in iron, steel and textile establishments is being maintained with war equipment orders recently increasing production and staff level.

At Chatham, construction of a new Hydro line was taken up some labor.

Fort William reports work has started on the fitting out of lake boats. Textile plants are still busy at Hamilton. Rubber plants at Kitchener are working steadily, while metal trades also are busy.

Leather shoe factories are working at top speed.

London reported textile, shoe and lumber companies are all very busy. Demand continues at Oshawa for experienced machinist, tool and dye makers. An electrical plant at Peterborough is close to its 1937 level and employment is generally picking up.

Electrical firms at St. Catharines are busier than they were at this time last year although this is considere dthe quiet period.

At Sarnia, industrial conditions continue to show improvement and a number of former employes have been recalled to various industries.

HOME DESTROYED IN THURLOW TWP.

Walter Sheffield, Only One at Home at Time, Was at Barn When Blaze Broke Out

Fourth Line of Thurlow, March 29th. (Special)—The frame dwelling owned and occupied by Mr. Walter Sheffield, situated about a mile east of Corbyville, was entirely destroyed by fire on Thursday afternoon, March 28th. Mr. Sheffield was the only member of the family at home at the time and he was at the barn when by chance he discovered that the fire had started. A car was passing at the time and help was summoned and neighbors quickly responded. Their efforts, however, were useless, as the fire in the frame building had gained rapid headway and the building was destroyed. Some of the household effects in the lower part of the house were saved. It is thought that the fire was caused by overheated pipes.

Inspector Gardiner Issues Warning To All Motorists

"There has been ample warning given motor vehicle owners relative to the procuring of their 1940 motor vehicle licences, permits and operators' licences," stated a bulletin from the Attorney General's Department of Ontario, as received by Inspector Frank Gardiner of the Provincial Police here today.

"All types of motor vehicle and drivers' licences expire on March 31st and we have definite orders to prosecute immediately delinquents and those found operating motor vehicles next week and not in possession of their 1940 licences cannot expect any consideration as our department has received instructions to rigidly enforce this law enactment commencing Monday morning next," stated Inspector Gardner in warning.

When it was pointed out that district side and county roads had been blocked with the recent snow falls and it was impossible to get through, the Provincial authorities added that lost year's motor vehicle licences and drivers permits actually expired on Dec. 31, 1939, but the Department of Highways had given extensions until March 31st, which the H. T. Department deemed ample time in which to procure such licences. There will be no consideration shown, the authorities definitely stated today.

A more thorough check-up on individual operator's licences will be carried out this year as the Highway Department has reason to believe many drivers are delinquent in this matter.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Blondie on a Budget"

There's small necessity for ecstatically exclaiming: "The Bumsteads are back!" Laughter from McCarthy theatre audiences can be heard in the street, and the word is being passed around.

The Bumsteads, the laughable, lovable comic strip family which has become the screen's most popular comedy team, are back! They are now at the McCarthy theatre in Columbia's "Blondie on a Budget," most hectic of their screen misadventures, most delightful of their domestic difficulties.

With Penny Singleton repeating as Blondie, and Arthur Lake again to be seen as the happy-but-harassed Dagwood Bumstead, "Blondie on a Budget" might almost automatically be regarded as an excellent comedy. But Rita Hayworth is an integral part of the story, which, incidentally, is something new in Bumstead family pictures.

Miss Hayworth is cast as an old flame who singes Dagwood, while Blondie burns. Unwittingly stepping into an otherwise tense domestic situation—Blondie wants a fur coat; Dagwood wants to join an exclusive club; and the Bumsteads cannot afford either ambition — Miss Hayworth helps Dagwood into and out of many a tough spot and does so in a manner which merits high applause.

The Bumsteads — "Blondie" Singleton and "Dagwood" Lake — are their usual excellent selves and other major members of the cast include Larry Simms, who continues as the patient, understanding Baby Dumpling; Don Beddoe, as Dagwood's hen-pecked adviser in matters domestic, Danny Mummert, as Alvin, the boy from next door, John Qualen, Fay Helm and Thurston Hall.

"The Man From Sundown"

Charles Starrett, popular western star, in a thrilling Texas Ranger story, "The Man From Sundown" is also now presented at the McCarthy theatre, and the first chapter of "The Shadow" and an amusing Krazy Kat Cartoon, are also shown in addition to the feature presentations.

POLICE COURT

Due to the absence from the city of Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan K.C., no criminal cases were heard in today's local police court held before Magistrate E. J. Butler K.C., Albert Argent, Belleville, appeared on a charge of the theft of $6.00. His case was enlarged until April 5th., and the accused held in custody.

The parents of two children were summonsed into today's court charged with failing to send their children to school, as provided by Provincial Statute. Truant Officer Fred Wiggins was present and stated that in both cases the children were now regular attendants and the cases were withdrawn.

"That does not excuse them from attending court when summonsed", interrupted Chief Kidd as His Worship signed the dismissals.

Four inebriates appeared charged with being found intoxicated in a public place contrary to the L.C.A. In each instance pleas of guilty were accepted. Two of the accused men paid the conventional "ten and costs", while the remaining pair indicated they would have to accept 14 days in default thereof.

Police Blotter

Definite signs of Spring, according to police circles, were in evidence yesterday when two motor cars were reported stolen. Oshawa police reported the theft of a 1937 model Ford coupe, Ontario licence plates number 3N-374, while Kingston authorities reported the theft of a 1937 model Ford coach bearing Ontario licences 653-N-2.

P.C. Taylor was called to quell a disturbance at a local restaurant late last night where a member of the R.C.A.F. had entered into a controversy with employees. The matter was amicably settled, but not before a local citizen was taken to the police station and severely reprimanded regarding his actions, had interfered with the man had interferred with the office while in the pursuit of his duties. No charges were preferred as the matter was considered too trivial.

Seventeen transients shared the police station cell block along with two inebriates, who were apprehended yesterday.

CHAPTER XXXI

Sara had arrived home that evening feeling as though her life had come to an end — as though she would never recover from the bitter disillusionment she had suffered.

She found her mother reading a late edition of an evening paper, and dreaded the questions and comments that were bound to ensue.

"Sara, what is this about Mr. Carrington and Juliette Carter?" Mrs. Sidney asked in bewilderment. "I didn't know Miss Carter had announced an engagement."

"It was in an earlier edition," Sara said listlessly.

"But if it wasn't true, why should she . . ."

"Oh, how should I know!" Sara broke in.

Her mother looked at her shrewdly—saw that the incident had upset her, whatever the explanation might be. Mrs. Sidney decided to say no more. Though her heart was twisted by the pain she saw in her daughter's eyes, she was at the same time thankful that something had happened to raise doubts in Sara's mind about Curt Carrington. This, she hoped, would end their outside-the-office friendship, which she had distrusted from the beginning. Better a little pain now than worse pain later.

Sara, meanwhile, was thankful that her mother little knew how far that friendship had already progressed, and was relieved to be spared any further questions.

She somehow got through supper with a show of composure, then she pleaded weariness and retired to her room. There, at last, alone with her grief, she was able to abandon restraint and find a measure of relief in a flood of tears.

The next morning, Tuesday, it was an ordeal to go to the office, but she steeled herself to face it, and made up her mind she would start that noon to look for another job. She wished she could leave Carrington and Broderick at once, but she couldn't afford to do so until she had some prospect of another position. Meanwhile, she must bear as best she could the occasional encounters with Curt that would be unavoidable.

She had been at her desk no more than fifteen minutes when Gwendolyn Pickett appeared.

"Miss Sidney! Mr. Carrington wishes to see you—at once!"

Entering the big, private office, Sara saw that Curt was there but, after one involuntary glance toward him, she switched her eyes to his father.

"Sit down, Miss Sidney!" Sturges Carrington ordered brusquely. "I'll not waste words. We've received word that the plane bringing the duplicate set of blueprints for the Remo Dam has met with an accident. I needn't explain to you the serious position in which this places us. Without blueprints, we cannot submit our bid tomorrow!"

"Oh!"

That little gasp was all Sara could utter. Sensing what was coming, she felt a cold shiver go through her.

Mr. Carrington fixed his gaze upon her intently. "To get straight to the point, Miss Sidney, it now becomes imperative that we find the original set—and I have reason to believe that you can tell us where they are." He paused significantly. "Are you ready to do so?"

Sara had turned white, but she lifted her head proudly.

"No, Mr. Carrington—I know no more about them than you do!"

"You don't deny, do you, that you formerly worked for Poulton, Inc.?"

"Of course I don't deny it!"

"And you don't deny that, knowing the combination of my son's safe, you had the opportunity to steal—"

"Father!" Curt broke in angrily. "This is outrageous! You have absolutely no right . . ."

"Silence!" Sturges Carrington roared at him. "I'll handle this!"

Sara, however, had risen. "There's no use, Mr. Carrington, in asking me any more questions. No matter how long you keep me here, I can't tell you anything but the truth — which is, that I didn't take the blueprints."

He stared at his desk a moment. "Very well," he said finally. "If that's the stand you take, I can say no more. However, Miss Sidney, unless those blueprints have been found or returned by tomorrow, I shall have to ask you to leave Carrington and Broderick."

"Then I'd better leave right now!"

As Sara turned and plunged blindly from the room, Curt hurried after her.

"Sara!" He caught hold of her arm, halting her. "Father is distraught—he doesn't know what he's doing. I'll make him see how absurdly he's acting—I'll make him apologize! Please don't leave!"

"It's the only thing I can do," she answered coldly.

"Please wait at least until tomorrow," he begged. "Give me a chance to vindicate you! I'll find those blueprints if I have to tear the whole office to pieces!"

Sara hesitated, but finally agreed to postpone her departure. She did want to be vindicated, if there was a chance of it—and besides, she dreaded to have to go home and tell her mother what had happened.

The day, however, was one of agony. Word of the accusation against her soon got round among the other girls, and she was shunned by all of them. She knew that Curt meanwhile, was keeping his promise—knew that he was turning his own office and his father's upside down in the belief that the blueprints must somehow have been mislaid—but she had small hope that he would find them.

At the end of the day, she dragged herself home to find Vicky and Bill and the children there for supper. She found she couldn't bring herself to tell her family of her trouble, but it was torture to try to join in their merriment when the whole world seemed to be crashing about her ears. First, the shock of yesterday, and now, today, this dreadful reflection on her honesty. It was too much for one person to bear. . . .

She had, however, to stand still another jolt—unwittingly given by Bill during supper.

"I'll bet you're going to miss old Toby when he leaves, aren't you?" he remarked casually.

"Yes," Sara answered.

She knew now that she was, indeed, going to miss Toby—miss him terribly. She was longing for him this very minute—longing to have his comforting shoulder on which to lay her weary head.

Bill said teasingly, "Why not marry him and go with him? There is still time before tomorrow night."

Sara gaped at her brother-in-law. "To-morrow night? Is—is he leaving tomorrow?"

It was Bill's turn to be surprised. "Why, yes. Didn't you know? I supposed he had told you. I stopped in to see him today and heard all about it. It seems there was a sudden change in plans, so he's pulling out tomorrow—both he and Miss Lester."

"Miss Lester? Is she going, too?"

"Yes."

Sara stared down at her plate. Tomorrow! And with Sonia! Why hadn't Toby told her all this? Why hadn't she heard from him since Sunday? Was he just going to leave without even saying goodby....

CHAPTER XXXII

Though Juliette, on leaving Curt's office on Monday afternoon, had flung at him the challenge that he would "regret" his breaking of their engagement, she was far from feeling as defiant as she had sounded.

On the contrary, she at last knew she was defeated, and she alternated between despondency over her failure, and rage over the humiliation Curt had caused her by his prompt and public denial of the announcement she had given the newspapers.

All day Tuesday, she was besieged with phone calls from so-called "friends," evidently avid to get the "low-down." Though she refused to speak to them, instructing her maid to tell them all that she was out, she suffered each time the phone rang, and felt she could gladly kill Curt for putting her in this position.

There was one call, however, that she did accept. That was from George Poulton. She told herself that she might yet get revenge on Curt through George. It would be sweet revenge if Carrington & Broderick should indeed fail, while she and her millions went to the altar with George, gloatingly showing Curt what he might have had.

George tactfully made no mention of the engagement-and-denial sensation that had every one agog. It had, however, prompted his call. He knew how Juliette must be feeling, and felt that here was his opportunity to supplant "that cad Carrington."

He asked her to dine with him that evening, and she gladly accepted.

Later, over the dinner table at a night club, he exerted himself to be his most entertaining self. For a while, she responded with almost feverish gaiety, but gradually this wore off, and she lapsed into a brooding silence.

Then, unexpectedly, George started talking about business. He knew this was no way to charm a girl, but he happened to be particularly elated over something that had developed that day, and he couldn't resist expressing his elation. Besides, the development was a serious setback for Carrington & Broderick, and he had an idea Juliette would be only too pleased, at this particular time, to hear of any setback affecting Curt.

"We had a piece of very good news at the office today," he said. "We were all quite excited about it. It was bad news for another firm, and maybe it's not sporting to crow over the other fellow's misfortune, but that's business."

"What was it?" Juliette asked perfunctorily.

"Well, it's a long story, but it means we'll probably land a big contract for a dam down in South America."

"What?" Juliette suddenly leaned forward. "What dam?"

"A dam in the Remo River in Maruba."

"And you think you'll get it?" Juliette asked quickly.

George was surprised by her interest. "Yes—it looks that way. Our only real competitor is Carrington & Broderick, and now, it looks like they're out of the running. In a round-about way, we learned today that they have no blueprints to submit with their bid.

"It seems they lost their original set a couple of weeks ago, and had to have some new ones made by their agents in South America, but the plane bringing these duplicates has been forced down. As the last day for submission of bids is tomorrow, there's practically no chance the new blueprints will come through before then."

An excited gleam had come into Juliette's eyes.

"No wonder you're pleased—even if it is rather hard on Carrington & Broderick!"

She sat staring off into space, her heart pounding. So her theft of the blueprints had not been in vain! Curt's firm was in a spot! Now she had him where she wanted him! She'd make him eat humble pie yet!

Early the next afternoon, Wednesday, Curt sat dejectedly in his father's office, watching Sturges Carrington pace nervously up and down. All efforts to find the missing original blueprints had proved fruitless. The firm seemed doomed.

But Curt, at the moment, was more concerned about Sara. He had been pleading with his father in her behalf.

"Stop pestering me about that girl!" the older man exploded. "Here we are, facing ruin, and all I hear from you is a lot of twaddle about Miss Sidney! It would be more to the point if you would stop being so stubborn and make peace with Juliette!"

Curt sighed. "I've told you, Dad, that that's all out—and I mean it."

His father said desperately, "If you' won't do it for me, do it for your mother! Just stop and think what the failure of the firm is going to mean to her. She'll lose her home, be forced to give up all the things she's had all her life. All because you won't do the sensible thing and marry a girl who's simply begging to save the situation!"

It was Curt's turn to get to his feet and stride up and down.

"It's not fair," he said, 'to throw it up to me like this! After all, it's not my fault that the firm is in its present straits!"

"No, but—"

At that instant, the phone rang. Sturges Carrington answered it, then looked at Curt with a sudden light in his eyes.

"Just a moment," he said. He held the phone out to his son, and whispered. "It's Juliette! For heaven's sake, now, don't be a fool!"

Curt hesitated, then shrugged, and took the phone.

"Hello!"

Juliette's voice came over the wire in smooth, gloating tones. "Is that you, Curt? I just phoned to say that I heard an interesting bit of news last night—from George Poulton. I understand you won't be able to meet that dealine today, for the Remo Dam bids. What a pity!" She paused significantly, then added, "It's too bad you acted so hastily the other day, isn't it?"

"No!" he retorted angrily. "I'd do the same again!"

'Are you sure? Think it over, Curt. It's still not too late if you want to change your mind— but you'd better not take too long to decide or I, too, might set a deadline!"

With that, she hung up.

"What did she say?" Curt's father asked hopefully. "Son, if she's ready to forgive you, go to see her! I—I won't try to force you into anything you don't want to do, but at least patch up your quarrel with her. Don't let it become an irrevocable break. A few weeks or a month from now, you may find you feel quite differently and—and things may work out all right."

His tone was so pleading that Curt felt a stab of pity. The threat of disaster, he realized, had completely unstrung his father. Maybe it would be better to humor him, just for the time being. Anything was better than staying here and listening to his continued pleas.

"Oh, all right, Dad," he said wearily. "I'll go see her if you insist—but I don't promise anything."

He left the room, and a few minutes later, set out for Juliette's apartment.

CHAPTER XXXIII

Juliette was not surprised when Curt was announced. She had expected him—had even dressed especially with a view to pleasing his eye.

She was smoking a cigarette when he entered her living room and did not move from the deep, thick-cushioned chair in which she sat, her slim legs crossed.

"'lo, Curt," she said calmly, quite as though nothing were amiss. There was, however, a smug smile on her lips. "Will you have a drink?"

"No, thanks." He sat down on the divan, then said brusquely, "Dont think I've come because of your phone call. Let me make things perfectly clear at once. I'm here only to please my father."

Juliette lifted her eyebrows. "Your father? Ah! So he sees my point, does he—and has been taking my side?"

"Yes," Curt admitted. "But it makes no difference. I'm not going to be clubbed into marrying any one!"

"Not even to save Carrington and Broderick from going under?" she said insinuatingly.

"I don't care if it does!' he retorted recklessly.

"Then—it is about to go under?"

"I don't know. Possibly."

Juliette rose, pressed out her cigarette, and moved to a place beside him on the divan. She slipped her arm through his.

"Curt darling," she said softly, "why not be sensible? Let's talk this thing out."

"We already have."

"Yes—but things have changed since then. I don't want to 'club' you into marriage, as you so bluntly put it, but are you really going to let stubbornness and pride defeat your best interests? We could make a go of it, darling—you know we could."

"It's no use, Juliette. I've told you I'm in love with another girl and, if she'll have me, I mean to marry her."

She drew away from him. "Still harping on that Sidney creature, are you? Look here, Curt—hasn't it occurred to you that it might have been she who stole those blueprints? But of course, it wouldn't! You're too blindly infatuated to think of anything like that! But it has occurred to me. After all, she once worked for George Poulton and—"

"That'll do, Juliette!" Curt rose angrily. "I shouldn't have come here in the first place, but I'm certainly not going to stay if you're going to start picking on Sara again! I—"

He was interrupted by the appearance of Dicey, the maid.

"Scuse me, Miss Julie," said the colored girl, "but I been cleanin' your room and I found these old papers behind your dressing table. What you want me to do with 'em?"

Her seemingly trivial question had a strange effect on Juliette, who had leaped up before she finished speaking and was now hurrying across the room toward her.

"Dicey! How many times have I told you not to interrupt me when I had callers? Now go on back to your work . . ."

Juliette started pushing the girl toward the doorway.

But she was not quick enough. Curt had caught a glimpse of the wad of papers in Diceys hand, and suddenly strode toward her.

"Wait!"

He literally snatched the papers away from her, and stood staring at them with stunned incredulity. They were the missing blueprints!

Then, furiously, he whirled on Juliette.

"So you were the thief!"

She didn't answer him — just looked at him, her face white, her hand at her throat.

"Good lord!" he gasped. "I might have known! Why didn't I guess?"

His mind flashed back to that evening when she had come to his office. He now vividly recalled every detail. He had put the blueprints in the safe just before he took Sara down to the taxi, but he hadn't closed the safe until he came back. . . .

Juliette must have taken them while he was gone! Taken them because he had just told her how much depended on that contract! Taken them for the deliberate purpose of wrecking the firm and forcing him into a position where she thought she would be able to buy him! It was incredible!

"You—you—" His tone dripped with scathing contempt. "There's no word to describe any one as low as you. So this whole thing was planned—this campaign of yours to get me! You'd ruthlessly throw us into bankruptcy — throw all our employees out of work — ruin my father's life — just to gain your ends! And you dared, a minute ago to accuse poor Sara!"

Juliette went to pieces. She burst into sobs.

"Curt . . . it was only because I—I loved you and—and was desperate. And it won't mean bankruptcy—it won't mean all you say—if—if you'll only stand by our engagement and—"

"It,s not going to mean that, anyway, if I can help it!" he broke in, shoving her aside and striding toward the phone. "I'm going to call the Maruban government commission and explain that our blueprints were stolen and have just been recovered—ask them if the deadline for bids can be postponed for a few days! If not, I don't see why we can't sue you for damages—make you pay, and pay plenty, for what you've done!"

He hastily searched the telephone book for the number of the New York headquarters of the Remo Dam commission, then grabbed up the phone and made his call,

Why The Weather?

By Major A. H. Thiessen

Science Service Meteorologist

Climate and man! It would seem that if one really knew what kind of climate would be most beneficial to one's own health or inclination such a climate could be found, because climatologists have classified the earth into micro-climates. Some have very cold winters and relatively hot summers; others have a change in temperature throughout the year of less than a degree. Some have much rain, while others are practically rainless. It is probable that many would select climates that would be suitable for nothing but repose. The monotony of some climates, which may from a distance seem delightful, is enervating to the body and deadly to the activity of the mind.

SHIPS SUNK DURING WEEK

(By The Canadian Press)

The British Merchant Marine lost one ship to enemy action in the week ended March 29. One other was given up as lost being long overdue, and announcement was made for the first time that the steamship Rossington Court sank in the Atlantic after a marine accident March 13.

The total tonnage of these three ships was 19,238 tons, against which Germany lost two vessels, the 2,189 ton Edmund Hugo Stinnes, sunk by a British submarine and the 5,000-ton Ostprussen, wrecked on the Norwegian coast while evading British naval units.

The week's losses, as compiled by The Canadian Press:

	Ships	Tonnage
British	3	19,238
German	2	8,189
Norwegian	2	7,014
Danish	1	1,146

SOCIAL CREDITERS SURE OF 33 SEATS

Opposition Membership Will Include 19 Independents and One Labor

Edmonton, March 30—(CP)— As results of the March 21 Alberta election continued to trickle in today, Premier Aberhart's Social Credit Government was sure of at least 33 seats in the 57-Member Legislature.

With results in doubt in four ridings and Social Credit candidates leading in all four, the Opposition membership included 19 Independents and one Labor man. At dissolution of the last Legislature Feb. 16, Social Credit had a House majority of 32. One of the 63 seats, since reduced by redistribution, was vacant then.

Three Social Crediters elected yesterday were Mrs. R. E. Wood, in Stony Plain, J. W. Beaudry in St. Paul and Hon. W. A. Fallow, Minister of Public Works, who became the seventh of eight Cabinet Ministers returned.

Independents elected one yesterday, A. E. Speakman, conceded in Red Deer where the second count was complete except for one small poll that could not materially change his majority of 826 over H. McCullough, Social Crediter. The uncompleted second count gave Speakman 3,112 and McCullough 2,286.

GOLD RESERVE DIMINISHES

Rome, March 30—(AP)— Italy's gold reserve diminished 543,000,000 lire, about ($27,000,000), or about 15 per cent, during 1939, the annual report of the Bank of Italy disclosed today.

The reserve on Jan. 1, 1940 was 3,131,600,000 lire (about $156,500,000), compared with 3,674,000,000 lire on Jan. 1, 1939. The figures include both the actual gold reserve and the bank's holdings of foreign currencies considered the equivalent of gold.

Il Duce Confers With Crown Prince On Questions Over Italian Army

Rome, March 30—(AP)—Premier Mussolini conferred with Crown Prince Umberto today on military questions connected with that half of the Italian army which the Prince commands.

Later Il Duce, summoned the cabinet to meet him April 2, presumably for discussion of domestic affairs.

The Italian Press, meanwhile, published for the most part without comment reports of the speech in which Russian Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff outlined his foreign policy yesterday to the Supreme Soviet (the Russian legislature).

Il Piccolo said that Molotoff had "denounced bellicose manoeuvres" of Britain and France, and some papers expressed belief that Russia never would be "a British-French instrument against Germany."

An Italian source said that Pope Pius XII had received Sir Francis Osborne, British minister to the Holy See, in a series of post-Easter audiences in which the Pontiff has been seeking information on the latest developments in the international situation.

U. S. DIPLOMATS PLAY 'OMINOUS ROLE' SAY NAZIS

Claim Alleged Documents Found in Poland Prove U.S. Officials Had Helped Investigate Allied Plans to Finish Germany by War

U. S. BLAMED

Bullitt, Kennedy and Biddle Principal Targets of Nazi Press Barrage

Berlin, Mar. 30 (AP).—Sixteen alleged documents which the German Foreign Office published yesterday as "finds" from the archives of the Polish Foreign Office are only "cheap wine" compared with costly vintages to follow, a German spokesman asserted today.

This spokesman intimated that the German government is in possession of supposedly direct communications by the United States Ambassador to France, William Bullitt, and others.

Foreign Office officials invited foreign correspondents to inspect the purported originals of the documents of which copies were released yesterday.

Officials were non-committal about the date of publication of the next batch of documents. The impression was given, however, that Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and his lieutenants are waiting for someone in the United States to furnish the occasion.

The German press in displaying the Polish documents accused the United States diplomats of playing "an ominous role" in European affairs.

Comment on the alleged documents, which the German foreign office said last night had been uncovered in the secret archives of conquered Poland, pushed other news into the background as the morning papers blamed United States diplomacy in great measure for the outbreak of the European conflict.

German officialdom sidestepped comment with the assertion that the documents "speak for themselves", but promised publication of additional papers dealing with United States foreign policy.

Principal targets of the Nazi press barrage were William C. Bullitt, the

SIR JOHN GILMOUR DIES IN LONDON

Shipping Minister Dies Unexpectedly at Age of 63 Years

London, March 30—(CP)— Sir John Gilmour, Minister of Shipping died today. He was 63.

He was the first minister to die since the war began. Death came unexpectedly at his London home. The Ministry of Shipping announced a memorial service will be held next week.

He was a member of Parliament for 30 years and was Minister of Agriculture in the National Government formed in 1931. Later he became Home Secretary, retiring in 1935. He was recalled for cabinet service as Minister of Shipping shortly after the outbreak of war.

Sir John succeeded his father as second baronet in 1920. His mother was a daughter of the late David Gilmour of Quebec.

Near-Flood Waters Rout Families in Northern California

San Francisco, March 30 (AP) — Northern California rivers rose dangerously near the flood stage today, routing many families from homes that already have been inundated this year.

Residents along the Napa River, hard-hit by February floods moved out last night, with all movable possessions. The river was about three feet below flood stage.

E. H. Fletcher, U.S. meteorologist, warned of growing danger in the Sacramento Valley.

"We expect dangerous high stages, with critical conditions developing" he said. "Waters are rising in the upper branches of the Sacramento, Feather, Yuba and American Rivers."

The Yuba, Feather, and American Rivers all are tributaries of the Sacramento. Melting snow up to the 6,000-foot level in these rivers' drainage areas added to the danger caused by rains and high tides.

OFFICIAL INQUIRY INTO SINKING OF PILOT BOAT OPENS

Inquiry Will be Held Behind Closed Doors With Judge W. F. Carroll Presiding

SIX SURVIVORS

Halifax, Mar. 30 (CP).—Official inquiry into the sinking of the Halifax pilot boat Hebridean with the loss of nine lives was slated to open here at 10 a.m. E.S.T. today.

The inquiry will be held behind closed doors in District Admiralty Court, before Mr. Justice W. F. Carroll. The Hebridean went down after being in collision with a freighter in the outer harbor.

From the inquiry, it is expected, will come the story of how the disaster actually occurred. From unofficial reports, observers have gathered that the freighter sliced the schooner in two, plunging her to the bottom with the men in her cabin hopelessly trapped.

There were six survivors, and it is expected that all but the two who are in hospital will be called as witnesses. Sitting with Mr. Justice Carroll in an advisory capacity will be Lieut.-Commander D. G. Jeffrey of the Royal Canadian Navy and Captain M. H. Bloomer, Master of the Western Union cable ship Syrus Field.

Search Proves Fruitless.

Search for the bodies of the victims or for wreckage from the Hebridean was fruitless yesterday. It is believed that all the bodies still are trapped within the sunken hull. It is not known whether an attempt will be made to recover them.

The story of just how the freighter came to collide with the pilot boat may never be told. Three of the survivors were in a dory at the time and, though nearby, could not see a thing when the boats crashed. The three others managed to escape only by desperate scrambling, and had no time for observation. The ship sank under their feet as soon as they reached the deck, so they had no opportunity to see the damage.

JAP WARSHIP SUNK IN YANGTSE CHINESE CLAIM

300 Men Lost as Batteries Sink Vessel of Unknown Type

RUMORS OVER ISLANDS

Hong Kong, March 30—(AP)— The Central Chinese News Agency reported today that a Japanese warship, steaming down the Yangtse River, had been sunk by Chinese shore batteries in Southern Anhwei Province March 20, with a loss of 300 men. The agency did not mention the type of the vessel nor its size.

Meanwhile rumors were current here that Japanese military leaders had demanded that authorities at Macao, Portuguese colony on the South China coast, remove all troops from the nearby islands of Wantsai and Lappa. The Japanese also were reported to have demanded permission to conduct a house-to-house search for anti-Japanese elements in certain Portuguese areas if deemed necessary.

Neither Japanese nor Portuguese authorities here had information to substantiate the rumors.

FRENCH GUNNERS CUT DOWN GERMAN ADVANCE GUARD

Commanding Officer of Guard and Several Others Killed in Skirmish

SUCCESSFUL AMBUSH

Paris, March 30—(AP)—French machine-gunners in ambush south of Saarbruecken cut down the advance guard of a German infantry attack, killing the German commanding officer and several others, the French command reported today.

It said the Germans were sent out yesterday, under cover of a violant barrage, to attack the French flanks, but that the ambush frustrated the manoeuvre. One German was captured in another patrol fight, the French said.

Greatly increasing German artillery fire west of the Vosges mountains and the Saar River was intended to wipe out several small villages occupied by the French, but French gunners replied shell for shell, military dispatches said.

In this central area, German reconnaissance planes also were active, one being brought down in eastern France by anti-aircraft fire. The French said their aerial photographic flights over Germany continued unhindered.

"Heavy artillery fire on both sides to the west of the Vosges and west of the Saar.

"In the Saar region, enemy reconnoitring units were repulsed by our fire and we successfully laid an ambush.

"The enemy left several dead on the ground."

THREE CANADIAN PASSENGER BOATS IN WAR SERVICE

North Star, Prince Robert and Prince David Being Converted Into Armed Merchant Cruisers

STEEL BUILT SHIPS

Ottawa, March 30—(CP)— Three Canadian sister ships which operated in passenger services on the Atlantic and Pacific coasts have been taken over by the Government for war duties.

The National Defence Department announced last night that the North Star of the Clarke Steamship Company will be put into service by the Royal Canadian Navy. Its duties were not disclosed.

This vessel, which cruised the Atlantic seaboard and the St. Lawrence River in the past few years, previously was named the Prince Henry and was built for the Pacific coast service of the Canadian National Steamships, Limited. Later it was purchased by the Clarke Company.

The Prince Robert and Prince David, with which the Prince Henry was operated on the west coast by C. N. Steamships, are being converted into armed merchant cruisers, the War Supply Board has announced. The three vessels for several years were in the triangle service between Vancouver, Victoria and Seattle.

T.&N.O. CHAIRMAN, COLONEL M. LANG, RESIGNS POST

Premier Mitchell Hepburn Announces Resignation of Official Today

A. H. CAVANAUGH NAMED

Colonel Lang Offered Post of Industrial Commissioner for Railway

Toronto, Mar. 30 (CP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn announced today that Colonel Malcolm Lang has resigned as chairman of the commission administering the government-owned Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railroad. Arthur H. Cavanaugh will assume the chairmanship in addition to his duties as general manager of the railway.

The shift, approved at a meeting of the Ontario cabinet yesterday, will become effective next Monday.

Mr. Hepburn also announced that he was anxious to speed lignite development in Northern Ontario in order to reduce, as far as possible, the purchase of coal from the United States with a high premium on exchange.

Lieut.-Col. Lang has been offered the post of industrial commissioner for the railway so that he may continue promoting business for the commission. If he accepts the post, he will continue his supervision of the experimental development of Northern Ontario lignite deposits.

Lieut.-Col Lang was appointed chairman of the railway in 1934 with head offices in North Bay. Native of Eagle, Elgin County, he enlisted as a private in the First Great War and returned with the rank of major. He retired from service a few years later with the rank of lieutenant-colonel.

WANG-CHING-WEI IS PROCLAIMED HEAD OF GOV'T

Japanese-Controlled "Central Government of China" Comes Into Being

SUN'S WILL READ

Nanking, March 30 (AP)—Backed by the bayonets of his Japanese sponsors, Wang Ching-Wei formally proclaimed himself head of a new "central government of China" today as the banners of Nanking flapped limply under leaden skies.

Wang once was Nationalist China's Premier, and with Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek was the political heir of the Republic's founder, Dr. Sun Yat-Sen. Now his former associates call Wang a "despicable traitor."

Mounting a platform in front of Dr. Sun's picture, he read Dr. Sun's will and a proclamation ordering immediate cessation of the 33 months of hostilities with Japan and directing Chinese troops to "await further orders."

Ignoring the practical certainty of disobedience, Wang announced his chief aims were realization of peace and establishment of a new order in East Asia in co-operation with Japan.

Giant Negro Carries Only Bible To Tell Head Hunters Not to Kill

By R. P. CRONIN

Associated Press Staff Writer

Pantabangan, P.I., Mar. 30 (AP)—Armed only with the Bible, Sam Brown, a giant American negro from Early Branch, S.C., penetrates the wild headhunting regions of North Luzon to teach unruly pagans, "thou shalt not kill."

Coming northward from Manila to attend the headhunting peace hunting conference here we ran into Sam, known as the "Bishop" of the non-Christian tribes' church in the Philippines.

The "Bishop" is just the sort of negro one would meet in any southern town in the United States. His southern drawl is perfect, yet he speaks Spanish and four Filipino dialects—Tagalog, Ilocano, Visayan and Pampanga.

Sam came to the islands in 1899 with the United States army, having enlisted at Macon, Ga. Mustered out in San Francisco in 1902, he returned to the Phillippines immediately, having traded his weapons for the Bible.

That was natural, Sam said, for his father was an elder in the negro Methodist Episcopal church at Early Branch. His grandfather was a slave.

In the depths of the Cordellera Mountains Sam founded a non-sectarian brotherhood. "Love," he said, was the foundation of his creed and it had brought many pagans to the baptismal ceremony.

Sam claimed the fierce little tribesmen he encounters wouldn't be so fierce if they were fed, given protected lands and taught the ways of civilization. He claimed some of the recent beheadings were caused by Christians pushing the tribesmen back into the forests from lands which were once their fishing and hunting preserves.

Strict Application Of Army Decree May Hinder Nazis

Decree Requires Special Permits for All Oil Barges Passing Through Yugo-Slovia

5 BARGES STILL HELD

16 German Tankers Now Waiting for Permits at Edge of Yugoslav Waters

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, March 30—(AP)—A protest by German Minister Victor Von Heeren brought the release of seven large German barges seized by Yugoslav Danube police on the grounds they lacked special transit permits, it was disclosed today.

Five Hungarian barges still were held while 16 German tankers waited for permits on the edge of Yugoslav waters.

The possibility of future serious complications was seen in Yugoslav application of an army decree requiring special permits for all oil barges passing through the country.

Strict application could shut off the Danube to Germany as a means of getting vital supplies of oil from Rumania and Soviet Russia.

Fears were expressed in diplomatic quarters that the German protest might bring into the open what they called an undercover German campaign to prepare Hungary, Yugoslavia, Rumania and Bulgaria for the possibility of Germans taking the policing of the whole Danube into their own hands.

They said the Germans were known to have thrown out feelers in Southeastern European capitals on the grounds that continued unhampered oil traffic is a life and death matter for Germany.

Upholds Application To Revoke Appointment Of College Professor

New York, March 30 (AP)— A State Supreme Court Justice today upheld the application of a Brooklyn housewife for an order to revoke the appointment of Bertrand Russell as a Professor of mathematics at the City College of New York.

Justice John McGeehan termed the appointment of the English philosopher "a chair of indecency."

Appointment of Russell, which was to have taken effect next February, brought protest from church figures and others. Educationists, on the other hand, came to his defence, terming the controversy a challenge to "academic freedom."

The court case was brought by Mrs. Jean Kay, whose high school daughter she said, might some day attend the college.

After reviewing various criminal statutes pertaining to crimes of sex and perversion, some of which crimes Mrs. Kay in her petition charged were advocated by Russell, Justice McGeehan said it was "repugnant to the comon welfare" to encourage violation of the provisions of the penal law.

British Fliers Learning Tactics From Action Films

London, March 30—(CP)—British fliers are learning fighting tactics from action films taken during dog fights in the air against enemy aircraft.

One such film, taken from the attacking British machine, show the interception and shooting down of a German raider.

The device consists of a motion-picture camera lined up with the fighter pilot's eight guns. It operates automatically when the trigger button sets the eight guns in action. When the pilot takes his finger off the trigger, the guns cease firing—and the camera stops taking pictures. It operates with every burst of fire.

The shown only lasts about a minute. But it shows the pilot errors he would otherwise never realize and sometimes reveals mistakes which enabled an enemy to get away.

COMMANDER HAS MOBILE OFFICE

Lieut.-Col. "Pete" Shields of C.A.S.C. Uses His Sedan as Office

Aldershot Eng., March 30—(CP)—Lieut.-Col. Peter R. Shields of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps has outfitted himself with a mobile office so he can keep up with his multiple tasks when in the field.

The Army Service Corps always has been a vital cog in a war machine but it has taken on new importance by the fact this is a mechanized war. Men, guns and supplies now move on motor lorries. The day of the horse transport and pack mule is about closed. Among other things the A.S.C. is responsible for supplying and repairing the lorries so necessary to an army on wheels.

All this adds up to additional work, so the veteran soldier from Calgary who commands the Canadian First Divisions A.S.C. solved some of his problems by establishing the office on wheels. He has a small but complete wooden desk built into the rear section of his camouflaged sedan. There is a compartment for food and drink. Hot food can be taken along in thermos kits.

Not even the nightly blackout required by air-raid precautions can keep Colonel "Pete" Shields from getting on with the job. Heavy curtains can be dropped between the front and rear sections of the sedan and over all windows.

Patient Appreciates Service in Hospital

Belleville, Ont.

To the Editor,

Daily Ontario Intelligencer,

Dear Sir,—

As an ordinary patient confined to hospital bed for the past many days, the writer has had time to ponder the question of how many citizens of Belleville and residents of the outlying area realize the splendid facilities for healing, care and service offered by this city's own splendidly managed institution—the Belleville General Hospital.

Overwhelmingly crowded for weeks past with sick and ailing, superintendent and staff have carried on nobly the highest standards of nursing care and management.

May I be permitted to express through the columns of your paper my sincere appreciation for the fine and courteous service given me during my period of illness.

To highly efficient Administrator Friesen and staff I again say thank you.

TRENTON RATE SET AT 51 MILLS

Council Told Relief Allowance for Trenton Would be Cut $11,000 This Year

Trenton, March 30 (Special) — The tax rate for the town of Trenton for 1940 was set at 51 mills and compares exactly with the rate struck by council in 1939. The new rate was anounced at a special meeting held in the town hall, when J. P. Coombes supervisor for the Department of Municipal affairs told Council members and the Chamber of Commerce, that the annual relief allowance from the Ontario Government would be cut $11,000. Last year relief maintenance cost Trent $65,000. The reduction in the relief grant was brought about by better employment conditions created by war effort and a general speeding up of industry to meet the extra demand.

May Cut Relief Rolls

Latest report indicates that Trenton's relief rolls will undergo another cut when Spring jobs open up with the huge airport expansion program. Nevertheless the municipality is obliged to budget relief expenditures to meet the government allowance of $54,000. Trenton Board of Education must go easier too and the supervisor asked the school board to take a $700 cut. At the same time a tax reserve was set up to safeguard the corporation against any future financial repercussions which supervisor Coombes stated was the reason of the town's default in 1934. Two tax reserves were established, one for $2000 to take care of uncollectable taxes and another of $5,500 for uncollected taxes as arrears to be paid in. Mr. Coombes told local business men that the town would never have gone bankrupt if this precaution had been taken at an earlier time.

Bank Rate Reduced

Announcement that Trenton's bank loan interest had been reduced to 4 1-2 per cent from 4 3-4 per cent acted as a gloom-chaser and brightened the local financial picture painted in morbid colors by earlier disclosures of school board cuts and more disappointing news. Figures showed that Trenton had been operated at a loss of $7,500 in the past two terms, the deficit in 1938 amounted to $2,299.53 and $4,378.88 or double that figure in 1939. Councillor Couch interjected at that point with an explanation for the 1939 loss. Excuse given by Mr. Couch was that the town had expected $15,000 from the sale of town property whereas the actual sale price of the land only netted the municipality $11,000. This is not a case of spendthrift, Mr. Couch explained.

Delegation Appear

Two Trenton bakerymen approached the meeting complaining that outside bakers had collared local relief business by selling their goods at cheaper prices. Transient bakers were charged with peddling excess bread at as low at 2 cents below the Trenton baker's selling price. "Belleville bakers get 8 cents a loaf for relief bread," Mr. McKies said. "All we want is the regular 7 cents a loaf." Supervisor Coombes promised to investigate Trenton conditions but at the same time announced that he felt that the Belleville closed voucher system did not allow the relief recipient to feel indenendent or make his dollar go any further. Mr. Coombes was asked to investigate a repealed by-law whereby all new houses and apartments erected and improved, etc., would be exempt from taxation for a period of three years. Some believed, that the by-law should be revived to encourage contractors to construct new living abodes to cope with the housing shortage brought about by the huge airport expansion program. Others maintained that a house building movement would relieve the distress of house shortage and make additional employment and revenue in the town.

Highway Patrols Warn Motorists For Last Time

Under instructions from the Attorney General's Department of the Province of Ontario, motorcycle patrol officers were engaged in issuing today, (Saturday), final warnings to tardy motorists who had failed to buy their 1940 vehicle and operators' licenses. Motorists who were found operating their vehicles and in possession of 1939 licenses were courteously advised to obtain their 1940 motor vehicle licenses today or face possible prosecution if they continued to operate their vehicles next week without making the purchase. Last year's licenses expire on March 31st, 1940. Motorcycle Patrolman Sam Ervine operated on the Picton-Belleville highway checking licences this morning, while Constable H. Caldwell patrolled No. 2 highway in a similar manner. Only warnings were issued today, but they were final cautions.

Visitors to H. & P. E. Regiment Depot at Picton Loud in Praise Of Arrangements for Men's Comfort

History was made in the Picton Armouries yesterday when nine Lieutentant-Colonels, one Colonel, two Judges of the County Courts and one Supreme Court Judge mingled with the officers and soldiers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment Depot and finally partook of the noon meal with Canada's fighting forces. It was a gala days for the privates, but their enjoyment was surpassed by the notables present, who outwardly showed their high regard and esteem for the "soldier boys of Canada" in words and action.

The guests were welcomed by the officers in command of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment and inspected the barracks, equipment, the food and kitchen and were high in their praise of the efficiency of the entire Regiment Depot. The guests were His Lordship Lt.-Col. Mr. Justice John Kellar MacKay, Toronto; Judge C. A. Cameron, Belleville; Lt.-Col. Judge E. H. McLean, Picton; Col. T. Bedell, Picton; Lt.-Col. B. C. Donnan K.C., Belleville; Lt.-Col. A. V. Yates, Deloro; Lt.-Col. J. V. Doyle, Belleville; Lt.-Col. T. Y. Wills, Belleville; Lt.-Col. A. P. Allen, Lt.-Col. J. Phillips, Major J. Howard, all of Belleville, and Jas. Hepburn, M.L.A.

Justice MacKay Enjoys Mess Dinner

His Lordship Mr. Justice MacKay, who yesterday concluded his present sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario for Prince Edward County, spoke in glowing terms of the efficiency of the Hastings and Prince Edward Depot and expressed satisfaction with the food and rations during the speech making, that followed the mess dinner. "It is an honor for me to be invited to partake of a meal in this barracks and most of all eat the same food and in the same hall with Canada's soldier-boys and I'm satisfied our soldiers are receiving the best of care possible in all departments," stated His Lordship.

Short impromptu speeches from the visitors were the order of the day, all commenting favourably upon the efficiency seen at the depot. "The gentlemen present were selected as a representative group familiar with all phases of army life and who are fully acquainted with the every-day needs of the men," stated Lt.-Col. B. C. Donnan, E.D., K.C., of this city. "Such a group as is visiting your unit today is in a position to compare and observe conditions of the present organization and equipment with that of which they were acquainted in the last war and then judge as to the present army conditions and the efficiency thereof. There is one thing I would like to suggest for consideration in connection with the army," continued Mr. Donnan. "I maintain that any enlisted man, who is sufficiently thrifty to assign part of his pay to trustees during the war, so that he will have a nest-egg when he returns should be permitted to do so regardless of dependency and the government should make provisions to help the men in this matter by supplying bookkeeping facilities."

Everyone of the officers and judges expressed high praise of the officers of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment that ranks second to the Royal Canadian Regiment, as senior regiment of the First Battalion of the First Division.

(Tyendinaga)

Mrs. Elizabeth Little, widow of John Little, had reached the age of 85 years when she passed away some little time ago at her residence in the first concession of Tyendinaga township, near Shannonville. She was born in Huron County in the year 1855, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Casper Engel. In the year 1884 she married John Little; he passed away five years ago. In religion she was a member of the United Church and in the community she was well esteemed.

Surviving her are two daughters, Mrs. Allan King, Shannonville, and Mrs. Samuel Jones, Plainfield; two sons, Mr. Robert Little of Shannonville, and Mr. Archie Little, at home; one sister, Mrs. William Kinney, Fulton, N.Y.; two brothers, Mr. Valentine Engel of Norfolk, Virginia, and Mr. John Engel of Lansing, Michigan; also fourteen grandchildren and four great grand children.

The funeral service at the family residence was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Stirling of Shannonville, and interment was made in Riverview Cemetery at Shannonville.

The bearers were Messrs. Malcolm Little, Garnet Little, John King, Ernest King, Elmer King, and Carman Bailey, all of whom are grandsons of the late Mrs. Little.

Metropolitan Stores Organization Entirely Canadian in Origin

Policy of Firm Also Insists on Buying Most of Its Merchandise in Canada

OWNS 64 STORES

Contrary to a widely-held opinion, merchandizing on a large scale through chain stores is not an exclusive United States form of enterprise. Some of the largest chains in Canada are of entirely Canadian origin, typical of which is Metropolitan Stores, Limited.

Many years ago a small group of stores was established in London, Ontario, and vicinity under the name of Brewster's Limited. A few years later, with the expansion of the group, it became known as Canadian Smallwares, Limited. In 1920 Metropolitan Stores, Limited, in its present form came into existence. From the original 11 stores this chain is now spread across Canada with 64 stores, including the Belleville unit at 236 Front St., which was established in 1929.

The head office still is in London, from which is directed the purchase of over $10,000,000 worth of goods annually, more than 85 per cent. of which is bought in Canada. Large warehouses in London, Montreal and Vancouver serve as distributing centres.

In the building of the Metropolitan Stores organization, the concern employs young Canadians preferably between the ages of 18 and 25 years and trains them with a view to becoming managers. The training period requires five years.

At present the staff of Metropolitan Stores across Canada totals over 1,500 men and women. Mr. Ron Steele, manager of the Belleville unit, is typical of the training system. As a young Canadian he served in various capacities in London head office and in stores from London to Charlottetown, P.E.I. He was appointed a store manager and had charge of three different units before coming to Belleville a year ago. He also exemplifies the courtesy and enterprise which are typical of all Metropolitan Store managers and employees.

In charge of London head office is R. C. Wallar, general manager. J. H. Unger is secretary and treasurer and R. P. Banning, merchandize manager. The large staff of buyers are instructed that wherever possible goods are to be bought locally.

EASTER FESTIVAL AT ST. MICHAEL'S GRAND SUCCESS

Well - Balanced Program Thoroughly Enjoyed by Appreciative Audience

PRIZES AWARDED

Crowded to almost every available inch of space long before the opening number got under way, St. Michael's auditorium proved a popular place of entertainment last evening as the Belleville citizenry flocked to the Academy for the closing performance of the annual three-day Easter Festival. A well balanced program, consisting of musical numbers by the Trenton R.C.A.F. orchestra, the St. Michael's orchestra and the Belleville Municipal Band, comedy numbers and tap dancing by talented local artists, was thoroughly enjoyed by an appreciative audience and with the addition of games and dancing at the conclusion of the stage performance, rounded out an enjoyable evening's entertainment.

With Mr. Allan Meagher acting as master of ceremonies, the program got away to an appropriate beginning with the rendition of an opening number by the Trenton R.C.A.F. orchestra, and then, after a few remarks by the chairman, the orchestra continued by putting the audience into a true festival spirit with that popular number, "Roll Out the Barrel."

With the Air Force orchestra coming to attention, St. Michael's orchestra honored two of Belleville's music composers with the rendition of "Hail, Canada." The music for this new patriotic number was composed by "Reg" Hinchey and the lyric was written by Mr. George Carver of The Ontario Intelligencer staff. Three groups of Girl Guides, adding to the patriotic effectiveness by holding large Union Jacks, sang the chorus of the number and with Miss Barbara Forhan conducting the orchestra, completely won the plaudits of an appreciative audience with the rendition of a second difficult number.

Group Dancing Seen

Group dancing by O.S.D. pupils, under the direction of Miss Keeler won complete admiration, as with remarkable ease and grace they executed various difficult pantomimes and dances, in perfect harmony with the accompaniment as played by Mr. Alec Gordon.

Mr. Clare Newman, well known Picton magician, with Mr. Cavers as assistant, completely mystified the audience with a veritable hatful of tricks. Cigarettes appearing, seemingly out of mid air, the disappearing rabbit and various card tricks won prolonged applause. Possibly the most difficult to execute was the number where Mr. Newman put twelve safety razor blades in his mouth and then threaded them onto a cord all without the aid of his hands.

The tap dance team of little Miss Jean Watson and Barbara Donovan, pupils of Miss Lillian Marsh, was much appreciated as were the two solos by Mrs. R. A. Flynn.

The comedy sketch put on by Mr. Harold Barrett, as Harry Lauder, and assisted by the Belleville Municipal Band, literally brought down the house. Dressed in typical Highland fashion, Mr. Barrett very realistically impersonated the famous Scotch singer as he sang "The Waggle of the Kilt", and "I Love a Lassie" as encore. The band completed the number by the rendition of "Coronation Medley."

Mr. Newman again appeared on the stage and delighted the children with his "Magic Soda Bar", as he mixed various different flavored drinks, all from the same receptacle. Mr. and Mrs. Joe Samain then delighted the audience with a perfectly executed tap dancing number and won prolonged applause as they "tapped" both singly and in pairs, with perfect harmony.

Thanks Expressed

In a short speech, Mr. Frank Domenico expressed thanks to the patrons who had made the Easter Festival a success, also thanking the Sisters as well as the Catholic Women's League for their work in providing the delicious meals which had featured the opening of the two previous performances. The Knights of Columbus also came in for praise by Mr. Domenico, who likewise thanked Mr. Maurice Callahan and Mr. George Lee as stage managers. Rt. Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G., also spoke briefly in thanks to all who had contributed to the success of the Festival.

The program closed with Mr. Barrett leading in singing "Should Auld Acquaintance be Forgot," to the accompaniment of the Belleville Municipal Band which was directed by Mr. "Reg" Hinchey.

Following the program, games were enjoyed while of especial interest was the drawing for the hope chest and three other prizes. The hope chest was won by Mrs. Francis Connell and the three lesser prizes by W. H. Luffman as winner of the first, while oddly enough the second and third prizes were won by the two little Masterson girls, Marie and Phyllis, both of the same family.

The R.C.A.F. orchestra provided the music for the modern and oldtime dancing which continued until the early hours.

Letters From the Troops

Hastings and Prince Ed. Regt.,
Base P. O.
Ottawa, Canada.

Dear Bert:

I feel ashamed for not writing more often, but time has been very limited since we arrived here and I am afraid I am sadly behind in my correspondence to Canada. I have been receiving letters from so many people that I hardly knew, except to say hello to and I suppose they all expect answers sometime. However I am stealing these few moments off duty to let you know that I received your parcel of cigarettes which I must say I appreciate very much, but I do wish you would not go to so much trouble. It was very kind of you to remember.

We have been working since 5 a.m. this morning and hard at it all day. Now I just got word that we have some more to do, so I expect it will be midnight before I get finished tonight. So you can see we are not being paid for doing nothing.

We are finding letter writing most difficult. As you know we are not allowed to mention anything about our activities or work and as there is nothing else but army here and nothing exciting happens, well that leaves the news very scarce.

The National Billiard House on Front St. sent all the boys from Belleville some cigarettes. It was very thoughtful of them and they are the first people who have thought of doing anything for the Belleville Boys.

All the small towns like Madoc, Marmora, Wellington etc. have been sending parcels right along, but good old Belleville always was Sleepy-Valley and no doubt some one will get a bright idea about doing something for these boys away from home when the war is over. As far as I am concerned it does not matter because I am at home but a number of these Belleville boys are from homes that cannot afford to send parcels to their sons and as the boys are only receiving half pay now while on active service, a number of them are feeling the pinch very much.

It is surprising that a couple of Greek chaps could remember what is going on, but none of our loyal and patriotic Canadians in Belleville could do so.

My family come over to see me very often and of course they bring enough stuff for half the regiment when they come, so the gang and myself have some good parties.

I have been tempted to write to the service clubs and tell them a few things they ought to know but I suppose one can not expect to make silk purses out of sows ears and I feel like most of the chaps here that if they have not enough brains to think of these things themselves, well we won't remind them. These boys don't want charity but in view of the circumstances I think a little thoughtfulness on the part of some of the more fortunate and so highly esteemed citizens of Belleville would not be amiss.

After all these chaps are fighting for their own country whereas I am fighting because of my fighting Irish blood and because I do love Canada.

The boys in my platoon all asked me to thank you for the smokes. They happened to arrive a few days before pay day, when they were all broke, so I need not tell you how much they appreciated a good Canadian smoke, and if you were a smoker you would understand what their thank you meant.

It is getting near time to go to work again, so I must start to ring off if I want to get this off tonight.

I am so glad to hear the boys are doing so well and hope they will go right to the top of the ladder.

I will try to get a few lines to Mrs. Mac tomorrow if I can manage to steal a half hour off. If you are writing to her give her and the family my love and regards and tell her I am writing soon. I will never forget her kindness.

Give my kindest regards to Mrs. Badger and Mrs. Wheatley. I hope the latter has become proficient at driving by this time.

Thanks a million again for your parcel and please do not worry about me. I will be alright.

Very sincere and kind regards,
Your fond friend,
John.

SENATE UPHOLDS TRADE PROGRAM

Amendment to Require Senate Ratification Killed by Three-Vote Majority

Washington, Mar. 30 (AP).—The United States reciprocal trade program, a fundamental government policy and potential presidential campaign issue, survived a crucial senate test late yesterday when a three-vote majority killed an amendment to require senate ratification of trade agreements.

Administration lieutenants, who considered the amendment a death warrant for the program, were jubilant over the 44 to 41 vote. Senator Pat Harrison (Dem., Mississippi), floor manager for the legislation extending the program three years, told reporters:

"The fight is over now. I think we'll pass the bill Tuesday."

Foes of the trade policy made it clear, however, that they would keep on fighting for other restrictive amendments.

Yesterday's vote found Republicans solidly for the ratification am-

The vote was regarded as a major victory for Secretary of State Cordell Hull, who has preached reciprocal trade ever since he took office.

The struggle was of particular interest to Canada as the Dominion is one of the countries which has concluded a trade agreement under the existing presidential power.

Brisk Demand for Well Trained Office Workers

Requests are coming frequently to Ontario Business College for office workers. One letter received last week asked for three young men and one long distance telephone call was for twenty men. Most calls are for those with the complete courses in bookkeeping, shorthand and typewriting. Some positions have gone unfilled because there have not been sufficient numbers ready to send to them.

When spring and summer come, with increased demands, there will probably be a great shortage of properly qualified persons available.

There will be greater need for office workers who have passed the Civil Service examination. The courses at Ontario Business College prepare students for Civil Service examinations on such subjects as bookkeeping, shorthand, typewriting and arithmetic.

It is twenty years since there were such bright prospects for ambitious, well-trained young people to get employment. This is a year of real opportunity for you if you get the necessary training now.

You may start your course at O. B. C. any school day, receive individual instruction and set your rate of progress according to your own ability and application.

AT THE BELLE

Northwest Passage

Filmed entirely in technicolor during the most hazardous and arduous location trip ever attempted by a motion picture company, "Northwest Passage," is now on the Belle Theatre screen.

Spencer Tracy, star of the picture, Robert Young, Walter Brennan and several hundred other Hollywood actors spent six weeks in the wilds of Idaho to obtain the colorful backgrounds which figure prominently in Kenneth Robert's best-selling novel. With the exception of a few early sequences of the story, the entire production was made in the outdoors during this location.

The picture is heralded as the most vivid story of an adventure ever filmed and is believed to furnish both Spencer Tracy and Walter Brennan, two-time Academy Award winners for best performances of the year, roles which outdistance any of their previous characterizations. Robert Young receives the greatest opportunity of his career and Hollywood is predicting immediate stardom for the young player as the result of his work.

The story, chronicling physical fortitude never before surpassed as screen fare, is of a band of Roger's Rangers who set out to wipe out a village of marauding Indians. En route they elude enemies, carry huge whaleboats over a mountain top, crash their way through hundreds of miles of swamps, cross a river torrent by forming a human chain, and then crush the Indians in an amazing surprise attack.

The remainder of the story involves the struggles of the courageous men to make their way, without food and despite Indian attacks, to safety and shelter. By the time this is achieved, the men are half-starved, battered and torn and the ranks badly depleted.

Hunt Stromberg, producer, sent Director King Vidor to the Idaho location to record the scenes against colorful country never before photographed. Featured with the leading trio are Ruth Hussey and Nat Pendleton with other prominent characterizations filled by Louis Hector, Robert Barrat, Lumsden Hare, Donald McBridge, Isabell Jewell, Douglas Walton, Addison Richards, Hugh Sothern, Regis Toomey, Montague Love, Lester Matthews, Truman Bradley and 3000 others who portray Rangers, Indians, British soldiers and the other characters drawn from Roberts' novel.

The popular Belle British newsreel will be exhibited on the same program.

STYLISH STOUT

Heaven forbid that we'd ever be guilty of such lese majestie as to allude to Patsy Sheldon as a stylish stout. We are referring to the squat milk bottle at LEFT, which, bottle manufacturers predict, is soon to replace the old type milk bottle at RIGHT. They say the new bottle is more convenient for ice-box storage.

"In the west, several attempted forward pushes by enemy scouts were repulsed.

"The Air Force continued reconnaissance flights, despite unfavorable weather until the evening hours, over the North Sea toward the British east coast and over France.

"In the course thereof, an enemy convoy was attacked north of Flamborough head. One cruiser protecting the convoy was damaged by a bomb hit. One merchant ship was sunk and another hit. One German plane failed to return from this undertaking.

"On the west front, air fights occurred between German and French pursuit planes. Three enemy planes of the Morane type were seriously damaged and forced to land immediately behind the enemy line. One German chaser was shot down.

"One of our reconnaissance planes reported missing yesterday was found floating in the North Sea by a German U-boat. The crew was taken aboard and the plane was sunk."

National Advertising Shows Gain in February

National advertising linage, reported by 57 Canadian daily newspapers, representing approximately 83 per cent of total circulation, was up 11.8 per cent in February, 1940, compared with the same month last year, according to the Bureau of Advertising, Canadian Daily Newspapers Association. Local advertising showed an improvement of 5.9 per cent, classified 4.2 per cent and total advertising linage, 7.1 per cent over February, 1939.

Total advertising linage of the newspapers reporting was 19,241,989 in February, 1940, compared with 17,968,912 lines in 1939 and 18,597,331 lines in 1938.

AT THE CAPITOL

"The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet"

This is the season for pictures with something to say. "The Fighting 69th" describing the career of the famed 69th New York regiment during the World War; "The Grapes of Wrath" telling the plight of America's migratory workers, and now "The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet."

Opening next at the Capitol, this picture is based on the life of Dr. Paul Ehrlich, the man who discovered cures for some of mankind's most dread diseases. As short a time ago as two years a picture of this present content would never have been made for the screen. With a fearlessness that has been grounded in the fight of United States Surgeon General Doctor Thomas Parran, Warner Bros. has fashioned a script which gives visual and vocal expression to the government's attempt to bring medical truth to light.

"The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" begins with Ehrlich's early attempts to positively identify and segregate the tubercle bacillus. In his work he is thwarted by overlings who are jealous of his skill, who disparage his ambition. Persistent to the point of his own personal ruin, Ehrlich forces his discoveries on the medical world, wins victory after victory when first the celebrated Dr. Robert Koch accepts his findings. His research leads him to a discovery for the cure of mankind's most dread disease. Here Ehrlich meets the blind and unintelligent outrage of gentility. The doctor calls a spade a spade — and people are horrified. This does not lessen his determination to give his cure to the world, although convention dictated that the disease itself might never be named in audible terms.

"The Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" is a courageous film in every sense. Yet, from beginning to end, it is colorful, romantic screen entertainment that emphasizes the distinctly human side of Ehrlich, his love for his home and family, his struggles against the petty jealousies and prejudices with which great men are always plagued in doing their work.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Shipyard Sally"

Gracie Fields is with us again!

The jovial queen of comedy, toast of Britain and the Continent, returns to the screen in a new film in which she sings and dances as only she can. It's "Shipyard Sally," 20th Century-Fox release, in which she is starred with Sydney Howard.

Directed by famed Monty Banks, from a screen play by Karl Tunberg and Don Ettlinger, the film gives Gracie the background she likes best—the working class of England.

Herself born of impoverished parents in the smoky mill town of Rochdale in Lancashire, Gracie is the idol of the commoners and is considered by them the best of Rochdale's two great contributions to the world. The other, you may remember, is the consumers' co-operative movement, started by the town's weavers more than a hundred years ago.

This time Gracie's the unexpected proprietor of a pub in Clydebank, the shipbuilding centre of Scotland. Unexpected, because until her erratic father (played by Sydney Howard) invested all her savings in the tavern, he and Gracie had been barnstorming the isles as a music hall team.

She soon becomes the fast friend of the shipbuilders, practically the blooming queen of the shipyards, and when Gracie gets up steam it's time for all good sailors to beware. She sings, she dances and she cuts up generally! Gangway for Gracie!

"Shipyard Sally" opens next at the McCarthy theatre.

U. S. DIPLOMATS

United States Ambassador to Paris; Joseph P. Kennedy, Ambassador to London, and Anthony J. Drexel Biddle, Jr., former Ambassador to Poland.

All three, as well as President Roosevelt were mentioned in the documents. They consisted primarily of "confidential reports" in which Polish envoys in Washington, Paris and London were purported to have outlined for their government the views of American diplomats in Europe.

Roosevelt Answers Queries

(In Washington, President Roosevelt answered queries concerning the alleged Polish documents by telling newspapermen that all European propaganda should be taken with "three grains of salt."

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said his department did not give "the slightest credence" to the publications and added "the statements alleged have not represented in any way at any time the thought or policy of the American Government."

(Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador to Washington, denied statements attributed to him, as did Ambassador Bullitt. In London, Ambassador Kennedy declined to comment.)

Adolf Hitler's Voelkischer Beobachter, which was particularly outspoken in its editorial comment, characterised as "amazing" the disclosures of the alleged activities of the United States Ambassadors to London, Paris and Warsaw in the tense days before the outbreak of hostilities.

"These three gentlemen—first of all Mr. Bullitt in Paris," the newspaper said, "virtually made it a point of honor to swing the still seemingly repugnant elements in the London Government toward adapting Polish desires and thereby bringing Europe closer to war."

Press Statements.

Asserting that Kennedy and Bullitt had played an "ominous" part in pre-war policies reflecting "the irrevocable desire of the western democracies to finish National Socialist Germany by war" the Voelkischer Beobachter asked:

"What in the world induced these gentlemen from far-away America to assume not only the role as vehement advocates of Polish claims, but even to encourage the Poles when they showed signs of weakening?"

The Essener National Zeitung, which is close to Field Marshal Goering, said "there can be no doubt that these American representatives used all their influence to aggravate the atmosphere in Europe."

Similarly, the Berlin Lokal Anzeiger said "it is not surprising to find among the war instigators of French and English tongue also American diplomats . . ."

Authenticity Challenged

Washington, March 30—(AP)—The authenticity of alleged documents produced by German officials as evidence that "American policy" helped loose war on Europe was challenged emphatically in government quarters today.

President Roosevelt was the first to comment after the documents—purportedly found in captured Polish archives — were published in Berlin. He declared that propaganda from abroad should be taken with "three grains of salt."

Secretary of State Cordell Hull said the State Department placed not "the slightest credence" in the conversations related in the German white book, and denied that the war-like attitude they set forth represented "in any way" the country's foreign policy.

William C. Bullitt, United States Ambassador to France and Count Jerzy Potocki, Polish Ambassador to the United States—two diplomats whose names figured prominently in the Berlin collection—both denied the statements imputed to them in the documents.

The War This Week

(By Don Gilbert, Canadian Press Cable Editor)

While the "momentous events" in Germany's favor so assiduously forecast by the Berlin propaganda office failed to materialize, Allied diplomacy took the initiative in the 30th week of the war and promised vigorous measures to prevent the Balkan states falling within the enemy's orbit.

A "future line of action" was decided upon at a meeting in London of the Allies Supreme War Council and the British and French envoys in the Balkan capitals and Italy were summoned home for conferences on the Allied position in southeastern Europe. The day before, Premier Paul Reynaud of France had warned that "at this moment" Germany is ready for "an attack on the economic independence of the Balkans" and declared that France's answer will be to "wage war in all domains."

That some snag had hit Germany's plan to promote an agreement between Italy and Russia, which is believed to have been the purpose of Adolf Hitler's visit to the Brenner Pass to confer with Premier Mussolini the previous week, seemed apparent when the Soviet Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff, failed to show up in Berlin. The Germans early in the week had all but announced his imminent arrival, handing out information to foreign correspondents about the elaborate preparations under way at the Wilhelmstrasse and at the Soviet embassy in connection with the visit.

Italy Not Impressed

While it was conceded the Nazis may succeed in straigtening out the situation to a degree enabling Molotoff to visit Berlin without losing his face, there was no indication from Italy that the Fascist regime is taking a more kindly view towards the Bolshevists. Mussolini canvassed the Balkan situation thoroughly in conferences with Count Paul Teleki, the Hungarian Premier, whose country occupies a pivotal position in the way of any German move to east.

Britain and France let it be known that Russia will have to bear the consequences of her quaisi-friendship with the Nazi government. The new French cabinet demanded that Russia call home the Soviet ambassador from Paris when he made an insulting remark about the Allies in a telegram to Joseph Stalin. Britain, seeking to block passage of supplies to Germany through the Soviet Pacific port of Vladivostok, turned over to French authorities two Soviet freighters suspected of carrying contraband in far eastern waters.

Stiffer Attitude Indicated

A stiffer attitude to the use of Norwegian waters by German shipping also was indicated. Two German freighters were sunk by British submarines just outside Scandinavian territorial waters and British patrols were reported in strength in the Skagerrak, the strip of water between Denmark and Norway through which German vessels must pass to reach the Baltic.

In the air the Royal Air Force had a notable success on the western front when seven R.A.F. planes successfully fought 31 German craft, shooting down five while losing only one plane themselves.

Glancing back 25 years: Intense fighting in the Carpathian mountains gave Russia command of the Dukla and Lupkow passes and entry to the Hungarian plains. On the western front Allied troops made gains in the Campaigne and in the Vosges mountains.

THE CAUSE IS WORTHY

Those who have taken part in the Salvation Army campaign for funds for the Red Shield service and those who have given towards the fund have performed a service which will bring returns to humanity, especially in the work of the Red Shield with the troops and also in respect to the S. A. work at home.

There still remains something to be done and it is believed that many more citizens will contribute to the fund. Of those who have been waiting for the visit of collectors it is asked that they send their donations directly to the campaign headquarters. This would speed up the work here and lighten the task of the committee.

The Salvation Army has been serving at the home front here and in Britain and is also serving at the front in France where twenty huts are operating.

The campaign ran into a season when various interests distracted attention from the needs of the Red Shield Fund, such as the elections, the holidays and so on.

Last-minute co-operation in the campaign will be greatly appreciated.

The history of the Salvation Army effort in the last war and the long record of the Army in all walks of life and society since its institution plead with citizens to aid as much as possible in this great effort.

BRINGING REAL LIFE TO THE SCREEN

Not long ago motion picture directors made an important discovery — stories of great men and women who struggled and achieved benefit to mankind were good "box office." There had been a series of pictures dealing with famous soldiers and statesmen which brought "history" with embellishments to the screen but the public appetite soon was sated. The directors turned hesitatingly to the realms of science and medicine. They tested one field with the story of Madame Curie and radium and found a quickening interest. Then followed such pictures as 'The Story of Louis Pasteur' and 'The Life of Emile Zola.' Through these mediums the fact was firmly established that education and entertainment could travel successfully hand in hand via the medium of the silver screen.

Now comes the "Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" —a record of an inspiration to rid mankind of one of its most tragic diseases, of discouragements and tribulations with 605 unsuccessful formulas, then the 606th successful one. This picture is coming to a local theatre next week, and brings understanding of a great discovery enveloped in dramatic settings.

Dr. Allan Dafoe, in his column on the care of the Quintuplets in last Saturday's Ontario Intelligencer tells of having seen this picture in Chicago and said: "I really was impressed. I hope the public takes to it as well as I did, for it deserves to be well patronized."

Usually it is outside the province of this page to discuss motion pictures, but when that industry sees the value of such pictures as the "Story of Dr. Ehrlich's Magic Bullet" and is ready to risk money in winning public approval, then it is time to cut through the wall of criticism and say "well done."

PLEDGED TO TOTAL WAR, SAYS BURGIN

Britain and France will fight a "total war" whatever the consequences and the dice are loaded in favor of the victory of the Allies, Leslie Burgin, British Supply Minister said while on a visit of inspection in Northern Ireland.

"Like our gallant Allies the French we pledge our selves to total war with all that means or may involve."

He put the matter graphically when he said "Broadly speaking, everything that comes from a German port, everything that leaves the German shore or attempts to approach it is under the microscopic eye of the Royal Air Force and photography portrayed to those in charge of strategy at the centre of the Empire.

"Although the fight may be hard and long, although it may touch the people in their private lives and be inexpressibly horrible while it lasts, the dice are loaded in favor of victory for the Allies, and all Germany's boasts, all her propaganda, cannot make up the extent of leeway from which she suffers. Germany is beleaguered, surrounded, her imports cut off, her exports, save to neighboring countries, reduced to the slenderest proportions. Her stocks of raw materials are being consumed. They will not be replenished to any great measure from Russia and not in any large degree from Italy."

The Empire has the confident word of her leaders that the struggle is progressing in favor of the Allies and that triumph will come over the violence and force of the enemy.

POWER FROM THE WIND

The death in London of Hubbard Ellison, recalls to the Woodstock Sentinel-Review "an ingenious invention upon which Ellison, one time construction foreman on the Michigan Central; Grand Trunk and later the Canadian National Railways." It was a wind motor on which he worked for several years after his retirement. It was designed by mechanical means to obtain unlimited power from the winds—the cheapest power in the world. He patented it in Canada and in the United States about thirteen years ago.

The Sentinel - Review says:—

"Interested in 17 years of experimenting conducted by Prof. P. LaCour for the Danish government, with a view to improving the windmill, Mr. Ellison decided to tackle the problem from a different angle. His motor employed curved metal sails and shields to determine the extent of sail area presented to the wind, and a novel drive assemblage for actuating the shaft. The largest part was an upright cylinder, opened for the wind to strike the curved sails within. Through a vane and other simple mechanism, the sails were presented in varying number to the wind.

"The cylinder part recalled the principle embodied in the mast of the motor ship or wind ship invented by Anton Flettner, director of aerodynamics at the Institute in Amsterdam, and tried out in 1924. His 60-foot cylinders were installed in the brigantine Buckau, which with prominent shipping officials aboard made eight knots an hour on a trial trip. The equipment was only about one-fifth the weight of the sailing rigging discarded, and the inventor expected the rotor mechanism to supplant sailing ships though not those driven by steam or electricity.

"The Ellison invention was different in one important respect. It "gained" power through a retarding windshield on one side, and on the other through a protective windshield, that part of the rotor running against the wind was protected from the action of the wind retarding it. It all sounds very complicated, and there is as little indication of its application for power generation as of the rotor ship finding a permanent place in marine transportation."

Masters of the Word

On the battlefield of propaganda, says The London Daily Mail, the Allies have been badly beaten so far in the war. "Goebbels has had a walkover." It is not an opinion which The Daily Mail would have published after the singing of the Graf Spee, or at the beginning of the Russo-Finnish war, or when Turkey joined hands with the Allies. In other words, it is the old story that the man whose side wins battles or diplomatic victories is a good propagandist and the loser is a bad propagandist.

To suppose that it has been a case of Goebbel's superior virtuosity over the Allied propagandists is a bit on the childish side. It is in line with the theory that Mr. Hoover was defeated in 1932 by superior Democratic press agency; but a President may speak with the tongue of man and of angels, yet if he has ten million people out of work he is out of luck as a propagandist. In the old copybooks it was written, "Actions speak louder than words."

Besides, how is The London Daily Mail in a position to compare the effectiveness of German and British propaganda? Admit for the sake of the argument that The Daily Mail can accurately gauge the effect of Goebbel's honeyed words on the British public. There is no way of telling how British propaganda — even Mr. Chamberlain's airplane leaflets that most people smile at—is registering in German minds. We know the German propaganda hits on the English target because the English people are free. Lord Beaverbrook, Bernard Shaw, a minority in the Cooperative Societies, are free to express discontent. But people in Germany who are wondering about a Blitzkrieg now seven months in the blitzing are not encouraged to write letters of protest to Herr Goebbels's papers.

Little Brothers of Destroyer

AN EAST COAST NAVAL BASE

Sea war becomes less and less the picturesque, slow-moving, stately affair that long reading of nautical novels would lead one to expect. Sea war, like everything else today, has been mechanized. Eight knots, which was good speed under sail, is just "doddling along" today, and there are craft that sweep into action at about fifty miles an hour working up and down the North Sea, writes the naval correspondent of the Manchester Guardian.

They are not big ships. To see a flotilla of them streaking away from harbor gives you no true impression of their fighting strength. But to be in one of them, as I was today, going "flat out"—which is a modern mechanized Navy's word for full speed—at a target with guns manned, torpedo tubes ready, and men standing by to release depth charges at a moment's notice, gives you a very different impression of the destructive power of these little craft.

They call them M.T.B.'s for short. They are motor torpedo boats, but I think we may fairly call them the little brothers of the destroyers. Little they certainly are, a mere 60 feet in length, displacing no more than seventy tons, carrying no more than two officers and seven men. Yet they can keep the sea in all sorts of weather, and the men who work in them only ask for the chance to attack a big enemy ship.

They know what they can do against the sea, for the flotilla I was with today was called back from service overseas, and on the way, between Bizerta and Ajaccio, they met one of the worst storms that that particular ocean can produce. Two of the boats were adrift from the flotilla for some hours, but in the end all came through the ordeal, without any worse damage than smashed windows in the wheelhouse and several hours without food.

They have struck some pretty heavy weather in the North Sea since they came home, and the normal dress they adopt when putting out includes several layers of woollies, a duffel coat or oilskins, sea boots and stockings. And on top of it all they have to wear a tin helmet all the time. There is no shelter from aircraft attack between decks in a motor torpedo-boat. There is little or no shelter, either, from the spray that the bows throw up in great clouds even from a comparatively smooth sea.

There is no "bridge" in the normal meaning of that word for the captain and the officer of the watch. They have to sit in the open on top of the wheelhouse, with their legs hanging down through a couple of manholes. Their sea boots swing to and fro just behind the head of the helmsman, who is also in control of the engines. With one hand he turns the wheel as he steers; with the other he moves the little levers that operate the 1,500 horse-power concentrated in the cramped engine-room.

The responsiveness of those engines is astonishing. This morning we were moving along at a gentle ten knots when the commanding officer suddenly bellowed, "Flat out!" The three switches were flicked over with the pressure of the palm of the hand. Within seconds we had leapt up to twenty-six knots. Within another few seconds we had touched that "flat out" speed which was the utmost the engines could give us.

The acceleration was, frankly, incredible. But even more astonishing was the abrupt termination to the run. "Slow", came the voice of the C. O. The switches were moved back. We lost speed, but not gradually nor yet with a jerk. We just lost it. In eight seconds we were down to a crawl.

It was the kind of tactics that the M.T.B. carries out in attacking U.boats. We did a number of runs of that kind. We practised attacks against surface craft, and I have rarely experienced such a thrill as at the height of our dash—the full flotilla in quarter line ahead, one ship just away from the wake of the next ahead—when we swung round to launch our torpedoes and then, mere specks in the smother of spray, dashed onwards to safety out of range of the enemy's guns.

The little brothers of the destroyer have yet to prove their value in a first-class engagement. But they are ready.

Old Country Gardeners Grow Vegetables by the Moon

Scores of letters from a variety of readers make it plain that tremendous interest has been aroused in a subject to which recently we have given some prominence; the theory—or rather, the established fact—that it is much more profitable to sow for vegetable root and grain before the full moon rather than when the moon is on the wane, says an article in the London News of the World.

Here, for example, is the experience of a head gardener in Northamptonshire, who, under the non-de-plume of "Moonlight", writes:

"For many years now I have followed the practice of growing vegetables by the moon, and always noticed the difference in results when unfavorable weather compelled me to sow on "the wrong side."

"When I have casually mentioned to friends that I propose to wait until the next moon before sowing this or that' they have looked at me curiously, suspecting perhaps that I was under the moon's influence, too.

Stronger Growth

"But I have proved that by sowing with the growing or waxing moon the increase and stronger growth of crop is worth the little extra trouble.

"Under glass the sowing of seeds on a specified date—e.g., two days before the full moon—can be done accurately, but outside, of course, there is another aspect to consider.

"Sometimes we have had to wait for two or three weeks to put in the seeds by a specified date, only to find then that bad weather has made it impracticable.

"Thereupon we have sown after the full moon, albeit in better conditions, only to discover eventually that had we waited for the next moon we should have obtained a better crop, though maybe a little later.

"Be Prepared"

"In practice I have found it advisable, rather than wait for the specified date of two days before the full moon, to make the most of the waxing moon, say, after it is a week old.

"The main point is to have all plots ready for the reception of seeds at the appointed times for sowing, and to remember that a day missed at the beginning will probably throw you two or three weeks behind at harvest."

Another reader draws attention to the fact that the practice of sowing by the moon was followed "away back in the days of ancient Israel."

Verse 14 in Chapter 33 of the Book of Deuteronomy, he points out, reads: "And for the precious fruits brought forth by the sun, and for the precious things put forth by the moon."

He adds that as long as he can remember people have planted by the growing moon convinced that seeds germinate and sprout much more freely than if delayed until the moon was on the wane.

For 10 years, A. E. Charles of Shortlands, Kent, has been an enthusiastic amateur gardener. Always he has experimented on the lines of sowing by the moon.

Mr. Charles says that in the students' magazine of an organization to which he belongs was published recently a photograph of a patch of potatoes planted during an eclipse of the moon.

Daily War Survey

By The Canadian Press

The French, whose relations with Russia already are strained have assumed control of the two Soviet merchant ships seized in the Pacific by the Royal Navy. The vessels, bound for Vladivostok, carried tin, antimony, wolfram, copper and other metals which may have been destined for Germany. They were taken to the British port of Hong Kong and now will be taken to a port in French Indo-China.

The action did not indicate any inclination on the part of the Allies to speed up examination and disposition of the ships although Russia has protested to the British government over their detention.

It was a coincidence that France, which entered the war with a mutual assistance pact with Soviet Russia —a pact which never has been denounced — should now be closer to an open rupture with the Communist state than Great Britain. The Russian minister to France has been called home at the request of the French government but the Russian minister to Great Britain only the other day had a conference with Foreign Secretary, Viscount Halifax.

As the diplomatic activities of the two Allied countries now are coordinated closely, the turning over of the ships to France may be the result of a policy designed to impress Russia with the danger of aiding Germany without driving Russia further under German influence.

Thus France, Russia's former ally, may be assuming the role of a stern disciplinarian while Great Britain maintains a friendlier attitude. By the combination of stern measures from one ally and gentler rebukes from the other Russia may be brought to a realization that it can only aid Germany in evading the Allied blockade at the cost of severe penalties in the way of interference with Russia's own foreign trade.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

By James W. Barton, M.D.

Early Signs of Allergic Symptoms in Infants

An infant has a rash on its body —eczema or other skin ailment— gets fever blisters at times, and stomach upsets are frequent. The grandmother in the home tells the mother not to worry about it because she (the mother) had those same symptoms or ailments when she was a baby. It just seems to "run" in the family.

It may be true that these symptoms "run in the family", but there is no reason why the family cannot prevent or overcome them, because these symptoms are just evidences of allergy or sensitiveness to foods.

Dr. N. W. Clein, in Northwest Medicine, states that early signs of allergy are often overlooked in infants. These early signs are: (a) a rash or eczema, (b) vomiting, or efforts to vomit, (c) distress of stomach and intestines, or persistent colic, gas, diarrhoea or constipation. One or more of these symptoms usually appears before the fourth month. It can be seen how any one or more of these symptoms can upset the young mother who in these days of scientific dieting may be following the instructions of a baby specialist. There is nothing wrong with the food, but there is something wrong with the infant's make-up which makes him allergic or oversensitive to these foods.

The rash due to food allergy "occurs frequently on the face as fine pin-point, pinkish-red pimple-like spots on an inflamed skin". Weeping and crusting frequently forms. Falling of hair from eyebrows and head may be present.

"The vomiting consists of a constant spitting up of small amounts of milk or curds. The 'colic' is relieved by food—more or stronger food—but is very persistent despite 'quieting' remedies".

Notwithstanding the fact that milk, orange juice, tomato juice and spinach are excellent foods, very rich in vitamins and minerals, one or more of these foods is often the cause of skin eruptions, vomiting, and stomach and intestine disturbances.

It would be a simple matter, therefore, when the infant is suffering with these symptoms, to leave out one article of food at a time, adding another food, or more of the usual foods eaten, and see the effect on these symptoms.

Birds are Partners In Ice-Fishing

For some time we have noticed a kingfisher flying about one of our lakes. As the lake was frozen from shore to shore, we were puzzled as to how the kingfisher was able to obtain food.

One day we decided to find out how the kingfisher got his meals, so we watched from the bank of Crystal Lake. Soon we saw the kingfisher, accompanied by a downy woodpecker, fly to a patch of clear ice where the snow had blown off. The woodpecker immediately started to drill a hole through the ice with his bill. He worked for perhaps a half hour, at the end of which time he had a hole about six inches in diameter cut through the ice.

The woodpecker now stepped aside and the kingfisher walked to the edge of the hole and looked down into the clear water. Suddenly he dived and in a few seconds reappeared with a small pickerel in his bill. Putting the pickerel down on the ice, the kingfisher quickly cut the fish in two with his sharp bill. Each of the birds took half of the fish and ate it with great relish.

We watched the kingfisher catch several pickerel, each of which was divided between the two birds, fifty-fifty. After the birds had satisfied their hunger they flew away.

We wondered why the kingfisher hadn't caught an occasional bass, but noticing a slip of paper on the ice near where the birds had been fishing, we walked over and picked it up. It was a copy of the New Jersey fish and game laws, with a line marked "Bass season closed until June 15". — from the Mountain Lakes (New Jersey)"

Playboy's Secretary

CHAPTER XXXIV

Sara, that Wednesday, had had another miserable day at the office. She had come in only because of a forlorn hope that the blueprints might still turn up and Mr. Carrington would see what an injustice he had done her and would remove the stigma he had placed upon her.

She meant, of course, to leave the firm in any case, but it was dreadful to be discharged—to have to leave under a cloud of disgrace and ugly suspicion.

Finally, in the middle of the afternoon, she began sadly clearing out her desk and gathering together her personal belongings. There was no use in staying any longer, merely to endure the stares of the other girls. The quicker she got away, the better.

She had seen Curt go out, an hour or so ago, and she was glad he was not there. He might have made her departure even more painful. She would slip out now, before he returned—and never see him again.

When she was ready, she hesitated just an instant, glancing about the big room with the faint hope that some one would come forward to say goodby to her and wish her well, but all the girls were pointedly concentrating on their work, banging away at their typewriters as though their lives depended upon it.

She lifted her chin and walked out without a word.

As she reached the outer hall, however, there was a patter of footsteps behind her and, the next instant, Brenda caught up with her and flung an arm about her.

"Oh, Sara! I just couldn't let you go like that! I've been mean, like every one else, but please forgive me! I'm so sorry about everything and I—I think you're getting a rotten deal! It's all that hateful Pickett woman's fault. I'm never going to be decent to her again!"

This unexpected gesture of kindness was too much for Sara. Her reserve broke, and tears welled up in her eyes. Brenda awkwardly patted her shoulder and tried to stem her own tears.

Then, with a choked "Thank you, Brenda," Sara turned and fled toward the elevators.

It was only ten minutes later that Curt returned. He shot out of an elevator, tore down the corridor, plunged through the firm's outer offices, and burst into his father's private sanctum.

"Dad!" he shouted, waving the blueprints in the air. "I've got them! Here they are!"

His father leaped up, stared in astonishment.

"Where—where on earth—"

"Just wait till I tell you!" Curt flung the papers onto the desk, and rushed on grimly. "So you want me to marry Juliette Carter, do you. Beautiful, wealthy Juliette! Just the girl for me. Well, your fine Juliette has done her best to smash us! It was she who took the blueprints!"

"What!" gasped Sturges Carrington.

"Yes!"

Curt sank into a chair and rapidly poured forth an explanation, making no effort to spare Juliette. When he had finished, his father shook his head in stupefaction.

"I can't believe it . . ." the old man muttered. Then, he stiffened. "But Curt! We've found them too late! It's impossible to—"

"No, Dad — it isn't! I've fixed things! I phoned the head of the Maruban commission from Juliette's apartment, explained everything, and persuaded him to give us a few more days. That will allow us plenty of time to get everything in shape for submission."

Sturges Carrington mopped his brow. "Thank heaven!" he breathed.

"And now, Dad, the very first thing you've got to do is make an abject apology to Sara Sidney! When I think of the way you—"

"Of course, of course! I—I lost my head, boy, under the stress of circumstances. I'll gladly do anything in the world to make up for it. If you will ask her to step in here—"

"Right away!"

Curt jumped up and hurried from the room.

In the outer office, however, he stopped in dismay. Sara's desk was deserted — cleared of all papers and closed. Was she gone?"

"Where is Miss Sidney?" he asked the room in general.

"She left," Rose Kennedy answered briefly.

Something in the girl's terse tone, something in her manner, made Curt glance around at the others. The expressions on their faces told him much.

For the first time, he realized that all these girls must know that Sara had been accused of theft—realized what she must have suffered from them in the past two days. He pictured her departure . . . hostile looks from all sides . . . probably not a kind word from any one . . .

Then, his eyes fell on Brenda—and in her face alone, he saw kindness and commiseration.

He hurried over to her. "Was—was Sara upset when she left?" he asked in a low tone.

"Yes — very. I saw her in the hall. She — she was crying."

"Well, look here — her leaving was a mistake. Do you understand. She'll be back tomorrow If there have been any rumors out here among you girls, they were absolutely false. See to it that the others are told that, will you?"

"I'll be glad to," said Brenda, her round little face lighting up.

"And another thing," Curt suddenly smiled. "You'll probably be glad to know that we've found those blueprints we lost. We've been given an extension of time in which to submit them and—well, we're very hopeful of landing that contract!"

"Oh, that's wonderful!" exclaimed Brenda.

But Curt had already turned away—was hurrying back to his father's office. There, he paused only briefly.

"Dad — Sara has gone," he reported. "And I think, from the looks of things outside, she's had a mighty bad time of it since yesterday morning! You did a lot more damage than you realize! But I'm going after her right away —I only hope I can persuade her to come back tomorrow. In the meantime, for Pete's sake, get Gwendolyn Pickett in here and put her straight about everything! She ought to be made to get down on her knees to Sara!"

With that, Curt grabbed his hat and dashed away.

CHAPTER XXXV

Sara let herself into an empty apartment. Her mother, she remembered, had planned to spend the day with Vicky. Sara was glad, however of her absence — was grateful for any postponement of the inevitable moment when she would have to tell the whole dreadful story of her dismissal from the office.

She stretched out on the living-room sofa and stared up at the ceiling. She felt numb—drained, now, of all feeling. She supposed this was what happened to you after a shock.

And she had had a whole series of shocks . . . In fact, all her props had been knocked from under her in one fell swoop. Her love for Curt killed—yes, she knew now it was dead. Her job gone. Toby lost—going away tonight without even a goodbye.

Strangely, what seemed to matter most was Toby. If only she had him to turn to now, everything else would be bearable. Toby ... How much she had depended on him without realizing it! Always, he had been at hand when she needed him — but never before had she needed him as she did now, never before had she been aware how indispensable he was to her. And now, when she was longing for him, she had lost him—lost him through her blindness—lost him to Sonia....

She was still lying there when the doorbell rang. Listlessly, she rose to answer it.

When she opened the door and saw Curt, she stepped back in surprise. Then before she could speak, he seized her hands and began talking excitely.

"Sara! I was so upset when I found you'd left the office. I had to come at once and tell you that the blueprints have been found! And Dad is fairly eating dirt—I bring you his most humble apologies!"

"The blueprints found?" Sara's eyes had widened. "Where?"

"If I may come in for a few minutes, I'll tell you all about it."

Sara led the way into the living room, and soon, Curt was telling her the whole story of Juliette's plot. She listened with mingled relief and astonishment—relief over her own exoneration, and astonishment over the true facts of the case.

At the same time, she began to wonder whether she had misjudged Curt. If Juliette Carter had gone to such desperate lengths in an effort to make him marry her, wasn't it also possible that she had, indeed, announced their engagement without any basis?

"And so," Curt finished, "please try to forgive Dad. Please say that you'll come back to the office tomorrow and let him make amends."

"I do forgive him," Sara said slowly. "I understand what a strain he was under. But I can't come back to the office, Curt—ever. It—it has been too painful the past two days." She paused, then added. "Besides, I—I was going to leave, anyway, as I told you."

He leaned forward earnestly. "Sara . . . I want to talk to you about that, too. After what I've just told you about Juliette, aren't you ready now to believe that her announcement the other day was made entirely on her own? Darling, I love you. Surely, you don't doubt that? Won't you please say again that you'll marry me?"

Sara looked down at the floor, realizing that his ardor no longer aroused any response in her. She found herself able to consider the whole situation cooly and collectedly. She did believe now that Curt loved her, but she still could not quite believe that he had been entirely aboveboard with her in regard to Juliette— could not believe that he had been entirely without fault.

Then, suddenly, some intuition made everything clear to her. She put two and two together. Carrington and Broderick in financial straights . . Juliette with her millions pursuing Curt . . . He tempted by her money . . becoming engaged to her because of it . . then regretting it but afraid to break it off . . . until she had forced his hand by announcing it . . .

Sara became convinced that this was the way things had happened and, though she didn't doubt the sincerity of Curt's love for her, she saw the weakness in his character and realized she could never feel the same toward him again.

She looked up at him. "I'm sorry —but it's all over Curt. I think I understand about you and Juliette, and I — I can forgive you for it but —well, it has opened my eyes. You are not the man I thought I was in love with."

"But Sara——"

"Besides," she went on, "I know now that I wouldn't want to marry any man who was afraid to acknowledge me to his family—who had to marry me secretly."

"But darling, there's no need for secrecy now!" he pleaded. "Dad will welcome you into the family with open arms!"

"That doesn't alter the fact that you wanted secrecy before. No, Curt—it's too late. You've been too weak and under-handed about everything — and you've killed something in me. I—I no longer love you."

He stared at her a moment with desperation in his eyes, unable to believe that he had really lost her. Then, slowly, he rose and picked up his hat.

"Very well," he mumbled. "I guess...that's that..."

It so happened that, while this conversation was taking place Toby Martin was on his way to the Sidney apartment. He was on his way there to say goodby. And, in the back of his mind, was a half-formed resolution to ask Sara just once more if there was the slightest glimmer of hope for him. He felt sure it would be useless, but it was his last chance to speak and there would be no harm in it.

Thus, it was unfortunate that he arrived at Sara's door just as Curt came out. He did not see the strained look on Curt's face, did not notice the grim way in which he bolted from the apartment. All he saw was that Curt had been there with Sara—and, in that instant, he changed his plans. He would, he decided, merely say goodby and leave as quickly as possible.

"Toby!" Sara exclaimed.

Her face lit up at sight of him but if, he noticed, he thought only that she was looking happy because Curt had been there.

"Hello, Sara." He made his tone casual. "Stopped in to say goodby. I suppose you've heard I'm leaving tonight."

"Yes, Bill told me—and I think it's awful! Why haven't you been to see me sooner?"

"Been awfully rushed." He followed her into the living room and sat stiffly on a straight chair. "Isn't your mother here?"

"No—she went out to see Vicky."

"Well, I guess you'll have to say goodby to her for me. Sorry to miss her."

Sara sat gazing at him, her heart aching. He was acting, she thought, as though he were merely going across the street instead of to the other side of the world.

"I—I hear Sonia is going, too," she stammered.

"Yes — that's a break, isn't it? Great girl, Sonia."

There was an awkward silence. Toby fidgeted, made desultory conversation, then glanced at his watch and stood up.

"Well, I must run. Still have a lot of things to do."

Sara rose and held out her hand. "Goodby, Toby. Lots—lots of luck!"

He looked into her eyes for an instant. "I — I wish you all the happiness in the world, Sara."

With that, he turned and hurried out.

Sara stood perfectly still. So that was their goodby! Then, she rushed into her room, flung herself onto the bed and burst into tears.

(To Be Continued)

CHAPTER XXXVI

Mrs. Sidney, returning a short time after Toby's departure, heard the sound of Sara's sobs as soon as she entered the apartment. Vicky and Bill had driven her home, and they all three stood in the little hall, listening, and casting concerned glances at one another.

Then, Mrs. Sidney hurried into Sara's room. "Sara! What is it? What's happened?"

"Oh, Mother! I w-want to d-die!"

Mrs. Sidney sat on the edge of the bed and gathered her daughter into her arms.

"There, there! Surely, it isn't as bad as all that, no matter what it is! Now then—dry your tears and tell me all about it."

Bit by bit, she drew from Sara the entire story—the break between her and Curt, the trouble at the office, and finally, her parting with Toby. Sara burst into fresh sobs when she came to Toby.

"He—he went away so coldly, as though he didn't care whether he ever saw me again. Oh, Mother, I've been such a fool! So blind! I love him—I know it now! But I've treated him so badly, and now —and now—he doesn't care any more!"

"Sara, dear, he does! Toby wouldn't change as quickly as that. Why didn't you say something to him—something to show him how you feel?"

"Oh, I just couldn't! You should have seen the way he acted! He—he's in love with Sonia Lester. I—I've let her take him away from me......"

"Nonsense! I don't believe it! He probably thinks you still can't see any one but Curt Carrington. You say he saw Curt leaving here. Well, that explains it! That's why he acted as he did."

Mrs. Sidney continued to argue, but she had little effect on Sara, who seemed determined to take the gloomiest possible view of things.

Finally, her mother left her and went into the other room to report to Vicky and Bill. When she had finished, explaining the situation, Bill jumped up.

"Let me talk to her!" he said. "I'll soon snap her out of it!"

He knocked on Sara's door, and entered.

"Hi, there, kid!" he said cheerfully. "What's all this grief about? Don't be a little idiot! Toby worships the ground you walk on!"

Sara turned her face away from him. "Go away, Bill. You don't know anything about it."

"I know a lot more about it than you think. Listen here—I had a farewell lunch with Toby today, and he was way down in the dumps. Why? Because he hates to go away from you. He doesn't care a hoot about Sonia Lester! In fact, he confided to me that he was annoyed by the way she had wangled things so that she could make the trip with him."

"He told me he was glad she was going with him."

"Just bravado, Sara — and you know it! Hasn't he been begging you for years to marry him?"

"Not for years. Just—just once or twice recently."

"Well, then, I think you're cruel to let him leave without telling him you're ready now to say yes! Look here—go phone him this minute and take the poor guy out of his misery."

"No! I'm not going to throw myself at any man! Even—even if what you say is true—and I don't believe it is—he could have said something when he was here a while ago. If he still loved me, he would have, instead—instead of acting so mean!"

"Oh, Sara! You can't expect a man to go on proposing forever. After all, he's got his pride, too. It's up to you now!"

The argument went on and on. It lasted through supper, with Vicky adding her pressure to that of Bill and Mrs. Sidney. Sara was gradually weakening, but still hadn't given in.

Finally, with only a brief time left before Toby's train was due to leave, Bill took action. He got Sara's hat, forced it on her, and dragged her out of the apartment.

"You can at least see him off!" he said. "I'm going to take you to the train, whether you like it or not!"

As a matter of fact, Sara didn't, by this time, need much urging. She was secretly glad that Bill had resorted to strong-arm methods and, as they sped toward the Grand Central Station in his car, her heart was beating wildly. When they got caught in traffic and were delayed, she nearly had a fit for fear they wouldn't get there in time.

Indeed, they reached the station with little time to spare. They sped down the ramp leading to Toby's train.

They hadn't gone far when they ran into Sonia, standing on the platform just outside the observation car.

"Oh, Miss Lester!" Sara cried. "Have you seen Toby? Can you tell us which car is his? We're late, and we just must find him!"

Sonia hesitated a fraction of an instant, then said, "He's way up in the farthest car front. You'll have to hurry!"

Sara and Bill redoubled their speed, running the length of the long train until they reached the car indicated. Out of breath, they plunged aboard—but inside the car, there was no sign of Toby.

Bill looked at Sara. "Do you know what? I'll bet that girl deliberately gave us a bum steer! Toby's probably in the last car. Come on—we'll just have to go through the train!"

He seized Sara by the wrist and pulled her after him. Through car after car they went, searching, searching.

Then came the cry, "All aboard!"

"We'll have to get off Sara!" Bill said desperately.

Back on the platform, they found there was only one car they hadn't searched. They hurried along beside it, peering into it.

And then, at last, they saw Toby, seated at one of the windows.

Just at that instant, the train began to move—slowly but surely. Sara, in her dismay, forgot where she was forgot, what onlookers might think.

"Toby! Toby!" she cried, keeping pace with the train. "I love you! I love you!"

He was looking out at her in astonishment, but it was plain that, through the closed window, he couldn't hear what she was saying.

She held up her left hand and, with her right, went through the motions of slipping a ring onto the third finger of her left hand.

"I love you! I—I'll marry you!" she shrieked.

Then, Toby understood. He leaped up as though electrified, grabbed his bags, and could be seen dashing toward the end of the train.

A minute later, he was on the observation platform, with Sara panting in pursuit. The train had now picked up speed, but that did not stop Toby. He tossed his bags off, then followed them, vaulting the observation railing.

As he and Sara rushed into each other's arms, neither saw Sonia, on the rear of the train glaring at them like a thundercloud as she was borne rapidly away.

Toby asked no questions. Explanations could come later. All that mattered now was that Sara was in his arms, had said she would marry him. He bent his head and kissed her as she had never been kissed before.......

WEDDINGS

REID—GOOD

A wedding of interest took place on Tuesday, March 26, in the United Church parsonage at Ivanhoe, when Hazel Kathleen, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Good, Parham, became the bride of Mr. Arthur Clifford Reid, younger son of Mrs. Reid and the late Mr. Fenton Reid, Odessa. Rev. Samuel Delve officiated.

The bride wore shell pink net over taffeta, with clusters of pale blue gardenias in the long, full skirt. She wore a strand of pearls, the gift of the groom. Her wedding bouquet was of Briarcliff roses and maidenhair fern. Her sister, Miss Marguerite Good, was maid of honour. She was gowned in paisley blue sheer, with matching bolero, and carried pink carnations and fern. Mr. Vernon Reid, Odessa, cousin of the groom, was best man. The groom's gift to the bridesmaid was a gold compact, and to the best man a gold Masonic tie pin.

After the wedding luncheon was served in Belleville. The couple left on a short honeymoon, the bride wearing a dusty pink dress and a coat of dusty rose, with navy blue accessories.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid will reside in Watford, where the groom is on the staff of the high school.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAM CRAIG of Tweed who, on Sunday, will celebrate their sixtieth wedding anniversary. Mrs. Craig has always been greatly interested in church work. Mr. Craig is one of the oldest Orangemen in Eastern Ontario. Mrs. George H. Stokes, wife of the successful candidate in Hastings South Riding, is a daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Craig, Tweed Celebrate Diamond Wedding

On March 31st, in the year 1880, Margaret Ida Graham was united in marriage at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Graham, to William H. Craig, son of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Craig by Rev. Robert Walker. On Sunday, March 31st, they will celebrate their Diamond Wedding anniversary. The reception will be held on the previous Saturday, March 30, between the hours of 3 to 5.30 and 7 to 9 p. m., when Mr. and Mrs. Craig will be at home to their hosts of friends who call to felicitate them on the unique and happy occasion.

Mr. Craig observed the eighty-sixth anniversary of his birth on New Year's Day. His father, Francis Craig came to Canada from County Armagh, Ireland, just one hundred years ago, settling in Hungerford Township a few years later. .His grandfather, William Elliott, also emigrated from Ireland more than a century ago, coming from County Fermanagh, and settling in Hungerford Township. Here in a log house in 1853, William Craig was born, the eldest son of Francis Craig and Mary Ann Elliott. This humble log dwelling, one of many such in the district, remained his home until he reached manhood.

Mrs. Craig, like her husband, was born in a log dwelling, erected by her pioneer parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Graham just across the lane from the fine frame dwelling in which her brother, Mr. R. T. Graham, now lives. Mrs. Craig, who was born on March 6th, observed her seventy-seventh birthday three weeks ago. When a very young girl she moved into this new home which her father erected. Here she grew to young womanhood attending Farnsworth Public School and Lodgeroom United Church. Following her marriage in 1880 to William H. Craig she moved to his farm on the next concession. Mr. Craig purchased this farm, at present occupied by his nephew, Francis Craig, from his grandfather, William Elliott.

Farmer for Forty Years

Here for 40 years, until 1920, he followed his chosen occupation of farming, gaining the reputation of being one of the most progressive and successful farmers of the district. Mr. Craig recalls vividly the seemingly never-ending labour of clearing the stones from the fields before they could be cultivated, labour which must be done entirely by hand.

While living on their farm, both Mr. and Mrs. Craig were active members of Lodgeroom Methodist Church. Here, for many years, Mrs. Craig taught a class of boys, all grown men now who look back on those days with grateful memory to a beloved teacher and guide. Mr. Craig was elected to the office of trustee of Lodgeroom United Church, an office which he still holds. He took a keen interest in municipal affairs and matters of education serving as Township Councillor for twelve years, and as a trustee of the Tufts School for several decades.

In 1920, Mr. and Mrs. Craig retired from active work on the farm and purchased a home in Tweed where they have since resided, enjoying the fruits of well-spent lives surrounded by friends and relatives. Mrs. Craig continued her activities as Sunday School teacher in Tweed Methodist (later United) Church and became one of its most faithful and effective teachers. She was keenly interested in the work of the Woman's Mission Society and was at one time Secretary for Madoc District. Mr. Craig has been a member of the Board of Stewards and Secretary of the Cemetery Board of Tweed United Church for many years as well as acting as a most efficient secretary-treasurer of the Men's Adult Bible Class, where his record of attendance rates almost one hundred per cent every year.

Regular Church Attender

Mr. Craig is seldom missing from his seat in church regardless of weather conditions and despite his advanced age and gradually declining physical powers. Mrs. Craig has been a regular attendant until the extreme winter weather forced her to remain indoors.

In addition to his interest in church and municipal affairs, Mr. Craig has been a continuous member of Tweed L.O.L. for the past 66 years, probably being the oldest Orangeman in Eastern Ontario. He has missed only one Twelfth of July celebration in all that time. For more than 40 years he has been a member of the Royal Black Knights of Ireland. He is a Past Grand Master for Eastern Ontario and has held office for a number of years as Director of Ceremonies in the Orange Grand Lodge of Ontario. In addition, he has been a member of Tweed Lodge A. F. and A. M. since 1909. Mr. Craig is possessed of a most remarkable and retentive memory and can still recite without error all the Lectures of the Orange Order and much of those of the Masonic Order as well.

Mr. and Mrs. Craig have one daughter, Mrs. Geo. Stokes, who resides in the city of Belleville. Mr. Geo. Stokes, a son-in-law, was the successful candidate for South Hastings in the Dominion election just concluded.

Little Benny's Note Book

I was talking and arguing with Shorty Judge on his front steps and we saw Reddy Merfy come around the corner, Shorty saying, Darn that guy, if I was a little stronger and a lot bigger I'd show him a few things.

So would I, I said. Hay, I've got an idea, I'll bet him a cent I can stamp on his foot all my might and he wont feel a thing, and of course it will hurt like anything but it'll be worth a cent just for the satisfaction, I said, and Shorty said, O boy that's a swell idea, I'll enjoy watching that all right.

Only the only trouble is I haven't got a cent and he'll want to see the money, I said, and Shorty said, Well heck, I'll provide the cent you just do the stamping.

And he quick gave me a cent out of his pockit and Reddy came up saying, How are you, shrimp? and I said, Hay Reddy, what's you want to bet I cant stamp on your foot all my might and it will be absilutely paneless?

Paneless to who, you or me? Reddy said, and I said, To you, you wont feel a thing any more than if you were under ether, it's a great trick all right, it's a Hindoo trick.

Go on you're crazy, Redy said, and I said, All right what's you want to bet? I'll bet you a cent and here's the cent right here, I said, and I took it out of my pockit as if it had always been there instead of only a cupple of minutes, and Reddy said, Okay I'll bet you, but I'll warn you one thing, if I feel what I think I'm going to feel I'll take the cent and give you a good poke in the snoot besides.

Well heck, no fair, supposing this just happened to be the time the trick decided not to work? I said, and Reddy said, you do the supposing, I'll just take the cent and do the poking in the snoot.

The result being I didn't try it and Shorty got his cent back as soon as the coast was clear.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Elsa Maxwell Tells How to be Fat and Unashamed

This little piece might be called "How to be Fascinating Though Fat". And it concerns the words of wisdom handed out by Elsa Maxwell, who makes a very fine living arranging social functions for rich people who lack her imagination and ingenuity.

Elsa is definitely on the buxom side and makes no apologies for her poundage. "If you're fat", she says, "don't slink into a room, like a criminal, with abject apology written all over your face, even for living. Be self-assertive. Enter with authority and make the whole room yours".

But, she qualifies, to take a room by storm it's necessary to be well-dressed, whether your figure is expansive or string-bean.

Would Elsa Maxwell make the huge sums she does if she dieted to the last ditch, rasped her nerves by inescapable demands of hunger, and ate—heaven help us— the things only that are good for us?

Good living is part of Miss Maxwell's job, and she does not turn down the delicious morsels she prescribes for Dives' tables . She eats and grows fat and has a that's-that air about it, which is certainly more taking than the hungry-dog look women muster at parties as they refuse good things and then act as if they should have a Carnegie medal conferred for their fortitude.

Miss Maxwell tosses aside most of the "stylish stout" hints. She loves gay colors, fluffy furs and actually goes in for white evening gowns, but she is careful to avoid shiny whites like satin and metal-threaded effects, and avoids sequins put on in circles. If you must have sequins, and are on the chunky side, have them sewed up and down.

But Elsa never affects tight clothes. Instead of slimming they accent all the bulges, and show up where you're fat in the wrong places. For instance, if your upper arm is very heavy, swathe it in loose folds, but show the wrists, which are apt to be slender. Short capes and short jackets are bad for fat ladies. The full length coat or cape gives the eye something to follow. And the insane hats worn by women at the present time are taboo if the figure is on the generous side.

Sensibly, Miss Maxwell makes no suggestions as to dieting. She leaves that to doctors. Several eminent physicians have discussed it wisely and well , and the concensus of opinion seems to be don't, if you're going to let yourself be undernourished. Thick cream soups are no more nourishing than good bouillon, the calorie content of which is low. Broiled meats are better than fried. And better declare a moratorium on the frying pan—oysters, fritters, croquettes and such—if slenderizing is your goal.

Ten minutes after you eat a rich dessert, its joys are forgotten—coconut cake, pie a la mode, devil's food and French pastries are the snows of yesteryear—except for the bulging souvenirs they leave in their wake. Summon the fortitude to look on this type of dessert and compromise on a baked apple or stewed dried fruit, if you would keep your figure.

Many women have become permanent invalids from freak dieting or starving themselves. The trick to keep well and at the same time keep your figure seems to be to have a varied diet, but to decline second helpings. That extra hot buttered biscuit of mornings has many a chin to answer for.

If you must over-eat and life becomes a wilderness without a four-layer coconut cake, have the courage of your self-indulgence and be like Elsa Maxwell, fat but unashamed.

Y. P. U. Meetings

HALLOWAY Y.P.U.

Owing to bad roads the attendance at Halloway Young People's Union was not as large this week as usual. The meeting was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Reid. A hymn was followed by prayer by Mrs. Don Rose. Mrs. Earl Snider read an Easter poem "The Cross was His Own". The topic was given by the Christian Culture leader, Mrs. Ed. Emerson and dealt with Etiquette and Manners. It was followed by a True or False Quiz. A poem "How Did You Die" was given by Mrs. C. Reid. A hymn and the Mizpah benediction closed the meeting. A dainty lunch of candy and popcorn was served by the hostess.

STONE CHURCH Y.P.U.

The Stone Church Y.P.U. met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Jeffrey, on March 21, with a good attendance.

The president opened the meeting by reading a poem entitled "Easter". Hymn 148 was sung, followed by the business part of the meeting.

The theme of the worship service was the Easter story. Miss Euna Foster read the Scripture and offered prayer. A poem entitled "The Cross Was His Own" was then given by Miss Leira Detlor. After singing hymn 87, Mrs. Albert Seeley read an article "The Cross for Everyone". Mrs. G. Hosking read a poem entitled "Good Friday" following which, hymn 86 was sung. Miss Euna Foster then closed the worship service by an inspiring poem "Pass on the Torch".

Rev. L. W. Scott next favoured the meeting by reciting a humorous negro selection entitled "The One-Legged Goose".

This being the Christian Culture meeting Mrs. Frank Jeffrey, who has made a study of art, gave a most interesting and beneficial talk about pic and painters. Her talk was illustrated by reproductions of famous works which were displayed on the wall. Some of the pictures were "The Angelus", "The Gleaners", "The Close of Day", "The Skylark" and "The Last Supper". In closing Mrs. Jeffrey used "The Light of the World" which is an allegory showing Jesus knocking at the door of the human heart.

The meeting was closed by the Mizpah benediction followed by a social hour.

A drawing contest was given by Miss Foster. Mrs. Jeffrey then passed marshmallows and sticks and everyone enjoyed roasting their marshmallows over the coals in the fireplace.

WALLBRIDGE Y.P.U.

The Wallbridge Young People's meeting was held at the home of James Sine with Mrs. M. Phillips in charge. Hymn 362 was sung. Scripture was read by Mrs. Eliott. Business was discussed followed by another Hymn. A reading was given by Louise Sine called the "Hymnary Formation". Roll Call was read and collection taken up. The Mizpah benediction was repeated. Games were enjoyed by everyone.

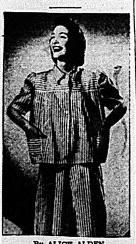
Snooze in Style



By ALICE ALDEN

IT'S NO secret that lots of school girls get their pajamas at the boy's wear departments in our stores. Simplicity, excellent tailoring and easy-fitting tops are features not always found in feminine styles. Here, though, is a new and frisky-looking pajama every girl will like. The butcher-boy blouse is cut for freedom at the shoulders and arms, and buttons in a jiffy down the front. Trousers have an adjustable waistband. The material is one which may safely go to the laundry, a fine cotton and spun rayon with candy stripe. Most of you will think of using the pajama top as a tailored bed jacket or even a beach coat come summer,

MISSS MARY MUSSEN

Will address Women's Canadian Club in Belleville.

Miss Mary Mussen To Visit Belleville

Miss Mary Mussen, charming air stewardess will be in Belleville next week and Belleville audiences of the Women's Canadian Club will have the opportunity of hearing all about this increasingly popular mode of travel. Miss Mussen's lecture Wednesday evening, will be open to the public and a silver collection taken, the proceeds to be contributed to the Canadian Club's war work program.

Miss Mussen is petite and attractive, has a very interesting story to tell about her crowded career. She was born in China, thirty years ago, of Canadian missionary parents. She practically commuted across the Pacific. Miss Mussen obtained her educated in London, Ont., Shanghai, China, and graduated from college at Wheaton, Ill. She also graduated from St. Luke's Hospital, Chicago, and took post graduate work at the Psychiatric Hospital, Toronto, after which she qualified as stewardess with United Air Lines, flying the Los Angeles-San Francisco and New York-Chicago division, piling up the mileage of 350,000 since augmented to half a million by flying over T.C.A. routes.

Fashion Flashes

Dip into the barrel bag for smartness. Seen about town are capacious barrel-shaped bags, some rigid, others quite soft or squashy. A smart model is in red or blue capeskin with simulated shell link handle and tabs on the shell side fastener.

Sailors are popular in the millinery world. A smart model is in navy belting ribbon, the brim, narrowed at the sides, and dipping slightly front and back. The brim edge is fringed. Spiked ornament of white and red wooden beads and discs in back.

Quite a uniform is the white silk jersey dinner dress. One such model has a wide cummerbund of striped silk with a matching striped silk turban and bag.

Pitter patter go shoes along bright southern routes. The wedge shoe is first favorite for play shoe and for afternoon and evening wear. One model is red suede with narrow stripes of white calf. Red suede strap.

The snood persists even if it isn't exactly a snood, for it's back interest that counts. A smart red Milan straw bumper brim model, worn tilted foreward, has a fan-pleated flange in blue and white striped ribbon which covers the back hair.

Pick your fruit when you buy a hat, for fruit trimmed hats are popular. A charming little black straw braid tricorne is covered with sprays of red and green currants.

The Stars Say

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Sunday, March 31

SUNDAY'S forecast presages a day of memorable events, with the prospect of the attainment of unusual and outstanding ambitions and desires. These may reach into the fastnesses of spiritual, mystical, romantic and practical life, according to the aspirations and abilities. There may be surprise and unforeseen adventures ond experiences.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of unpredictable and unprecedented experiences. There may be sudden change, adventure, romance and thrills, as well as intrigues and strategies. The new and strange in contacts and expression assure some sort of dynamic and far-reaching attainments.

A child born on this day may have such a wide scope of talent and versatility as to attain extraordinary heights of accomplishment, probably in new or radical forms, expression or experience.

For Monday, April 1

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is for a particularly lively and enterprising day, with affairs moving with drastic force toward the attainment of sound objectives. It is a time for working forcefully and bravely for major projects, despite certain opposition from eldlers or other forms of determined frustration.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a very lively and exciting year, with things moving at quite accelerated tempo, and possibly with some tempest and hostility. The latter may be from elders or a group action of sinister force, But constructive and practical programs win out.

A child born on this day may be bold, audacious, determined and aggressive, with practical creative ability as well as keen insight.

Stomach Ache

Ordinarily, stomach ache in children is a sign of nothing except indigestion. Occasionally, however, it is the sign of the onset of a more serious disease. One of the common causes of abdominal pain in a child, and one which is frequently taken for ordinary stomach ache is appendicitis. In such a case the child will probably first display a lack of interest in food. This is accompanied by a feeling of nausea and followed by an acute pain in the abdomen. This pain may be constant or recurrent depending on whether the obstruction in the appendix is partial or not.

The difficulty in diagnosing appendicitis right off lies in the fact that its early symptoms are similar to those of many other abdominal diseases, and when you are dealing with small children who are unable to give the doctor a clear picture of the onset and the nature of the pains, you have a diagnosis to make that isn't easy.

Such cases are often complicated and made more dangerous by medications attempted by parents who guess the child has only a touch of indigestion or constipation. A number of times I have been called to attend children suffering from appendicitis who have been given a laxative by the mother. This is the very worst thing that could be done in a case of inflamed appendix, for it stimulates the action of the digestive tract, increases the congestion at the appendix and very frequently causes it to rupture. When this happens, the poisons of the diseased organ are released and spread through the abdominal cavity.

Appendicitis isn't the only serious ailment that is often mistaken for ordinary stomach ache. Frequently, an abdominal pain felt over a wide area, with a tenseness of the muscles on the side affected, will be suspected of being appendicitis when actually it is a case of lobar pneumonia. The similar symptoms occur only when the pneumonia affects the lower lobe.

Frequently, too, especially at this time of year, we get a type of pleurisy called diaphragmatic pleurisy. It often makes its debut as a mere stomach ache. It too is occasionally confused with appendicitis for a while.

Sometimes also, a child may suffer an obstruction of the bowel or intestine. A membrane has grown across the tube effectively stopping any material from passing further along the intestine. Obstructions also occur in older children when the bowel becomes twisted. This serious condition too is heralded by a stomach ache.

A child suffering from some infection of the nose and throat, such as tonsilitis, will complain of severe stomach ache. Usually it is accompanied by diarrhoea and vomiting and very often we find that the throat infection has spread to the wall of the bowel. Sometimes, it brings on acute appendicitis in children whose appendix was partially obstructed anyway.

These are only a few of the more or less serious diseases that are confused with plain stomach ache. Hence the wisdom of having every case of stomach ache carefully diagnosed.

GOOD MANNERS

MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Widow Keeps Late Husband's Name

"I know, Mrs. Beeckman, that you have written on the subject of how to address a widow, but I do wish you would write again so that I can send clippings of your article to many of my friends who insist on writing to me as 'Mrs. Mary Smith', whereas my name is Mrs. John Smith.

"When my husband passed away three years ago many people addressed letters to me as Mrs. Mary Smith. I was so unhappy about this incorrect form of name that I sent cards to my friends . . .cards carrying his name . . . and expressed the wish that they would continue to address me by his name. But they did not even pay attention to this request.

Perhaps they will pay attention to this request if you will be so kind as to write an article on the subject of a widow's name, and if I send each one a clipping of your article. Thank you".

I can never understand why so many widows think it is correct to drop their husband's first name after his death. Neither can I understand why so many people think it is correct to address a widow as Mrs. Mary Smith.

The rule about widow's name is simple. When Mary Jones married John Smith, she became Mrs. John Smith. And Mrs. John Smith she is whether her husband is living or whether she is a widow. A widow keeps the name her husband gave her just as she continues to wear the wedding ring he gave her. His name and his ring are her proud possessions and she should wear them proudly.

Mrs. Mary Smith is a form of name that is socially incorrect for a widow to use for herself, and for us to use for her. Under all circumstances (unless a business or professional woman chooses to be known as Mrs. Mary Smith) the title of Mrs. should never be used before a woman's first name. A married woman is Mrs. John Smith. A widow is Mrs. John Smith. A divorcee is Mrs. Jones Smith.

When a widow knows that her name is still Mrs. John Smith, when she herself uses this correct form, and when her uniformed friends persist in addressing her as Mrs. Mary Smith, their use of the incorrect name is, naturally, offensive to her.

Graduation Cards

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

I will graduate from High School in June. Each graduate will be given engraved invitations to send to friends and relatives. It is customary to enclose a personal card in each invitation. Should my name be prefixed by "Miss" or not?

Bettina

It is a definite rule that a young girl's card—always after she is fourteen, and often before—should have the "Miss" engraved before her name.

It is most important that the visiting-cards that a girl encloses in her graduation invitations should be correct. And they will be correct only if they are engraved with the title "Miss".

Courtesy Tip

When a hostess and host invite one guest to drive with them, he or she should not be left to sit alone in the rear set. If the host is driving, the hostess sits with the guest in the rear seat.

DROUGHT SERIOUS IN BRITISH GUIANA

Georgetown, British Guiana, March 30 (CP)—Natives of this British South American colony prayed for rain today as drought and forest fires continued to ravage the countryside from the deep interior to the coast. After eight months without a substantial rainfall, the situation is regarded as serious.

Wife Preservers

When pressing or ironing, keep a sponge in a saucer of water close by. It can be used for giving extra dampness to articles, for opening seams or sponging collars and cuffs.

Nervous and Sleepless

When you can't sleep it's from worry that poisons the nerves or anaemia which starves them. In either case digestion is poor, appetite fickle and the blood is lacking in vitamin B_1 and the mineral substances from which nerve force is produced.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food supplies these essential ingredients, in condensed and easily assimilated form, so as to help quickly to restore the blood and nerves to health and vigor.

Test this new Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, with vitamin B_1 added, and see for yourself how soon you will be sleeping better, digesting your food more thoroughly, and enjoying full, healthful living.

You don't worry and toss sleeplessly at night when the blood and nerves are in healthy condition.

The thirty-two factories of which records are available for these comparisons, showed an average increase of 4.22 in the percentage of cheese graded as First Grade during these parts of 1939 as compared with the average percentage classified as First Grade during the same periods of 1938. During these periods of 1939, the average score of these factories showed an increase of .609 as compared with the average score during the same periods of 1938. In calculating the average scores of the individual factories, and of all the thirty-two factories combined during these varying portions of the two years, all cheese scored were included, that is, all cheese scoring below 92 points as well as cheese scoring 92 points or more were included.

To appraise the value or merit of these improvements in percentages of first grade and average score of cheese produced in these thirty-two factories which installed refrigeration units ,it should be kept in mind that there has been a general improvement during 1939 in the quality of Ontario cheese. Of the Ontario cheese graded during the year ending November, 1939, the percentage placed in First Grade was .14 greater than during the previous year and the average score of Ontario cheese graded during the year ending November, 1939, was .156 points higher than during the previous year. This improvement was, no doubt, due in great part to the payment of the premium on the production of high scoring cheese. Further, the grading records of several of these thirty-two cheese factories, for their respective portions of the year 1938, were such that considerable improvement was not only possible but very necessary.

Proper control of the temperature and of the relative humidity of the air in the ripening rooms will also result in an important saving in shrinkage. While full data concerning such savings are not available, it appears that such saving will amount to, at lease, 1½ per cent. of the weight of cheese produced during June, July, August and September.

PREMIUMS ON ACCOUNT OF THE PRODUCTION OF CHEESE OF HIGH QUALITY.

The object of this provision of the Act, like other provisions of the Act, was to induce improvement of the quality of Canadian cheese, and it was felt that the Act would be more effective for the purpose if the payment of premium was confined to cheese scoring 93 or more points.

The number of cheese graded during 1939 showed an increase of 69,250 boxes or 5.64 per cent. as compared with the number of cheese graded during the previous year. The quantity of cheese from all Canada graded during 1939 which was placed in First Grade showed a decrease of 0.24 per cent. as compared with the previous year, and the average score of all Canadian cheese graded during 1939 was 0.134 per cent. higher than that of the previous year. While not shown in the table, the quantity of Ontario cheese graded during 1939 was 62,072 boxes, equal to 7.06 per cent. more than during 1938. The percentage of Ontario cheese placed in First Grade during 1939 was .14 per cent. greater than during the previous year, and the average score of all Ontario cheese graded during 1939 was .156 higher than during the previous year.

The number of cheese made between 1st June, 1939 and the 25th November, 1939, and scored 94 points, was 7,639 boxes greater than during the same portion of the year 1938. This increase was equivalent to 127.4 per cent. The increase in 93 score cheese during the same period of 1939 was 172,296 boxes, or 45.8 per cent. During the same period of 193 the percentage of all cheese graded which reached 94 points was 4.58 as compared with 2.00 during the same portion of 1938, an increase of 2.58 per cent., while the 93 score cheese was 49.8 per cent. of the total quantity graded during this portion of 1939 as compared with 34.3 per cent. during the same period of 1938, an increase of 15.5 per cent.

The amounts of money paid, by provinces and for all Canada, as premiums on cheese made from the 1st June to 31st December, 1939, are also shown. The total amount paid was $586,365.45 of which $499,196.90 was paid to Ontario factories. Further payments on account of premiums on cheese made during 1939 are yet to be made, so that amounts shown on page 3 of the tables will be subject to upward revision.

Also shown by counties and for two factories in each county in Ontario are:

(a) total cheese graded 6th November, 1938, to 25th November, 1939;
(b) total premiums paid on cheese made 1st June to 31st December, 1939, and
(c) premiums paid expressed as the rates per box on cheese graded during the grading year 1939.

The counties are listed in accordance with the amounts of premiums paid expressed as the rates per box on all cheese graded. For example, 77,441 boxes of cheese from Hastings County were graded on which premiums to the extent of $55,366.21 were paid, equivalent to 71.5 cents per box of all Hastings County cheese graded during the year, which was the highest rate paid in any county in Ontario. Factory "A" shown under Hastings County, received premiums amounting to $1.38 3/10 per box on all cheese graded from the factory during the year, whereas factory "B" received only 2/10 cents per box.

While these are, for obvious reasons, not strictly accurate comparisons, they show in a striking manner the wide difference in the quality of cheese produced in different counties of the province, and in various factories of the same and different counties. The total amount of premium paid to all counties of the province, namely $499,196.90, is equivalent to 53 cents per box on all the cheese graded.

From what has been said, it seems clear that the Cheese and Cheese Factories Improvement Act has been instrumental in realizing the objectives of the Act, namely, improvement of the quality of cheese. It is also worthy of note that the county at the top of the list, namely Hastings, is the most active of all counties of Ontario in taking advantage of the assistance provided with respect to improvement of ripening rooms, but in this connection it should be kept in mind that a considerable proportion of the ripening rooms of factories of Western Ontario were insulated and refrigerated before the Act was passed.

In so far as procedure is concerned, to secure financial assistance under the Act on account of the amalgamation of cheese factories, standardization of pressing equipment, and improvement of ripening rooms of existing factories, communications should be addressed to the Dairy Products Division, Department of Agriculture, stating just what project is under consideration. On receipt of such information, a competent officer of the Department will visit the correspondent and give information as to proper procedure and advice as to what, in the opinion of the officer, is the best method of making the desired improvement.

In so far as premiums on account of cheese of high quality are concerned, the regulations require that all factories submit to the buyers, invoices in duplicate, so that when the cheese are tendered for grading, one copy of the invoice will be available for the grader. In many cases, factories have not observed this requirement, and failure to do so has resulted in considerable unnecessary work on the part of buyers and graders, as well as other members of the staff of the Department, and also in delay in payment of premiums. If an application for premium is received and the duplicate copy of the invoice of weights has not been received, payment cannot be made until the duplicate copy is secured. During the past year, scores of applications have been received for which duplicate copies of the invoices were not received, and also scores of duplicate copies of invoices of cheese eligible for premium were received, and for which no application for premium had been received. All such factories were written and requested to submit the necessary applications, but even yet there are in the Department probably 40 invoices of cheese eligible for which no applications have been received. The administration of the Act has involved a tremendous amount of work and while there have been some delays in payment of premiums, these have been due largely to the reasons already mentioned.

THE BANQUET:

At 6:30 p.m. a banquet was held in the banquet room of the Chateau Laurier Hotel. Mr. Mayberry, who presided, introduced to the gathering representatives of other dairy organizations.

Dr. Barton, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, the guest speaker of the evening, was introduced by Mr. R. M. Warren, M.P., of North Renfrew.

Dr. Barton in his address stressed the importance of maintaining the quality of our cheese, which could only be done by exerting great care in regard to herds and pastures. Although cheese is expected to play an important role as a war food it is not indispensable and substitutes could be found.

Problems with which the government are already faced, and others that are likely to occur, are being studied by leading agriculturists of the Dominion. Each of these problems has its own peculiarities and aspects which are generally unknown to the average farmer, who is not in possession of all the information that is available to the government. This very often leads to some impatience on the part of the producer with the policy being pursued.

If the war continues the effect upon Canadian agriculture will be more evident but at the present time no major influence has been felt.

Dr. Barton cited some of the problems the government of the day had to deal with during the last great war, and no doubt this experience is most valuable as a guide to the conduct of affairs at this time.

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 15th.

Mr. Mayberry introduced Mr. H. H. Hannam, newly elected president of The Canadian Chamber of Agriculture, and stated that it was a great pleasure to have Mr. Hannam at our meeting to speak to our delegates on matters pertaining to farmer organizations.

MR. HANNAM:

Mr. Hannam tol[illegible] delegates that farmers must be conscious of legislation affecting their welfar[illegible]f their suggestions for legislation were to be made effective, a Dominion Chamb[illegible]griculture would receive more consideration from governments than individua[illegible]ations.

Modern farming c[illegible]e divided into three spheres. The first was the actual mechanics of production [illegible]in the boundaries of the farm. The second extended from the farm gate to th[illegible]arket stall, and the third lay in the realm of agricultural policy and legislation for which farmers must organize their entire industry.

In the third sphere, Mr. Hannam said, fell such matters as trade agreements, freight rates, farm insurance, labor costs, machinery cost sand co-operative effort. A good farmer might excell at production and produce a perfect crop of excellent quality but he "would go broke without the other two divisions".

Farm prices, he said, have not kept pace with labor's wages, and are far out of line with the prices of commodities the farmer has to buy.

REPORT OF RESOLUTIONS COMMITTEE:

Your executive, realizing the importance of this part of our programme, made preparations months before the annual meeting to have resolutions prepared by either factory officials or your officials and presented at a meeting of provincial delegates that was held in Toronto last November. Many resolutions were presented at that meeting and many were received at this office following the meeting.

Owing to a large number of these resolutions being similar in subject matter, the November meeting decided that the most orderly way to deal with them would be through a resolutions committee. The committee was duly appointed and arrangements were made for the introduction of the various resolutions to the annual meeting.

RESOLUTION NO. 1

Moved by J. H. Ebbs, Lanark County,
Seconded by C. E. Harkness, Dundas County,

Whereas—the movement in farm organization has become more general during the past few years, and as the Cheese Producers can lend valuable assistance to this movement,

Be it resolved—that this annual meeting go on record as favouring producer organizaiton and supporting same both morally and financially, and that the amount of the financial contribution to the Ontario Chamber of Agriculture be left for the Provincial Board of Directors to decide. Carried.

RESOLUTION NO. 2

Be it resolved—that the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association co-operate with the Cheesemakers' Association in placing before Dominion Prices Board information regarding advancing prices of materials used in the manufacture of cheese and request that said Board keep this matter in mind and see that future advances are warranted.

The foregoing resolution was presented by Mr. J. Bain of Atwood, who was introduced by Mr. Mayberry.

A committee was appointed to interview the Dominion Prices Board and later this committee reported to the meeting as follows:

On calling Professor Taylor, Secretary of the War Times Price Fixing Board, the only available time for appointment was 2:30 p.m.

Mr. Jas. Hardie of Perth County and myself took the liberty of keeping this appointment.

Professor Taylor, on hearing the resolution, promptly assured your committee that any further price advances that your Board felt were unjustified would be promptly investigated.

Signed, J. M. Bain, James R. Hardie.

RESOLUTION NO. 3

Moved by E. J. Pyear, Hastings County,
Seconded by G. L. Shackleton, Middlesex County,

Whereas—a well-informed membership is necessary to the welfare of our association, and considering the many requests from members that some steps be taken in order that the activities of the association will be known to our members.

It is hereby resolved—that this annual meeting approve of a plan whereby the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association will subscribe for the magazine, "The Ontario Milk Producer", a monthly publication, for every cheese producer in the province. The cost of each subschiption will be approximately 15c per annum, with a total approximate cost to the association of $3,000.00. Carried.

RESOLUTION NO. 4

Moved by C. E. McAllister, Prescott County,
Seconded by F. Benoit, Russell County,

Whereas—the present system of check weighing cheese at some date subsequent to the date of sale has been a continual source of friction between buyer and seller, and whereas—the only apparent solution seems to lie with the producers having their cheese check-weighed by an official weigher while it is still in their possession,

Be it resolved—that it is the opinion of this meeting that the most satisfactory solution to this problem would be for be producers to warehouse their cheese and have it graded and properly weighed by an official check weigher appointed by the municipality before offtring it for sale on cheese boards, the condition of sale being that the check weighing by an officially appointed weigher be accepted by the buyer.

Any further—that the weight of the cheese be the highest up beam pound recorded by the scales. Carried.

RESOLUTION NO. 5

Whereas—We have found through experience that there has been no advantage to the producers in engaging men to test milk at the cheese factories, we believe that the work is best performed by the dairy instructors under government supervision. This work being part of the dairy instructor's regular duties ,there does not seem to be any reason why the Provincial Government should collect fifty cents per patron from the producers for the work.

Therefore be it resolved—that this annual meeting go on record as requesting the Provincial Government to waive this charge of fifty cents per patron for testing.

After the reading of the above resolution by Mr. C .E. Harkness, Dundas County, an amendment was introduced as follows:

Moved by H. S. Marjerison, Glengarry County,
Seconded by Gordon McGillis, Glengarry County,

That the association look after the milk testing as formerly. The amendment carried.

RESOLUTION NO. 6

Moved by J. J. Poole, Oxford County,
Seconded by Geo. Gardiner, North Leeds County,

Whereas—The Cheese Factory Improvement Act has proved to be an advanced step toward putting the cheese industry in a more favourable position by helping to equip cheese factories to take better care of their cheese and thereby improve the quality, and whereas—the premium that has been paid on quality cheese during the season 1939 has not only proved an incentive to better quality cheese but has accomplished in a large measure its objective, as is shown by government grading statistics,

Be it resolved—that we strongly urge upon the Dominion Government that this Act be continued in force. Carried.

RESOLUTION NO. 7

Mover by J. L. McDonald, Stormont County,
Seconded by J. J. Poole, Oxford County,

That section 7, subsection 10 of the constitution be amended by striking out the words "remaining directors of the association" and inserting therein the words "original appointing body", and by striking out the words "remaining members of the executive" and inserting therein the words 'original appointing body".

RESOLUTION NO. 8

Moved by C. E. McAllister, Prescott County,
Seconded by H. S. Marjerison, Glengarry County,

Whereas—Canadian farm purchasing power is and has been for a number of years much below parity with other classes in the country,

And whereas—most of our exports of farm products go to Great Britain and it is vital to the Empire that these exports be increased in order to win the war,

And whereas—the stabilizing of the Canadian dollar at a premium over the Pound Sterling that is at $4.45 to the Pound causes the Canadian farmer another loss of 8.4 cents on the dollar and seriously hinders his efforts to feed the United Kingdom during the war,

Therefore be it resolved—that the Ontario Cheese Producers' Association request the Canadian Chamber of Agriculture to appeal to the proper authorities in an effort to have the Canadian dollar stabilized on a par with the Pound Sterling. Carried.

RESOLUTION NO. 9

Moved by B. P. Bresee, North Leeds County,
Seconded by Wilfred Webster, South Leeds County,

We the producers of cheese here assembled feel that w should bring to the attention of this meeting the fact that we should convey to our Secretary, Mr. Joss, he being too modest to mention it in his report yesterday, our oppreciation of his services rendered last fall during the outbreak of the war ,when conditions were so unsettled, in coming to Ottawa and keeping in close touch with conditions, and advising cheese boards to hold their cheese, which in each case resulted in the producers receiving thousands of dollars which otherwise they would have lost. Carried.

By a standing vote, on motion of A. W. MacIntyre, the meeting expressed sorrow and regret at the passing of the Governor-General.

At this point Mr. Mayberry announced that on the advice of his physician he found it necessary to retire from active participation in public affairs. On motion of Messrs. Shackleton and Pyear a vote of thanks was unanimously tendered to Mr. Mayberry for his untiring efforts in the interest of the cheese producers of Ontario.

Johnny Paychek, Knocked Out By Joe Louis in Second Round, Remembers Little of Bout

Numbed by First Blow Paycheck Easy Mark for the Heavyweight Champ

ONLY FIVE BLOWS

Louis Unmarked Catches Train for West and Fans Ask "Who's Next?"

By OROLO ROBERTSON

Associated Press Sports Writer

New York, March 30 —(AP)— Mr. Editor—you might as well keep in type that headline, "Joe Louis wins." It looks as if there'll be plenty of opportunities to use it.

The Brown Bomber still is champion of the world with no indication he'll have the crown knocked from his brow by the present crop of heavyweights. He disposed of the Johnny Paychek threat, if it might be signified by that name, 44 seconds after the start of the second round in Madison Square Garden last night.

That pile driving right that lifted the 25-year-old Iowan off his feet and sent him to the canvas left promoter Michael Strauss Jacobs and 11,620 fans asking themselves—"who's next?"

Louis has had shorter fights, but even he refused to admit his first round knockouts of Max Schmeling, John Henry Lewis and Jack Roper were any easier. The Bomber swung just five real blows. Four of them he used in flooring Paychek three times, each for the count of nine, in the first round. The fifth finished the fight.

Paychek Hits One Blow

The only blow Paychek struck was a looping right which grazed the champion's chin after Johnny was down for the second time .

The Des Moines fiddler was pale at the start, he was white as a sheet after feeling the power of right that sent him down for the first count of nine. He told referee Arthur Donovan he was okay after going down the second and third times. In the dressing rooms later, he said he didn't know a thing after Joe connected with his first right—much less the instructions that Benny Leonard gave him between rounds.

"No, I wasn't afraid," said Johnny, "but I was a little nervous. That final blow! Let me tell you, that was about the damndest feeling I ever had."

As for champion Joe, he was so unruffled that he even considered taking a shower. His chief thought was to catch the 11:45 p.m. train for the west. He did, with plenty of time to spare.

New York, Mar. 30 (AP).—Hank Greenberg is getting good and sore at having his name linked with this and that romance, and the press agents can take that or leave it. . . . When his ball playing days are over, Pepper Martin will run for sheriff in his home county down in Oklahoma. . . . Old Jack Johnson, ex-heavyweight champ, who'll be 62 tomorrow, has had to cancel his personal appearance tour of Australia and New Zealand because of the war. . . . The golf pros gave three cheers when they learned the big Canadian tournaments would not be called off on account of the war. Some of them mean real dough.

The big gamblers at Agua Caliente took such a man sized licking on the Santa Anita handicap they have voted against operating a Kentucky Derby book. . . . The Fenwick Park face-lifting job has been completed in Boston and the right field wall in "Williamsburg", patrolled by Ted Williams, is 20 feet nearer the plate. . . . Jack Dempsey and Jimmy Bronson, two of the top guys in the fight business, haven't spoken for twenty years.

Dempsey blames Bronson for starting the slacker charges that harried him during his early championship days. Naturally Bronson denies it and, good sport that he is, adds: "Jack must be a great fellow or everyone wouldn't say that he is." . . . Joe Cronin has assigned to Prof. Moe Berg, the brain truster, the task of rooming with and chaperoning young Dominic DiMaggio.

Today's guest star:

Bob Stedler, Buffalo Evening News: "Bill Terry says the Giants can't honestly be picked to win the National League pennant this year . . . and for once the New York baseball writers agree with him."

THIS AIR-GUNNER DIDN'T BAIL OUT

London Mar. 30 (CP). — When fliers get together the story inevitably crops up about "the air-gunner who did not jump" after the best of the crew bailed out, and how he landed safely in the pilotless plane.

Returning from a reconnaissance flight the aircraft became iced up and unmanageable. The order went back to jump, but this gunner did not hear because his telephone was a victim of icing also. His companions obeyed ,not knowing he had failed to hear. Remaining at his post in the tail, the gunner felt glad they were making a good course and nearing home. Finally the plane pancaked and the gunner although badly shaken, rushed to rescue his friends but he found they had disappeared.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

LESTER PATRICK WARNS AGAINST OVER CONFIDENCE

Believes, However, Rangers Will Defeat Bruins in New York Tonight

BRUINS HANDICAPPED

Four Boston Regulars Out for Season With Injuries Picked Up in Series

By SIDNEY GRUSON

Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, March 30 —(CP)— Amidst a mounting wave of optimism, Lester Patrick warned today that the very things pointing to the immediate overthrow of Boston Bruins, the National Hockey League and Stanley Cup champions, are what might carry the Bruins through against great odds.

Patrick was the most cautious of all the Rangers who, generally, predicted openly they would beat the Bruins here tonight and qualify to meet Toronto Maple Leafs in the Stanley Cup final. Leading three games to two, the Rangers need only one more victory to beat a badly-battered Bruin club.

"Don't forget those fellows will be desperate tonight," said Patrick, a great believer in a team having the right "phychological attitude" for a game. "They'll be short three or four regulars, so they'll fight that much harder. They'll be inspired because they know they can't afford to lose this one.

Ranger 2-1 Favorites

"Remember what the Americans did to Detroit with only 12 men, and these Bruins aren't as old or slow as the Americans."

Surveying the long list of Bruin casualties, the Ranger fans and the betting men refused to be even slightly disturbed by Patrick's reasoning. They made the Blueshirts 2-to-1 favorites to win tonight, and backed their odds by pointing out the Bruins have been shutout in their last three starts here and haven't won a game against the Rangers in New York all season.

Art Ross, Boston manager, tempered his defiance of the Ranger claims with the unhappy realization that Dit Clapper, his captain and ace defenceman, Dess Smith, Art Jackson and Mel Hill, all regulars, probably will be unable to play tonight. They are suffering a variety of leg injuries received in the first five games of the best-of-seven Cup semi-final.

It seemed probable that Ross could not dress more than 12 players.

TROTTER SOLD FOR RECORD PRICE

A photo of Alice Jane, untried trotter, daughter of Scotland, who was sold at Longwood, Fla., for $20,000, the highest price ever paid for a two-year-old trotter. J. J. McIntyre, industrial sportsman, of Cleveland, O., believes the horse has a potential earning capacity of $75,000 in the next two years. This includes the $45,000 Hambletonian stakes. Alice Jane will be raced on the grand circuit this summer.

ADAMS SAYS HE DID HIS PART

Manager of the Red Wings Blames Horner for All the Trouble

By DOC HOLST

(Detroit Free Press)

Detroit, March 30—(Special) — They had to send Olympia's ice to the laundry today before Holzbaugh and Stratford could play their third game in the Michigan-Ontario Amateur League playoffs. The blue line was red with Toronto and Detroit blood, and what many persons mistook for the red penalty line was nothing but drippings from the noble neck of Red Horner and the noses of Syl Apps, Jimmy Orlando, Tiny Thompson and other survivors of the greatest hockey battle in the history of Olympia.

Jack Adams, manager of the Red Wings, was the only gentleman who carried the feud into the second day. He was angered, not once but twice, and when Mr. Adams is angry once his verbal explosions can move the Laurention Mountains, so you can take one guess at his condition when angered twice.

First Mr. Adams was enraged because he heard that reports had gaine dcirculation that he had refused to shake hands with Connie Smythe.

"I was the first to reach the Toronto dressing room," Mr. Adams said. "I offered my hand to Dick Irvin and he shook it. I offered my other hand to Frank Selke and he shook it. I congratulated them. I then turned to Smythe and Connie turned his back on me. I then left the room."

Second, Mr. Adams was ruffled because it was discovered today that Cecil Dillon's right knee cap was fractured when Bingo Kampman, Toronto defenceman, and well-known weight lifter, board-checked him.

"Think of it," Mr. Adams yelled, "think of giving a man two minutes for breaking another player's knee-cap."

Outside of that Mr. Adams had very little to say except that he didn't think the boys around the circuit would bother Jimmy Orlando much next season.

"Too bad he had to fight with such a nice buy like Syl Apps, though," Adams said. "Too bad he couldn't have picked on ——"

Mr. Adams didn't say whom. He apparently was saving that for Toronto games next year.

In the meantime Boxing Commissioner John J. Hettche was trying to discover through interviews with tape-marked Red Wings their secret of staging such crowd-pleasing fights.

"The regular boxers don't do that for the fans," Mr. Hettche said.

Mr. Adams later picked the Rangers to beat Toronto if New York beats out Boston.

"Toronto has a good club," Adams said. "The Rangers are better though. They shoudl beat the Leafs."

WHERE FISHING GOOD

Cap Town, Mar. 30 (CP). — The galjoen is not a pretty fish—it looks like a bloated bass — but Archie Benn was proud of his eight-pound, 10-ounce specimen he caught on the Knysna coast with prawn bait.

TRAINING CAMP BRIEFS

By the Associated Press

Lakeland, Fla., March 30—(AP) —The critical hour for Detroit Tigers' hopefuls approaches. Owner Walter O. Briggs, who takes a personal hand in such matters, will arrive at camp tomorrow for a conference with manager Del Baker out of which will come the distribution of rookies to the minors.

New Orleans—If Tommy Henrich is going to play rightfield for New York Yankees this year he's going to have to look mighty good. George (Twinkle-Toes) Selkirk, who has been suffering a cold, was back in shape yesterday and manager Joe McCarthy put him right back in the starting lineup. The Huntsville born player gave a polished performance in the outfield and scored four runs against Tallahassee, Fla.

Tampa, Fla.—Ready to start their northward trek in the company of Cincinnati Reds, Boston Red Sox bosses are overjoyed by the strength shown by their pitchers. Dennis Galehouse and Herb Hash were especially impressive in a six-hit string yesterday and Dom DiMaggio also looked good in his first action since hurting a leg.

Hollywood, Fla.—Morrie Arnovich, who played left field for the Phillies all last season, may be shifted to right this season. Manager Doc Prothro has had him over there in recent games.

AS FELLER SHOWS "US FELLA'S" HOW IT'S DONE

SHERBROOKE OUT OF PLAYDOWNS IN SENIOR SERIES

Joliette Cyclones Defeat Red Raiders 16-15 in Two-Game Series

A MAJOR UPSET

Cyclones Meet Montreal Royals for Quebec Senior Title

(By the Canadian Press)

Sherbrooke Red Raiders, a team that has been expected to give Montreal Royals a stern battle for the Quebec Hockey Championship, watched from the sidelines today while a scrappy intermediate team Joliette Cyclones, filled the berth that had been all but reserved for the eastern township's team.

"Given little chance of coming close to the provincial senior league champions, the Cyclones laced Sherbrooke 10-4 last night to enter the Quebec final with a 16-15 victory in the two games total goals series. Sherbrooke fired in eight goals in the third period to win the first game 11-6.

There was no comparison between the teams last night. The Cyclones were off with the drop of the puck, rattling in four goals in the first period, evening the round score in the second and winning the series in the third after Sherbrooke had taken the lead again.

Tomorrow, Joliette will get another chance to prove its giant killing propensities, meeting Royals at Montreal in the first game of a best-of-three series for the Quebec crown. The winner will meet either Kirland Lake or Sydney in the Eastern Canada finals of the Allan Cup playdowns.

The Maritime team and Kirkland Lake begin their semi-final round at Toronto tonight. The teams will move to Ottawa Tuesday for the second game, returning to Toronto Friday if a third is needed.

Junior playoffs will share the spotlight tonight with the senior game. At Montreal, Verdun Maple Leafs and Perth Blue Wings will begin a best-of-three series for the right to enter the eastern finals of the Memorial Cup playdowns.

Meantime, at Oshawa, the Dominion champions Generals will clash with Toronto Marlboros in the deciding game of their best-of-five round for the Ontario junior "A" title.

Nothing but the highest admiration can be held for courageous little Finland. Not only did they do themselves proud against overwhelming odds at war, but more recently the Finnish Olympic Committee startled the world by announcing that Finland was conditionally prepared to continue with the 1940 Olympic Games. "If the world at large gives proof that it is ready to uphold the Olympic ideal of peace and brotherhood among nations, Finland is ready to hold the 1940 Olympic Games," stated Erik Frenckell, chairman of the Finnish Olympic Games Committee but added that it all depended on the future of the present international situation, which does not seem any too bright at the present.

The Finnish announcement somewhat startled the United States Olympic Committee to say the least. Quietly the U.S.A. and some South American countries have been planning to hold the 1940 Olympics at Buenos Aires, with invitations being forwarded to Western Hemisphere countries only. Avery Brundage, president of the U.S.A. Olympic Committee, upon hearing of Finland's latest move in the picture, asked to have a postponement of the proposed Western Hemisphere countries' Olympic project. Little had been learned of the U.S.A.-South American Olympic clique until Finland made her announcement this week James F. Simms, secretary of the U.S.A. Olympics, says Finland must announce its final decision by April 1st, but Frenckell, speaking for the Finns, says there is no such ruling included in the Olympic regulations. If the Western Hemisphere countries are desirous of competing in games similar to those played under the Olympic regulations there is nothing to stop them, but to stage the 1940 Olympics at Buenos Aires would have to come under the sanction and appointment of the International Olympic Committee only.

Did you know that five famous Swedish athletes fought for Finland against Russia? The Swedish volunteers were Bjoern Borg, swimmer; Thure Enochsson, marathoner; Bertil Molander, heavyweight fighter; Lennart Dahl, decathlon performer, and Svend Utterstroem, skier. All are champions in their fields.

Do you remember when Turkish Delight was the first of 1,840 horses Steve Donoghue rode to victory when the record-setting English jockey won his first race at Phoenix Park, Dublin, 33 years ago today. Steve became a legend in his thirty years of racing, and headed the jockey list ten years consistently. The 55-year-old champion is a trainer now, and has under his care the horses of many whose colors he once wore.

One week from last night the Belleville Collegiate senior basketball squad, champions of the C.O.S.S.A., enter the Canadian Secondary Schools Association basketball finals at Ottawa. The other three schools to gain the C.O.S.S.A. finals are North Bay C.I., Assumption College of Windsor, champions of the W.O.S.S.A., and Ottawa C.I., winners of the E.O.S.S.A. Judging from previous years' results the Belleville Collegiate cagers should be able to hold their own against North Bay and possibly Ottawa, but Windsor is the "hotbed" of basketball in Ontario and to beat a Windsor team of hoopsters is a real accomplishment. However, Coach Geo. Laughlin's local B.C.I. cagers are not lettin gthe grass grow beneath their basketball feet. Twice this week they engaged the Belleville "Y" seniors in exhibition games and lost both times, but the practice against senior players is not only essential, but should prove valuable. Incidentally the "Y" players tell us the "collegians" are somewhat lax at individual checking and their defensive work needs improvement before they will resemble a strong interscholastic squad.

Catcher Ernie Lombardi of the Cincinnati Reds, who has been the target for witticism and criticism since his now-famous "snooze" at home plate in the last game of the 1939 World's Series, is still popular with a large majority of Cincinnati fans, according to a survey made by Lou Smith of the Cincinnati Enquirer.

"If the Redleg management would leave it up to the readers of this column, there would be no question about Ernesto Lombardi remaining with the Reds," declares Smith.

"In a poll taken by your observer during the past five days as to whether the Reds should retain or trade the 'Sleeping Beauty' of the '39 World's Series, public sentiment has been almost 100 per cent for keeping him. Of the some 200 letters that hit the writer's desk via the mail, all but three of them gave the much maligned Schnozzola a rousing vote of confidence. At the present writing the vote stands: To retain Big Schnozz, 206. To trade or sell him, three."

For the tenth consecutive time since he won the world's heavyweight title nearly three years ago, Joe Louis methodically stalked his opponent and added another victim to his list of victories, when he scored another K.O. over Johnny Paycheck, the Des Moines heavy, in Madison Square Gardens last night. Louis floored Paycheck three times in the first round and flattened him like a rug after 44 seconds of the second round. Actually Paycheck seemed literally frightened out of his proverbial shoes, as he didn't land one hard blow on Louis. There has been much ballyhoo about Louis slipping, but last night's devastating attack by Louis should dispell all such rumors for some considerable time, even if Paycheck was a fourth rater.

SPORT SPICE — "There's some sizzling hockey on the program for tonight . . . the highly-heralded Sydney Millionaires engage the Lake Shore Blue Devils in an Allan Cup fixture, but there won't be a family feud. . . . Jo Jo Graboski is still on the injured list, so Brother Tony of Sydney won't tangle with his older kin tonight. . . . In Oshawa the junior champion Generals meet the battling Toronto Marlboros in a fifth and final game tonight. . . . The battered Bruins face elimination in a loss at New York tonight, but if Art Ross' charges can stumble through to a win, they'll force a seventh game at Boston Sunday. . . . With Clapper, Jackson and Hill all on the injured list the Bruins' chances are not exactly to be desired. . . . Marchildon was one of Toronto's pitchers yesterday when the Leafs beat Jersey City 6-1 at Winter Haven.

Il Duce Tries Out New Invention

Rome, March 30—(AP)— Premier Mussolini today tried out a new invention designed to extract iron ore from sea sand.

Il Duce turned the crank of the machine which swallows sand and separates any iron-bearing particles by a system of magnets.

The machine's inventor, Giovanni Liguori, said he hoped it would contribute to reducing Italy's dependence on foreign iron ore by extracting the heavy iron content of black sands which form the beach along the coast near Rome.

He said he expected the extraction of more than a ton of Magnetite in one hour with the invention.

SIX TEAMS ARE ASSURED TRENTON SOFTBALL LOOP

Jesse Baker Elected President; League to Open May 13th

Trenton, Mar. 30 (Special).—With hockey in the discard for another season sportsmen of this town are looking forward to a successful softball season scheduled to get under way May 13 which falls on a Monday this year. Plans have been made for a six or seven team league to operate on a double schedule basis. The annual meeting of the Trenton Association held in the town hall last night was attended by a strong representative from Canadian Doughnut factory and a number of the other mercantile industries.

It is understood that a team from the airport will play in town this season making the competition all the more competitive. While sponsors and managers are making all necessary arrangements entailed to the organization of a softball club men will be put to work remodelling the playing diamond at Bayshore Park. Victor Ryan who acted as president last term resigned from the board and will not have any executive responsibilities this season. He has been replaced, however, by a competent leader in the person of Jesse Baker, widely known as Trenton's fire engineer and better known in this community as a softball umpire and a lover of good clean sport. Mr. Baker is backed by a strong executive who have had years of experience in this line of the pastime.

Officers Elected.

William McCue is the league treasurer for the second consecutive term and Andy Anderson, another energetic hustler, has shouldered the secretary's duties. The directors, Arthur Black and William House, Jr., are both able minded men for the job of keeping the loop functioning properly for the forthcoming season. According to the plans laid down at the meeting team entries must be handed in to the league secretary not later than midnight April 30 while players' certificates will not be accepted after June 15. Wooler is expected to enter a strong aggregation this term and to encourage out-of-town teams to play in Trenton the local association ruled that the team from Wooler would be allowed gas expense money of $5.00 for the year to offset mileage deficit they have suffered in bygone seasons.

It was also decided to employ William Beattie as caretaker for the term at 50 cents a game. A set rate for paying umpires for their services was established at 50 cents a game — the price to cover the schedule from start to finish. Teams that will no doubt represent the Trenton Association in 1940 are: Wooler, Canadian Doughnut, Benedict-Proctor, Graham's Garage, Bata Shoe Company and Royal Canadian Air Force.

PICKLE BLEND CUCUMBERS

This special blend is composed of the outstanding pickling varieties in correct proportion to produce maximum yields of uniform, symmetrically shaped, dark colored pickles. Each variety in this mixture is a pure strain grown separately, after which the seed is mixed to secure proper cross-pollination, resulting in first generation hybrid pickles. Their vigor, productiveness and uniform quality follows by the same principle used in hybrid seed corn and other hybrids. The value of this blend has been thoroughly proved. It is, in fact, very similar to the blend used for years by several large commercial pickling concerns. Order direct from this advertisement. (Pkt. 10c) (oz. 20c) (¼ lb. 40c) (lb. $1.25) postpaid.

LION

By THAYER WALDO

She swung the Hispano-Suiza into Western avenue and saw the gates 50 yards ahead on her right. As she approached they swung open and a truck came lummering out. With a swerve that squealed rubber across pavement, she veered around it, turned into the studio driveway, and shot forward.

From behind sounded an angry shout.

The little mirror at her side showed a man in uniform following on the run. In front loomed a building with Zenith Pictures, Ltd.—Production Offices, in gold lettering over the entrance.

Once more she glid at right angles and pulled the long phaeton to a stop before it. Then the gate guard was alongside, puffing his indignation.

"Look here, madam," he spluttered, "I'll have to see your pass to come on the lot—and no cars is alloted in, anyways."

For one surcharged instant there was no response.

The hard-breathing man stood with a foot upon the running board, his hands gripping the nickel-trimmed door. The girl sat immobile, erect, inscrutable eyes staring at him from a pale and almost bony face.

Then suddenly the tableau broke. With a cot-quick movement she snatched off one driving yauntlet and slapped it smartly across the guard's cheek.

As he staggered back, grunting amazedly, she vaulted the car door and came down facing him.

Words commenced firing from her in an edged, staccato voice:

"You lout; How dare you have the infernal impudence to order me! Get back where you belong before I have you thrown out of this studio."

He wavered, momentarily indecisive; then:

"But, lady," he began, "there's strict rules about—"

The words were drowned by a shrill blare as the girl's fist slammed down upon her car's horn button and relentlessly held there.

Wave after wave of two-toned din reverberated through the lot.

In a moment people were appearing.

Out of the building close at hand came a slight man with sandy hair. He strolled unconcernedly to the Hispano-Suiza's side, lifted its hood and gave something a quick twist. The rocket ceased.

The girl turned her head sharply to glare at him.

Sauntering around toward her, he said:

"It's okay—go right on as you were. There just won't be so much noise now."

She didn't wait for him to reach her, but stalked aggressively forward. Her long legs were clad in blue flannel slacks; a kelp green blouse of loose pattern was tucked into them. The tawny, windblown hair had no covering.

"So the menials," she snapped, "aren't the only insolent ones around here, eh?"

He gazed at her coolly and retorted:

"Yeah—I was thinking that myself. What kind of trouble are you trying to start, and what are you doing here, anyway?"

The glitter in her eyes held real venom now.

"Publicly flaunting such filthy ignorance is your idea of a joke, I suppose. Well, I'm not in the mood. This swine—" with an outfling of her arm toward the gateman—"insulted me, and I want him attended to."

"All right."

The man in front of her addressed the other:

"Frank, take this gimcrack on wheels out in the street and park it with the rest of 'em."

Viciously the girl struck at him with her open hand. He ducked, caught her wrist, and added:

"Guess you better take this hellcat long, too. Unless you want me to get a straitjacket for her first."

The fellow in uniform came toward them, saying:

"I didn't know what to make of it, Mr. Garrison. She hit me when I told her cars couldn't come in and—"

With a jerk that nearly cost Garrison balance, the girl wrenched free of his grasp.

Her sallow features had grown dark and were working spasmodically.

For the first time she appeared to become aware of the small crowd that had gathered. Hoarsely she cried:

"For God's sake will one of you gaping vultures tell this jackass who I am, before I murder him!"

No one answered.

Garrison beckoned two men in overalls from the onlookers.

"This has gone far enough, boys," he told them; "during all my years in the publicity racket, never have I seen a cruder gag. This dame's just some movie-struck nitwit who's gotten hold of a flossy car and swigged a little gin to fix her nerve. Well, the act's not even funny. Put her out."

Promptly they seized the girl's arms.

In a tantrum of near-hysteria she fought and kicked and writhed, but to no avail.

Strength and stolid determination were with the workers.

Into the foreign auto's rear seat they half-led, half-carried her.

The watchman clambered in front.

"Don't use any rough stuff," Garrison instructed. "Just drive up to the boulevard and sit there till she calms down. Then leave her and report back to me."

Incoherent sounds were coming from the girl as the car rolled away, down the drive and out through the gate.

Gradually those who had watched drifted off, exchanging amused comments on the episode.

As Garrison turned to re-enter the building, he was hailed from behind and a tall dark man approacher saying:

"Nice job you did clearing up that rumpus, Louis. Going my way?"

Garrison gave affirmation; together they went inside and along the broad corridor.

As they reached the publicity man's office, he suggested:

"Come on in a minute, Walt. Got something to show you."

Facing them as he opened the door was a large portrait photograph.

It showed a woman whose prominent-boned face—arresting, though not beautiful—was topped by an unruly mass of hair.

"Our new star, Kathleen Hodgson," Garrison said; "the one the New York office signed last week and's going to send on. Thought you might be interested; this happens to be the only picture of her we have so far."

The other was staring at it like a man transfixed.

After a second of stunned silence he cried:

"But great Scott, Louis—that's the jane you just had bounced!"

Garrison had seated himself on the desk back to the portrait and was setting fire to a cigarette.

A slight smile tweaked his mouth-corners.

"Sure it is, you chump," he agreed calmly. "I knew that the first minute I looked at her. But my technique had to be used for its chastening effect. Remember, actresses get screwy enough in this game even when they start off like lambs!"

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Mar. 30 (CP).—The Toronto stock market concluded the month with a stronger display in the industrial share department and mild weakness in the golds. Base metals and Western Oil shares were dull and practically unchanged in today's two-hour session. Volume was down to less than 200,000 shares.

Utilities, steels and foods improved their price position. National Steel Car advanced 1¾ to 63, Page-Hersey and Steel of Canada firmed ½ to ⅝ and Dominion Steel "B" firmed a minor fraction. Canadian Breweries issues were stronger, the preferred adding a full point.

Light selling gave a set-back of about 5 cents to Central Patricia, Wright-Hargreaves, Sylvanite, O'-Brien and Malartic Goldfields.

Falconbridge posted a minor gain and Steep Rock weakened 2 to 3 cents. Other base metals held steady.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, Mar. 30 (AP).—Selected issues, led by steels, aircrafts and specialties, pushed up fractions to more than a point on the Stock Exchange today.

The list ran into considerable profit taking on the bulge, however, but prices held near the best at the close.

Lockheed was the fastest mover among the aircrafts, going into new high ground for 1940. Loft again posted a new top on sizable volume.

Prominent on the upside during most of the morning were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet, Douglas Aircraft, Sperry, Bendix, Curtiss-Wright "A", McKesson & Robbins common and preferred, Dow Chemical, N. Y. Central, Pennsylvania, Montgomery Ward, Chrysler, Western Union and Du Pont.

The Canadian list was inactive.

Practice of Quoting Two Prices

There is a practice of quoting two prices for hogs in the Belleville district that is becoming too prevalent for the good of the industry. The system is as follows: $8.75 per cwt. plus the grade live weight or $9.00 per cwt. on the flat basis.

On the surface it may appear that the farmer is receiving 25c per cwt. for quality or 50 per cent grade A, but in actual practice many farmers are receiving the extra 25c for quality who are not producing any grade A carcasses. Let us take for example the case of two farmers who deliver their hogs to the station. Each has ten hogs that weigh 2000 pounds and all the hogs are of sufficient quality to avoid deductions. Both farmers agree to accept the flat price and the hogs are tattooed and shipped to a packing company where they are killed and the carcasses graded by an official graded. The grade is filled in on the manifest and posted by the shipper in the station the following week. On the first lot the grade is 10 BI which is the basic grade, but in the second lot there were 5 A, and 5 BI which is a premium of $5, which the farmer is not entitled to because he accepted 25c per cwt. for the grade. If he had accepted the graded quotation of $8.75 the final results would have been the same. What this system is actually doing is paying the farmer who is producing the good hogs 25c per cwt. less.

The responsibility for this condition rests equally with the farmers and the drovers and is working out to the disadvantage of both.

Some good lots of hogs marketed out of the Belleville district during the week of March 29, 1940 are as follows:

			GRADE
			B			C
Name and Address:	No.	A	1	2	3	1	2	3	Premium

Produce Lines Generally Quiet

Toronto, March 30—Because export buying dried up as a result of the recently enforced licensing of food imports into the United Kingdom, a sharp break occurred on the domestic cheese market this week. It was reported that overseas interests were inquiring yesterday for Canadian cheese, but the bids were below the current market here and no sales were recorded. Local demand has also been lacking thru'-out the week, buyers apparently waiting for a more settled market.

Prices, in the face of this situation, have continued on a downward course that was started with the sharp declines on the Ontario country cheese boards at the latter part of last week. Thursday's boards at London and Ingersoll dropped to as low as 14 cents, compared with the Toronto wholesale market of 16¼ cents to 16½ cents, but local dealers yesterday were not quoting prices as the cheese sold on these boards had not arrived here. It was said that the amount of current make cheese available for sale on the local market Friday was light, but that buyers were not inclined to purchase.

Other lines traded on the Toronto open produce market were quiet and easy during the week.

Small offerings met slow demand on the butter market. Yesterday, further price shading was in evidence in Ontario creamery solids.

The egg market closed Friday with a steadier tone after having declined in quiet trading earlier in the week. Receipts, that were curtailed because of poor road conditions, cleared better yesterday. Premium prices of half cent per dozen were obtainable all week for government-inspected graded shipments.

REVOLUTIONARY PLOT NIPPED IN ECUADOR

Quito, Ecuador, March 30 —(AP) —The government announced today that quick precautionary measures by the police and army had forestalled a revolutionary plot. It said an attack against the Atahulpa military barracks here had been scheduled for this morning but the placing of soldiers in readiness to crush any uprising kept it from taking place.

Molotoff Affirms Soviet Desires to Remain Neutral

British Observers See Russian Desire for Trade With Britain

NEW AXIS HOPE ENDED

London, Mar. 30 (AP). — British observers today brushed aside Russian Premier-Foreign Commissar Vyacheslaff Molotoff's harsh words about the Allies and emphasized his neutrality declaration as ending any Nazi hope of a Rome-Berlin-Moscow axis.

Some sources interpreted Molotoff's foreign policy review yesterday before a joint session of the Supreme Soviet, Russia's legislature, as throwing out broad hints that the Soviet wanted to resume trade negotiations with Britain.

Although Molotoff assailed Great Britain and France for "hostility toward the U.S.S.R." and declared German - Russian relations were "firmly proved", he proclaimed Moscow's desire to "maintain our neutrality and refrain from any participation in the war."

Say Soviet Not Bound to Germany.

Russian sources in the United Kingdom, meanwhile, stressed that Russia was not bound to Germany as an ally, either by political or military obligations, and wanted to improve her trade and friendly relations with Britain.

The transfer yesterday of two detained Russian freighters from British to French custody, however, put increasing strain on relations between London and Moscow and informed British sources reflected skepticism of any assurances Russia might give that supplies bought from Britain would not reach Germany.

They cited the freighters as proof that the Allies meant business in their blockade by closing the back door to Germany through the Pacific.

Allies Called "Hostile".

Although Soviet sources said Russian Ambassador Ivan Maisky had assured Lord Halifax, British Foreign Secretary, that the two vessels' cargoes were intended for Russia, and not for export to Germany, some diplomatic circles said Britain apparently was determined to be "firm" with Russia.

Of Molotoff's complaint that the Allies' attitude is "hostile", the Daily Telegraph commented:

"Refusal of a special licence to the Soviet to break the Allied blockade and to meddle in the domestic affairs of France is not hostility, and Molotoff soon slid away from such awkwardly definite words to injured innocence at suspicion that Russia had been sending Germany supplies.

'No Attempt To Pick Quarrel'.

The Daily Herald declared the Allies were "not trying to pick a quarrel" with Russia but said, "their relations with Moscow can hardly become completely friendly again until the Soviet government makes it quite plain, beyond any possibility of doubt or misunderstanding, that Russia is no longer to be regarded as an ally of Germany."

Rainier's cars were famous racers early in the century, and the Rainier Motor Car Company was one of the concerns combined to form the General Motors Corporation in 1908.

D VERBAL WAR HEAD BRITISH-RE

WANG-CHING-WEI HEAD OF GOV'T

Although Wang set himself up as successor to Chiang Kai-Shek's Chungking government, his authority actually will extend only to areas occupied by the Japanese army—the seaports and the principal cities of North and Central China.

Aims Are Cited

Wang said his aims included enforcement of constitutional government, international co-operation against "the subversive and peace-distributing activities" of Communists, respect for the legitimate rights and interests of friendly powers, and promotion of foreign friendship.

Japan, however, is the only government recognizing his regime, and even the Japanese took no part in the official ceremonies,, except for Japanese officers, plainclothesmen and newspapermen. Wang's new army relieved the Japanese guards after the ceremonies of installation.

New officials of the Wang government, half in Chinese garb and half in occidental clothing, took their oaths in the Yuan building, in the presence of 100 foreign newspaper correspondents, mostly Japanese. A band, resplendent in blue coats and white plumes, played the Chinese National Anthem.

Treated With Derision

Chungking, China, March 30 (AP) —Wang Ching-Wei's "order" for the immediate cessation of Chinese-Japanese hostilities, made when he formally assumed leadership of the Japanese sponsored Nanking regime today, was treated with derision by officials, press and public in the wartime capital.

"Fighting will cease only when the last Japanese soldier has withdrawn or been driven from Chinese soil," an official spokesman declared.

The Chinese Foreign Office took notice of the Wang regime "inauguration" at Nanking yesterday to the extent of informing all foreign embassies and legations that the new regime is illegal and that its decisions and commitments "must be regarded as null and void."

How To Overcome Piles And Rectal Soreness

If you are annoyed with itching piles or rectal soreness, do not neglect the same or run the risk of an operation. Any itching, soreness or painful passage of stool, is nature's warning and proper treatment should be secured at once. For this purpose get from J. S. McKeown or any druggist, a package of Hemroid and use as directed. This formula, which is used internally, quickly relieves the itching and soreness and aids in healing the sore, tender spots Hemroid is highly recommended, is easy to use and it seems the height of folly for anyone to risk an operation when a simple remedy, which is so pleasant to use may be had at such a reasonable cost.

MOIRA RIVER ICE HONEYCOMBED BY WARM WEATHER

Ice in River Late in Breaking Up This Season Old Residents State

EARLIEST IN 1930

With the sudden advent of spring-like weather and the winter's snow rapidly disappearing as it melts and fades away, much controversy is being heard in Belleville regarding the breaking up of the Moira River today. The past few days of warm sunshine coupled with fine weather has left the ice in the Moira River honeycombed and ready for the annual spring break-up soon.

Discussions regarding the earliest and latest breaking up of the Moira River waxed with vigor as groups of curious citizens gathered along the banks and made predictions as to the possibilities of the 1940 spring break-up and whether or not there would be a flood. The general consensus of opinion was—there would be no flood in Belleville this year, providing, however, heavy warm rains did not fall over the weekend.

The earliest break-up of the Moira River as registered at the upper fire hall, was on Jan. 8th., 1930, but the river again froze and Belleville experienced two break-ups of the old Moira that season. Chief Lynch stated to the Ontario Intelligencer today that the latest break-up of the Moira River, as far as he could recall, was on March 28th., 1904. However, Sergeant Arthur Harman stated he believed the latest break-up in Belleville was on April 3rd, but he could not recall the exact year. Other older citizens throughout the city were non-committal. Wm. A. Woodley, chairman of the City Parks Board, told the Ontario Intelligencer he had driven a sleigh in Belleville as late as April 12th, but that was many years ago.

"That year I got my delivery sleigh out on Nov. 5th and drove it steadily until April 12th of the next year, but I do not recall when the river broke up that year," stated Mr. Woodley referring back to the days when he was proprietor of a take shop in Belleville.

SEE GOEBBELS BEHIND 'STORY'

Skeptics Suggest "Documents' Aimed by Nazis to Win U.S. Election for Isolationists

By GUY RHOADES
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The world paused in astonishment today before what appeared to be a German attempt to win the United States election for somebody other than President Roosevelt.

In Berlin the Reich "released" to foreign correspondents a series of 16 "documents", allegedly taken from the Polish archives last autumn, purporting to show that United States diplomatic representatives had suggested their country would help the Allies in the event of war.

Announcement of these alleged discoveries was accompanied by two German assertions; one, that United States dealings in Europe before the outbreak of the second Great War had been "ominous"; two, that what already had been disclosed was nothing compared to what would be revealed.

Whole Story Denied

The whole German story was denied by everyone alleged to have been implicated in it, with the exception of Joseph Kennedy, Ambassador to Great Britain, who declined to comment at all. State Secretary Cordell Hull said in Washington there was no truth in it as far as he knew; President Roosevelt cautioned correspondents to take Nazi "propaganda" with "three grains of salt."

Behind the story and the "documents" was believed to stand Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, Germany's minister of propaganda and "public enlightenment," seeking to win the United States election for the isolationists.

The wizened little doctor, if it was he, had one taker for his so-called revelations. Republican Representative Hamilton Fish of New York, suggested the German allegations should be investigated thoroughly.

Blockade Worry to Germany

Skeptics—and they outnumbered believers by a lot to one—saw this explanation for the story:—

Germany is being harassed considerably by the Allied blockade. She cannot buy war materials in the United States because President Roosevelt's neutrality policy dictates first that she carry them away, secondly, that she pay for them. She can do neither.

The Allies, able to pay and carry goods, are buying warplanes and other weapons in the United States which they might not be able to buy if an isolationist sat in the president's office.

Further, Americans have shown strong pro-Ally feelings, and, in Europe at least, it is expected that if Britain and France were hard pressed, the United States, feeling as it does, would go to their help.

A Goebbels-elected United States government might make it feel differently.

Rome-Berlin-Moscow Pact Not Possibility

Rome, March 30 (AP)—A source close to the Italian government said today that Italy "remains anti-Bolshevik" and insisted that a "Rome-Berlin-Moscow triangle" is not a possibility of the near future.

This was interpreted in foreign circles as indicating that if Adolf Hitler suggested a new friendship between Rome and Moscow in his meeting with Premier Mussolini in the Brenner Pass, March 18, his proposal failed.

Authoritative Italian sources likewise sought to dispel reports, current since the Brenner meeting, of a plan to share control of the Balkans among Germany, Italy and Russia.

(The usual "well-informed quarters" in Berlin claimed on the day of the Brenner conference that Italy and Germany had reached agreement on a plan whereby Russia would join the Rome-Berlin axis and endorse "German-Italian aims for remoulding Europe.")

Relazioni Internationali, leading Fascist organ on foreign affairs, said of the reported three-power agreement on the Balkans:

"Purposely to immobilize Italy, an Italian-German-Russian plan for the Balkans has repeatedly been indicated. All that is false and void of any foundation. Italy is making her own policy, determined by her historic interests."

PRESS THANKED BY DR. MANION

Conservative Leader Leaves for South for Lengthy Vacation

Ottawa, March 30—(CP)— Conservative Leader Manion yesterday left the capital for the southern States where he will rest for two or three weeks.

Before leaving he issued the following statement regarding news coverage of his six week's campaign tour of the country:

Before leaving Ottawa for two or three weeks, I should like to express my sincere appreciation to The Canadian Press and, as well, to the press of Canada in general, for the manner in which they reported the activities of the party I have the honor to lead.

By and large, the press of Canada has treated me quite well as leader, and I greatly appreciate it.

NEW SYRUP SELLS FOR 65c QUART

Only One Vendor Has Small Quantity for Sale—Broilers $1.00 to $1.25 Pair

One lone vender displayed maple syrup in a very limited quantity on the Belleville market Saturday morning, while pussywillows were also in evidence as another harbinger that spring is in the air. Attendance on the whole, however, was considerably better than that of last week when blocked roads kept most of the farmers away from the city.

Sixty-five cents per quart was the price asked for new syrup by the one vendor who had the spring delicacy for sale, but only a very small amount was to be had, this being quickly picked up by anxious buyers.

Grade "A" large eggs retailed for 25c while the medium variety went for 23c as prices fell away after the Easter season. Butter remained steady at 30c per lb., or, as in some cases, the two lb. roll for 55c.

On the vegetable market, carrots retailed for 75c the bus., or 20c the peck. Turnips went for 60c the bus., but onions showed a sharp increase in price retailing for 50c the peck. The local supply of onions has been disposed of it was explained and shipments from outside points were necessary to supply the demand. Potatoes remained at previous levels with good quality "spuds" selling for $1.00 per 75 lb. bag.

A fair display of chickens was in evidence on the inside market with large well-fleshed birds going for $1.50, but prices generally range dfrom $1.00 to $1.25. A few broilers were also offered for sale, selling from $1.00 to $1.15 the pair.

No. 1 spys sold for $1.60 the bus. or 50c the peck while Talman Sweets went for $1.25 per bus. or 35c the peck. Other varieties, such as Ben Davis and Russets, ranged from 60c to $1.00 the bushel.

White fish sold for 20c per lb. as did pickerel, but salmon was quoted at 18c the lb. Suckers were to be had at three for 25c.

A few sides of pork were seen with hinds retailing at 15c and fronts at 13c.

Young shoats were plentiful with the best quality "porkers" selling for $5.00, while others were offered at $4.00 or $8.00 the pair.

PLANE PARACHUTE IS STILL UNCLAIMED

Sarnia, Ont., March 30 (CP) — A parachute, complete with body harness, ropes and a burned out flare, which fell recently on the farm of Francis Hubbard, Plympton township, is still without a claimant, it was learned today.

The 'chute is in possession of William Statham, neighboring resident, who saw it fall.

It is believed it was dropped by a United States army plane from Selfridge Field, Michigan. American flyers have engaged in target practice on Lake Huron.

WAR BRIEFS

Oslo, Mar. 30 (AP).—Norway protested to Germany today over a German submarine torpedoing and sinking the 2,476-ton steamship Steinstad off the Irish coast Feb. 15. The vessel was en route from Turkey to Norway.

Sydney, Australia, Mar. 30 (CP). — The liners Queen Mary and Mauretania, on the high seas after sailing from New York for war duty, are believed to be en route to Sydney, presumably to transport Australian troops overseas. The most extensive dredging operations in years will be started next week in the neighborhood of the wharves capable of accommodating the ships. It is declared here that the Mauretania will arrive some time next month, with the Queen Mary following a week later.

Wellington, N.Z., Mar. 30 (CP).— Seven members of the New Zealand House of Representatives have joined this Dominion's armed forces. Among them is E. T. Tirikatene, one of the four Maori members of the House.

St. Helier, Channel Islands, Mar. 30 (CP). — By-laws have been passed putting conscription into operation in Jersey States, the group of tiny islands which lie off the coast of France but form part of the United Kingdom. Call up of men between the ages of 20 and 24 from Jersey's population of 49,000 will begin in April.

Melbourne, Australia, Mar. 30 (CP-Reuters).—A vaccine believed to give immunity against gangrene has been discovered by the Baker Medical Research Institute. It has been tested on twelve volunteers and researchers are to arrange army tests on a larger scale.

$10,252.75 DEPOSITED IN PENNY BANK

The total on deposit for Belleville and vicinity in the Penny Bank savings account in the schools of Canada amounted to $10,252.75 at the end of February, 1940, according to the official statistics released today. This figure is slightly in advance of that of the comparative month year ago when the total at that time was $10,-172.53.

The average weekly percentage of pupils depositing in the Canadian Penny Bank for Belleville and vicinity during the first two months of 1940 was slightly below average when only 39 per cent were registered.
